Many a field trip visitor is asked to pick up a rock from the fields, as we look at crops, the occasional weeds and examine the soil. We can see the rock walls of New England that were built, although better seen in the non-leafy season. These rocks were hauled and maneuvered out by the farmers and their oxen in the 1800s. Stonewalls marked borders and boundaries. Once removed, the tiller could more easily turn the soil. But as with the image of a big brother watching over our daily actions, the remaining large rock face and 40-foot high boulders that cut through the property will continue to dispense rocks of all shape and size. So build little borders and rock walls we will, as we continue to play Sisyphus and push them up the hill and out of the fields.

Water, water everywhere and still plenty to drink. The rain gauge runneth over as it collects and reports the humbling facts we already know. Our wet fields do not know what to do with the excess. Channel the water we must. We have cleared the drain and observed and heard the fast flowing, babbling brook. The ditches that border the field need clearing so as to better handle the overflow. Rain barrels need to be attached to every gutter, in hopes of dry, summer days ahead. The culvert that keeps the driveway clear is almost at capacity. When planting tomatoes, the mud that serves as the path in the wheel rows, is far too giving for our hand tools and needs to dry up fast so the indeterminate tomatoes, the joys of summer salads and BLTs (optional B for many) can climb and embrace the hot weather for which we yearn.

But the late spring, prodigal sun did return home this past weekend. More rocks will be collected when about 40 children a day visit the farm for summer programs and late school field trips, all in their knee high boots. The onions do love the moisture. And we will keep on farming and trying to host water, sun and soil and coax them all into helping organic plants rear their lovely heads, bloom their bouquet-worthy flowers and support perennial herbs, rhubarb and crops of all shapes and sizes. For this is New England, and this is sustainable farming at Holly Hill along the wonderful coast.

FOR THE RECORD

School's out, reading's in

While fostering strong readers is essential for the continued success of our business, both in print and online, it's a skill that can unlock many opportunities throughout a lifetime.

GREGORY MATHIS

Alice Cooper's "School's Out" might be blazing up the iTunes charts these days, but hopefully that doesn't mean students are about to shut down their minds for the summer by not opening a book... or many books.

With the school year either winding down or over, it's easy to shift into summer mode.

For many, that means parents have signed up children for summer camps and various activities to keep them active, engaged and out of trouble. As much as these camps are designed to keep the body in motion, a commitment to reading through a local summer reading program will keep the mind active.

It's important to instill the value of reading to our very youngest and do what we can to maintain that level of interest as our children grow.

Enrolling your child in the Collaborative Summer Library Program is one way to ensure they stick with an organized plan. The theme for this summer's statewide program is "Dig into Reading" for pre-kindergarten through grade six, and "Beneath the Surface" for grades seven-12.

While fostering strong readers is essential for the continued success of our business, both in print and online, it's a skill that can unlock many opportunities throughout a lifetime.

Despite the changing and challenging technological landscape butchering the written word through Tweets and Texting by emphasizing abbreviations and symbols, reading is a constant requirement no matter the platform.

The summer program through the local library is a solid investment in reading, but the commitment still has to start at home. Parents should set good examples for their children. Let them see you reading. Discuss what they're reading. Suggest some of your favorite books when you were their age. Keep it fun and educational at the same time.

I have many fond memories reading to my daughter and stepson when they were younger.

Dr. Seuss was a favorite and my personal favorite is "Fox in Socks." It's a real tongue twister and after many, many readings over the years to both of them, I feel I have mastered each and every line.

As my daughter got older, we moved on to chapter books and made it a point to read at least a chapter a night. I remember she wanted to go to bed earlier when we were reading "Charlotte's Web" so we could get more pages in before she had to go to sleep.

Now, my daughter and her husband are doing the same thing with their little girl. It's good to pass on that love of reading.

My love of reading most likely began with newspapers and my passion for sports.

But my interest in reading grew beyond the sports pages, as I got older.

I recall rummaging through a box of old books my parents had stored away and pulling out Dickens' "Great Expectations." I was about 12 years old and the Dickens' classic wasn't mandatory reading for an English class or a summer reading assignment. It was just something that piqued my interest.

Hopefully readers of all ages will find many good reasons to open a book and read this summer, whether it's required or not.

The bottom line is reading makes everything right.

CERT program set is for July 10

A Community Emergency Response Team Program overview and training discussion will take place at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, July 10, at the Emergency Operations Center in the basement of Deer Hill School, 208 Sohier St.

CERT Training covers basic skills that are important to know in a disaster when emergency services are not available. With training and practice and by working as a team, people will be able to do the greatest good for the greatest number after a disaster, while protecting oneself from becoming a victim.

CERT program can provide an effective first-response capability. Acting as individuals first, then later as members of teams, trained CERT volunteers can render basic emergency support services.

CERT Training is designed to prepare people to help themselves, their family and neighbors in the event of a catastrophic disaster. Because emergency services personnel will not be able to help everyone immediately, people can make a difference by using CERT Training to save lives and protect property.

COMPLAINT

The Mariner challenged their decision to discuss the Open Meeting Law complaint before the selectmen voted to go into executive session.

will be seeking a permanent Town Manager and Police Chief.

Therefore, it would seem as though the subject of who should lead the board would be worthy of public discussion.

The Mariner alleges the board decided on who should fill the chairman's seat among themselves away from the public eye between the election on May 11 and the first meeting of the new board that Tuesday (May 14).

The OML states, "Courts have held that the Open Meeting Law applies when members of a public body communicate in a manner that seeks to evade the application of the law. Thus, in some circumstances, communications between two members of a public body, when taken together with other communications, may be a deliberation."

Furthermore, even the expressing of an opinion on official business within the board's jurisdiction, such as who should be chairman to a majority of the board – even in an email – is considered deliberation even if none of the other members respond.

The selectmen planned to discuss the Mariner's OML complaint in an executive session during their Tuesday, June 18 meeting. Under the OML, boards can meet in closed sessions if the discussion pertains to pending litigation but an OML complaint is not "litigation" nor are the ramifications of a violation of the law.

The Mariner challenged their decision to discuss the OML complaint before the selectmen voted to go into executive session.

Selectman Steve Gaumer responded that litigation was "the natural course of the complaint." Koed agreed that the situation was potentially litigious.

Kennedy, however, said that the board would need to look at the OML exemptions because she agreed that the board could not go into executive to discuss something that could "eventually" lead to litigation.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said the board was convening in executive under the OML's exemption 3, echoing that the OML complaint "has potential litigation tied to it."

The Mariner received an email from Milanoski on Wednesday morning stating that the board posed the question to Town Counsel in a phone call, to which counsel responded this could not be discussed in executive and advised the board to discuss it in open session at a future meeting.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said in a phone call Wednesday that the selectmen called him around 11 p.m. Tuesday night when they entered into executive session. DeRensis said that he did advise the board to discuss the complaint in open session.

"I suggested they have a discussion of where to go forward in open session so the Mariner can see what's going on and not have any basis for concern," said DeRensis. The attorney said that he also offered to put on an OML presentation in July.

Koed reiterated this in an email to the Mariner on Wednesday and asked for a one-day extension to discuss the OML complaint, since the deadline to respond is June 26 (the town has 14 days to respond to an OML complaint from the date it was filed). The selectmen are meeting on Thursday, June 27 instead of Tuesday, June 25 because of the senate election.

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Selectmen awkwardly appointed officers

After no discussion during the May 14 selectmen meeting — other than a few procedural remarks — Fred Koed was appointed chairman and Diane Kennedy was reappointed as vice-chairman. Kennedy had called the meeting to order as vice-chair and called for a motion to appoint a new chair.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby moved Koed with Karen Quigley seconding. Steve Gaumer then further moved that Kennedy retain the position of vice-chair. Gjesteby interjected that according to Robert's Rules, the board needed to vote one position at a time.

Kennedy then asked if there was any discussion, but Gjesteby pointed out that there was already a motion on the floor. "You called for a vote," Gjesteby said.

"I just wanted to see if there was a discussion first," said Kennedy, "if anybody had anything to add."

After the confusion, Kennedy quipped, "Well, this is clearly why I probably shouldn't be chair then, huh?"

Kennedy then proceeded to call for a vote, but Quigley said that she would like to say something before turning to Gjesteby and asking if that was allowed.

Gjesteby responded, "Well...I guess you can, but it isn't necessary."

There was a pause before Quigley said to Kennedy, "Ok, let's go to a vote."

Kennedy asked, "Would you like to speak?"

"No, no, definitely not," said Quigley. "Not now."

Kennedy called for a vote again and each member voted "aye" for Koed. Koed, however, was inaudible, so Kennedy asked him to clarify if he voted for himself. He responded with an "aye." Kennedy then stood up from the center seat to allow Koed to take his place as chair.

"Let's switch seats, quick!" Kennedy joked. She and Koed then traded seats.

Meeting attendees laughed throughout the appointment process, making for an awkward atmosphere in the selectmen's office that evening.

TOWN MANAGER ACT

Bradley talks with GC

Bill is wending its way through legislative process

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

For supporters of Cohasset's revised Town Manager Act, there's good news and bad news. The good — the amended Act, with changes approved by Town Meeting in April, is now a bill with a docket number: H.3486. The House referred the bill to the committee on Municipalities and Regional Government on May 30; the Senate concurred on June 3.

The bad news? State Rep. Garrett Bradley thinks it could take until next spring for the bill to go through the legislative process — nearly a year after Town Meeting gave its stamp of approval.

"There is no doubt this will be law, it is just a matter of time," Bradley said in a telephone interview yesterday (Thursday).

March 2014 is the "worse case scenario" that Bradley presented to Cohasset's Governance Committee this Tuesday, the committee that labored for months identifying discrepancies between the Town Manager Act (TMA) and the town's bylaws, specifically in regards to the balance of power between the town manager and board of selectmen.

The revised TMA brings the town's governing documents into alignment while also removing a prohibition that keeps town employees and volunteers from applying for a permanent town manager position.

Cohasset is currently in the market for a permanent town manager. The Board of Selectmen voted in late May to begin the search process and voted on June 18 to hire the UMass Collins Center to help facilitate the search. In the meantime, Cohasset's Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's contract is up in December 2013.

The selectmen have indicated that they intend to honor the spirit of the revised Act with the town manager search underway, meaning that town employees or board members could be eligible. However, according to the town's current act, these folks would be barred from applying.

What happens with the TMA in the state legislature over the coming months could make the difference in who is an eligible candidate — this includes Milanoski, who, prior to his appointment as Acting Town Manager, served on two town boards.

Governance committee chair Christine Cunning said that while her board was hoping for good news on the TMA, it was helpful to hear Bradley's side of things.

"That was good to get a grasp on the reality, what's involved and how things move," said Cunning. "We appreciated getting that right from Garrett; that was helpful," adding that, however, the committee was "hoping it could move a little quicker."

Bradley assured the committee that he and Senator Robert Hedlund are "on top of doing whatever they can to keep it moving and not lagging for any reason," said Cunning.

The question was raised as to why the original TMA, which Town Meeting approved in March 1997, moved so quickly through the legislature that year — the bill became law that July, and Cohasset hired its first town manager.

Cunning speculated perhaps "it's a sign of the times."

Bradley said he tells all his communities that home rule petitions could take up to a year as a worst-case scenario, so they don't build any false hope because of the legislative process that is quite involved. "I don't see that happening here, but that is my standard answer."

"In my 13 years in the Legislature, I have never had a home rule petition not pass into law," he said. Bradley said he believes the Cohasset TMA could pass by January at the latest.

Bradley said he wished he could talk to former State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray who represented the Third Plymouth District when the Town Manager Act passed in 1997. Murray passed away in 2006.

Bradley said it is his sense that in 1997, the town through Murray asked the legislature to approve the TMA on an emergency basis as the town was changing its form of government.

"Neither (state Sen.) Bob Hedlund nor I have been informed that these changes, while they need to be done, should be done on an emergency basis."

Timeline: Town Manager Act

That was then...

March 29, 1997: Town Manager Act approved by Town Meeting.
May 29, 1997: TMA approved by House, onto the Senate the following week.
June 30, 1997: TMA signed by the Governor.
July 1, 1997: Ed McMann, interim Town Administrator, is sworn in as Acting Town Manager; 40 applied for the position.
August 4, 1997: Mark Haddad is sworn in as Town Manager; McMann steps down.

This is now...

April 22, 2013: Town Meeting approves the amended Town Manager Act.
May 8, 2013: Town sends TMA changes as a Home Rule Petition to the state legislature; the HRP is sent on to House counsel.
May 28, 2013: The bill is filed and given a docket number.
May 30, 2013: The House refers the bill to the committee on Municipalities and Regional Government.
June 3, 2013: The Senate concurs.
What's next? Waiting for the committee to give the bill a hearing date.

Selectmen to hire consultants for TM search

The Board of Selectmen voted 4-1 Tuesday to hire the UMass Collins Center to help facilitate the search for a permanent Town Manager. Selectman Steve Gaumer was the dissenting vote, stating that he would like to explore all options before hiring the center. Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said that she had reservations on the $14,000 cost to hire the consultants, but otherwise felt they were the best option. Both selectman Martha Gjesteby and selectmen chair Fred Koed said that in their years of experience in conducting searches, the services offered by the Collins Center are the best they have seen.

The funds are not readily available in the town budget to hire the center, however, so the money will have to come from a reserve fund transfer in fiscal year 2014. This is also how the town will fund the Police Chief search; the Advisory Committee approved a reserve fund transfer during a recent meeting but will not convene again until July, which is when the new fiscal year starts.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call from the week of June 10-14. There were no important roll calls in the Senate last week.

UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE (H 28)

House 152-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill updating many laws, known collectively as the Uniform Commercial Code, that govern commercial transactions in the Bay State. The code is routinely adopted by most states and is aimed at enabling firms doing business in multiple states to conform their practices to one set of uniform laws. That makes it easier and more appealing to businesses that otherwise would have to deal with a patchwork of different laws in each state. The last time the code was updated was 2001.

Supporters said that without updating the code, the state would become "business unfriendly" by having different commercial laws than most other states. They argued the result would put the state and businesses, both large and small, at risk of losing revenue.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

TAX BREAKS - The Revenue Committee held a hearing on legislation providing reimbursement to state workers or retirees who are same-sex married couples that under the federal Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) are ineligible for federal health insurance tax benefits enjoyed by opposite-sex married couples (H 2672). Other bills on the agenda included providing a tax credit for businesses that hire mentally ill or disabled people (S 1335) or veterans (S 1336); exempting all active-duty military personnel from paying the state income tax (H 2528); providing an income tax exemption of up to $15,000 for military personnel stationed outside the United States (S1326); and providing up to a $500 tax credit for persons over 55 who buy hearing aids (H 2736).

HIKE MINIMUM WAGE (S 878) - The Committee on Labor and Workforce Development held a jam-packed hearing on several bills including one that would raise the minimum hourly wage from $8 to $11 over three years. The wage would rise to $9 the first year, $10 the second year and $11 in year three. The measure also provides that once the wage reaches $11, it would be automatically raised annually to reflect increases in the Consumer Price Index. The most recent hike in the minimum wage was approved by the Legislature in July 2006, when it raised it from $6.75 to the current $8. Last year a similar bill raising the wage to $11 was shipped off to a study committee where it died.

Supporters testified that the hike would give Massachusetts workers the highest minimum wage in the nation and help thousands of low-wage earners. Opponents argued that the hike would result in higher prices that would be passed along to the consumer. They noted this would hurt many small businesses and efforts to stimulate job growth.

BAN STYROFOAM PACKAGING (H 2087) - The Public Health Committee heard testimony on a bill banning the commercial sale and use of any Styrofoam and other polystyrene containers. Styrofoam is the Dow Chemical Company's brand name of polystyrene. These containers are the familiar white plastic foam ones that supermarkets, and fast food and other restaurants use to package and serve food and drinks. Supporters testified that this material is not biodegradable and is bad for the environment. They also noted the hazardous chemical styrene leaches out of the mug and into the drink. Opponents said the ban goes too far. They argued that leaching is at very low levels that do not have any impact on our health.

Other bills on the committee's agenda include expanding to all restaurants the current law that requires restaurants with more than 25 seats to have on the premises a device to remove food lodged in persons' throats or an on-duty employee trained in a manual removal method (H 1890); prohibiting the use of latex gloves and products by all food handlers (S 1132); banning the use of artificial trans fats, also known as partially hydrogenated vegetable oils, in all restaurants (H 2007); requiring restaurants that offer a children's menu to provide at least one diaper-changing area on the premises (S 1043); banning sales of high-caffeine energy drinks to anyone under 18 (H 2040); and prohibiting state and local departments of public health from regulating the serving of food brought to potluck dinners sponsored by a group of individuals or nonprofit organization (H 1997). Supporters say some local boards of health have gone too far by attempting to regulate this time-honored harmless tradition. Opponents say there is real danger of diners getting an illness and noted people have been sick and even died from the food at these events.

PROGRESS

manage the finances. As a result they were scrambling to find money to balance the budget at the end of the year and the town was always late closing the books. This year the town will close its books on time and on budget. There will be no chaos and delay created by filing late.

• The Budget Planning Group — The Budget Planning Group working with the Town Manager and the Selectmen, has provided the framework for analyzing and negotiating a balanced budget. The Budget Planning Group brings together members of the School Committee, Advisory, Capital Budget and the heads of the town departments to produce the current year budget and a 5-year plan. Before the Budget Planning Committee was created in 2009, there was no way to coordinate the budgets across departments. The Budget Committee budget and forecast provides an analytical framework for determining the amount of cash available to be distributed among the various departments.

The Budget Planning Group's work has become one of the most important ways to make sure the town manages its expenditures to avoid a budget override. This year the Budget Planning Group working with the Town Manager negotiated a balanced budget and planned for a significant contribution to the Town's stabilization funds. It is the first time in more than 20 years that we have been able to maintain budget discipline and put a meaningful amount of money into the stabilization funds.

• The Water Commission — In 2010 the town held a Special Town Meeting to fund an unplanned deficit in the Water Department budget of approximately $700,000. The deficit was a result of lower demand for water, a water rate that did not cover the fixed cost of operating the water plant, poor accounting records and a very expensive operating contract for the management of the plant.

Amid the chaos, the new appointees to the Water Commission moved quickly to make changes. The changes have been implemented and have had a significant, positive impact on the Water Department operations. The commissioners rebid the operating contract, reviewed and revised plant operations and made significant upgrades to the capital infrastructure.

The result has been a complete financial and operational turnaround with a budget surplus for this fiscal year. The rebid of the operations contract alone saved water customers more than $250,000 in the first year. Next year the ratepayers may be looking at a decrease in water rates, the first rate decrease in decades.

• The Governance Committee — The Selectmen created the Governance Committee to review and recommend changes that the Selectmen could make to improve the governance of the town. The Selectmen were motivated by the desire to address some of the governance concerns that were raised by the Cat Dam dispute. The Governance Committee began its work in January of 2012.

The Committee first reviewed the process for putting together the annual budget. The committee compared Cohasset's budget planning process to other towns in Massachusetts who are considered to be the "benchmark" for how a budget should be put together. In the past, our budget planning process was haphazard and not well documented. The lack of a budget process resulted in poorly constructed budgets that were often late and often not reviewed and vetted before being presented to Annual Town Meeting for a vote.

The Governance Committee presented the budget process recommendations to the Selectmen who then approved the recommended changes. The recommendations were incorporated into the construction of the FY 2013 budget. For the first time in years, the budget planning process was clearly described and organized so that all of the participants understood their roles and had a schedule to work by.

The Governance Committee also reviewed and revised the Town Manager Act. This is the first review of the Act since it was passed in 1997. Thousands of hours of work went into the revision of the document. The goal was to remove the inconsistencies, fix typos and clarify the roles and responsibilities of Town officials. The Governance Committee spent hours researching governance issues and reviewing the document. Research included the reading of most of the South Shore towns' governance documents, meetings with state experts and local officials. The Governance Committee included much of the budget process guidelines into the Act. The Act will now be reviewed by the Massachusetts State Legislature and voted into law.

• The Town Manager and the Selectmen —The Selectmen and the Town Manager actively supported and participated in the formulation and implementation of the changes described in this article. From the implementation of the budget process to the management of the many changes to the finance department, the Town Manager and the Selectmen were there to make sure things got done. Change is a very difficult business and the Town Manager and the Selectmen made a few enemies pushing it, but the changes they advocated were always focused on improving transparency, accountability and financial stability.

Here a few of their many accomplishments this year:

• The management of the new budget process
• The successful management of the FY2013 operating budget so that there are no deficits to be funded out of free cash
• A review and the reorganization of Town Hall organizational chart
• The successful negotiation of 4 union contracts, without grievances
• The successful negotiation of the healthcare contract with significant savings
• Information Technology improvements in all of the town buildings
• A substantial upgrade and overhaul of the town computers
• A town debt refinancing that saved significantly on interest costs
• Good financial management throughout the year that resulted in a bond rating increase

In the end the many town employees, elected and appointed officials and town volunteers accomplished an unprecedented amount of work this year. We have made incredible progress towards providing the citizens a well managed and effective government. Let's acknowledge the progress and continue our efforts to accomplish more in fiscal year 2014.

Jack Keniley is the Chairman of the Capital Budget Committee and a member of the Governance Committee.

HAPPENING

Historical Society celebrates 85 years

The Cohasset Historical Society has been holding various events and fundraisers as a yearlong celebration of their 85th anniversary. The society's official birthday is July 16, 1928.

The next event is a fundraiser on Sunday, June 23. Showing that history buffs know how to have a good time, the party theme is Las Vegas.

The event takes place at the Atlantica restaurant from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. and features singing impressionist Joey Voices. "VIP" tickets cost $85 while general admission is $75 (members save $5 per person; there is also 10 percent off for tables of 10). Diners choose between a meal of chicken or salmon.

All proceeds from the event benefit the historical society, which is a 501c(3) nonprofit.

The society will also throw a birthday celebration for its 85th anniversary on Sunday, July 28 with an ice cream social from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Pratt Building. This event is free of charge.

The Cohasset Historical Society is located at 106 South Main Street, Cohasset, MA, 02025. For more information, visit online at cohassethistoricalsociety.org or call 781-383-1434.

SUMMER SPLASH

'Row the Distance' Campaign starts

Cohasset Maritime Institute kicks-off its 'Row the Distance' capital campaign tomorrow, Saturday, June 22, from 6 to 9 p.m. with the festive Summer Splash event at the home of Ed and Gwen Baldry on Cohasset Harbor. The event will include a live band, and silent and live auctions. Tickets are $75, including light fare and beverages.

The "Row the Distance" campaign goals are to purchase a new four and associated equipment for our growing ocean rowing programs for youth and adults and to provide more recreational and competitive rowing opportunities for both.

Come join CMI on Saturday for a fun-filled night on Cohasset Harbor at the Summer Splash! To purchase tickets, register, make a donation or simply find out more about CMI's rowing programs, visit: rowcmi.com. Questions? Email rowthedistance@comcast.net.

GIRLS LACROSSE

Skippers honored

The Cohasset girls lacrosse team wrapped up its 2013 spring season with some outstanding honors awarded to several team members.

Hope Kissick, Molly Fitzgerald, Kathryn Dunn, Mackenzie Axelson, and Megan Fitzgerald all made the South Shore League All-Star team.

Kristin Alexander was the recipient of the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters Scholarship and the Justin Langham Award, which is presented to the "Unsung Hero" of the team. Axelson won the first annual Coaches Award for her dedication to the team.

Kissick was also the first Cohasset girls' player selected to the EMass All Star team in seven years.

Alexander, Kylie Coffman, Dunn, and Axelson were selected to the US Lacrosse All-Academic team. A US Lacrosse All-Academic Team member is a player who exhibits exemplary lacrosse skills, good sportsmanship on the field, and represents high standards of academic achievement in the classroom. This player should also have left her mark beyond the lacrosse field and the classroom by making significant contributions of service to the school and/or community.

Congratulations to all of the players for their excellent achievements!

COLLEGE BASEBALL

Locals head back to Rox

Former Legion stars return to Brockton

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

They have played together from youth baseball to American Legion.

Rob McCunney, Brendan Doonan and Jordan Berry got the opportunity to play together again last year with Brockton Rox in the Futures Collegiate Baseball League of New England.

The three are back together again along with former legion teammate, Jamie Faber.

McCunney, who played his junior year at Fordham loves coming back and playing for the Rox.

"I am glad that they asked me back to play," said McCunney, who completed his junior year at Fordham. "It was a great opportunity and a lot of fun playing for them."

McCunney started at second base on opening night and for the last two innings he was moved to third base.

He had a big opening night for the Rox. McCunney blasted a three-run homer to break a 5-5 tie in the sixth inning to give Brockton an 8-5 win.

"The Nashua pitcher (Jeff Fisher) was throwing hard," said McCunney. "I just got a pitch that I could handle. I am just hoping that I can start a hot streak."

McCunney had a good season for the Rox last year. He finished with a .292 average with three home runs and 16 RBI in 23 games.

The Rox infielder wants to be able to play the whole season this year.

"My goal is to stay healthy for the entire season," said McCunney.

"We have a lot of good hitters on the team," said Rox manager Jud Thigpen, who was the Div. 2 National Player of the Year and led Delta State to the National Championship in 2004 before playing in the Colorado Rockies organization for three years. "I like the Baseball IQ of this team. Rob (McCunney) was one of our better hitters last year before he got hurt."

Doonan had the opportunity to do something special on opening night. The righthander was given the ball as the Rox opening day starter.

He pitched nearly five innings and allowed two earned runs, but did not get the decision in the game.

"It was good to start," said Doonan. "It was my first start ever. I just tried to stay calm and pound the zone. I felt pretty good doing it."

Doonan, in his first year with the Rox was used as a late inning reliever as he pitched 23 innings in 22 games with a 2-2 record and an 1.17 ERA.

In his two years at the University of Rhode Island, Doonan has been a short reliever for the Rams. The start for his was his first since his American Legion career with Cohasset.

Notre Dame Academy wins state title

By Jay N. Miller
For the Patriot Ledger

In their first time playing on the biggest stage, the Notre Dame Academy lacrosse team acted as if it were just another day at the office.

The Cougars brought home the school's first-ever lacrosse state championship Friday with a 13-10 defeat of Western Sectional champ Longmeadow in the Division 1 title game at Foley Stadium.

Junior Isabella O'Connor (Plymouth) scored four goals, and senior Alex Dalton (Needham) added three for NDA (24-2), which ended the season on a 16-game winning streak. Freshman Charlotte Allard (Cohasset) and sophomore Keeley MacAfee (Needham) each scored twice.

"It seems very surreal to me, still," Notre Dame coach Meredith Frank said. "I think I felt when I took over the program (for the 2011 season) that this was something we could accomplish, and these girls bought right into that. I give 100 percent of the credit to them.

"My philosophy for success is simple - you have to

POPPIN' OFF

A look inside the Superteams

WILL WASSERSUG

You may have noticed that in today's newspaper, you will see our spring sports Superteams.

As long as I have been at the Mariner, or if you are in Hingham, the Journal, we have been choosing Superteams with some interesting feedback.

This is why I am writing today - to fill in parents and coaches about the mystery surrounding the way these teams are built.

Every season, these teams, and in similar fashion, monthly Athlete of the Month selections can be found.

At least once per season, there is a phone call, or email from a parent, or coach complaining that their son/daughter/player was left off the list.

They'll say they're a league all-star, they work really hard, they're a great kid. Why are they only in the Best of the Rest instead of the first team, or why were they not on at all.

There have been parents ready to boycott the paper. Seriously, there have. There have been coaches who have asked about players, usually at the behest of parents.

Every time.

It may sound like I am complaining here, and maybe there is a bit of it, but I'd like to let people know how teams are selected.

It is simple.

With some sports, like track and field, we use the numbers.

The athlete who advanced the furthest, or posted the best time of the season generally gets the nod.

When it comes down to other sports, it can be numbers, either goals, assists, wins, strikeouts, ERA, defensive stops and even performances in games where our writers and editors have watched and been wowed - especially in head-to-head matches.

Choices are by no means scientific, and there is never, never a case where our little group of voters has a grudge against a player, parent or coach.

Our goal is to recognize great athletes with a shoutout in the newspaper. We truly work hard to get it right, and think of these teams as a fun way to do it. I love when someone tells me how thrilled they were to be on the team, or when a parent tells me that.

Still, we are not a college recruiting service - yes, there

TALKING GOLF

A great 19th hole is because of the patrons, the wait staff and the bartender and it is a place where good golf conversations drift from one table to another. PHOTO / CLIFFORD WILLY

SI got it wrong

Magazine doesn't have a clue

PAUL HARBER

There was an interesting article in Sports Illustrated's US Open preview last week concerning the best 19th holes.

Of course, we've had more experience and success at Hole No. 19 than the preceding 18 and we found SI's list disturbing.

In short, SI got it all wrong.

The list, which includes the Tavern at Granite Links in Quincy, is what you expect.

A few Scottish watering holes mixed with many from upscale American resorts from Florida to California.

Most of the usual suspects have high-powered public relation firms and, not so coincidentally, a few have purchased advertising space in such publications.

Sure, the included 19th holes have panoramic views, historic paraphernalia covering the walls and unique beverages available.

That's fine, but it isn't what makes a great 19th hole.

Sure, I like the Tavern at Granite Links.

I go there often, even when I don't tee it up on the former landfill.

It's a great place. No golf course in New England offers better views than Granite Links.

But it isn't a 19th hole.

Only a handful of patrons ever tee it up there.

Most, like my Thursday night poker buddy, Roger, go there because a group of local hairdressers frequent the bar after work and he is on the prowl. He doesn't know a lob wedge from a lobster.

Real 19th holes are all about the patrons, the wait staff and bartenders, and where great golf conversations drift from one table to the other and back.

One of the first golf clubs I ever joined, a wonderful nine-holer, had a terrific 19th hole (wait, can a nine-hole course have a 19th hole?)

And some of the patrons were right out of Caddyshack and just as loveable.

Especially, Creature, a mammoth 12-handicapper who had a booming voice and a bigger heart.

Late in the afternoon, when most were in their cups, he would organize a One Club Meet.

Everybody threw in $5 and four-man teams were organized, each taking only one club.

We'd stagger out and play the three holes nearest the clubhouse.

Afterward, we'd return to the 19th hole and all the money won was used to buy a round of drinks for the competitors. What fun it was.

Pembroke Country Club, another club where we were members, had a great 19th hole, a circular bar where conversations crossed over gin and tonics and low cal beer. Everybody bought drinks for everybody else and they'd be lined up on ice in front of them.

But you have to be careful. Pembroke police seemed to have a car parked out front every weekend night

Then, at another former club, was a member called Riley.

He always stayed late into the night.

But he had a plan. He was too smart to drive home impaired.

He'd call Triple-A and say his car wouldn't start.

When the tow truck arrived, he'd bribe the driver to tow his car home and he'd ride in the cab.

And then there was a time at the same club where two members got into a discussion about lawyers and that they'd do anything for money, if the price was right.

Of course, one was a lawyer and the non-lawyer proved the point by offering him $3,000 if he shaved his head.

The lawyer thought for a moment, smiled, and agreed.

He shaved his head.

It didn't matter to the lawyer that his daughter was getting married in a week and he had to walk down the aisle with a bald pate or that he'd be bald in her wedding photographs forever.

Sure, his wife didn't talk to him for a while.

But he had his $3,000.

For an upscale club, it has a lively membership.

Not long ago, during the four-day 90-degree heat wave, a 60-something golfer walked off the course because he didn't feel.

When he reached the clubhouse, he fainted.

An ambulance was called and he was taken away on a stretcher.

When his head cleared, he told the EMT, that he felt embarrassed, being taken out of the club like he was.

The EMT told him he shouldn't feel bad.

"We're been here several times before, usually late at night and they were all alcohol related," she said.

Oh well. Nineteenth holes are great. Just don't overstay your welcome.

GOLF NOTES

Couple of nice shots

Harmeling, USGA, Beach deserve kudos

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

It took three more holes than originally planned, but it didn't take away from the joy that Evan Harmeling who won the Massachusetts Open last week at Woodland.

"It's good."

Those words are music to the ear on the golf course during match play.

It is usually preceded by the phrase: "Nice shot, take it away."

This concession by a competitor means you did something right. It should never be uttered during stroke play. But during match play, it is magic.

It's all good, unlike today's sports page, which reads like a police blotter punctuated by sex and drug scandals.

To offset steroid scandals, paternity suites and that ilk, here are some 'it's good' tales:

To Evan Harmeling, who won the Massachusetts Open last week at Woodland Golf Club in Newton. After defeating Chris Fitzpatrick of Dedham Country & Polo Club in extra holes, he took his $15,000 winner's check – his first-ever victory since during professional in May – and donated the entire first place money to The One Fund to support the victims of the Boston Marathon bombings.

To the US Golf Assn., for holding the US Open at historic Merion Golf Club, site of Ben Hogan's famous 1-iron and where Bobby Jones completed the Grand Slam. Because of the limited size of the viewing area, the USGA cut ticket sales nearly in half. In all, it cost the USGA more than $10 million in potential revenue, according to the Bloomberg Report. No matter, it was worth it. And the USGA did another nice thing, holding a Champions Dinner, with some 24 former winners on hand. It made for a special photo opportunity. It's too bad Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player had previous commitments overseas and could not attend.

To Bob Beach, head pro at Braintree Golf Course, who offers a plethora of clinics for juniors and first-timers. And especially for reaching out to those with disabilities who would not ordinarily have the wonderful experience called golf. His four-week summer clinics for boys and girls ages 7 to 14 are reasonably priced ($40) and are held rain or shine.

Spitz gets Cup

Norwell native Ben Spitz went home from the State Open with a hunk of hardware, the Commonwealth Cup, which is awarded to the low amateur. Twice Spitz has been second low amateur at the State Open and was denied the title this time. Spitz finished with a score of 3-under par 213. He held off a charge by veteran Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich in Plymouth, who finished three strokes back at even par 216. Spitz will be cutting back his tournament play. His wife is pregnant with twins and due next month. At 29, he's had a fabulous career at Norwell High, University of Rhode Island and simply just teeing it up with his brothers David (a well-established amateur) and Brian, who is a teaching golf professional.

At last year's State Amateur, he talked to the MGA's Becky Blaeser about growing up in a golf happy house.

"It was always Dave and myself traveling to watch Brian play college tournaments," said Spitz. "My dad was into it and always wanted us to play. We started off at Rockland Golf Course. It was a par 3 course and they had a huge junior program and we went with our friends. They all dropped off over the years, and we kept with it." If they weren't playing at Rockland, they played in the course the brothers created in their Norwell backyard.

Meanwhile, Thorny Lea's John Hadges retains the lead of the Massachusetts Golf Association Player of the Year point leader after last week's State Open. But Clapp closed the gap by a few points with his second-place finish as low amateur at Woodland. Clapp, if anything is Bridesmaid of the Year. He finished second to Hadges in the Norfolk Country Classic in May and second to Hadges again at the Hornblower Memorial in early June at Plymouth CC. Next big point getter will be the Ouimet Tournamnet in July.

Sisk at US Open

Geoffrey Sisk was stunned when USGA officials asked him to go to the US Open Media Center last Wednesday and talk to reporters. He joined Tiger Woods, Ernie Els, Sergio Garcia and the rest of the marquee players in interview sessions. While most players talked about life on the Tour, Sisk talked about life off the Tour, spending last winter at home in Marshfield with his wife, Denise. "I'm a lot more fortunate than most that my wife does pretty well for a living," began Sisk. "It's afforded me the luxury of continuing, I wouldn't say so much the dream, but my job. Golf we know is very, very expensive. She's been willing to help raise the kids but allow me to continue playing. So far I've been doing OK. This past year was difficult, where I took the winter off, trying to figure some things out. I'm a year and a half away from turning 50. There's that opportunity for that Senior Tour, but it is just an opportunity. You still have to qualify for it. I wouldn't be exempt right into the Senior Tour, due to my career money, which is a little over a hundred thousand, I think, on the PGA Tour, but there's that opportunity and I'm not ready to stop yet." Playing with Cheng-Tsung Pan, 21, and MacKenzie Hughes, 22, Sisk was only 2-over his first nine, then things went awry. He finished 8-over and out of the hunt the first day. Can't blame him if he felt old. His two playing partners' ages didn't add up to his. "It's fun, I don't mind. I just get disappointed with my play. I've heard it a thousand times that Open courses fit my game. And I play like ——. Excuse my language," he told reporters afterward.

THIS WEEK'S SIGNATURE HOLE

The 15th Hole at Atlantic Country Club Plymouth, MA

Atlantic COUNTRY CLUB

PAR 4 | HCP 12 | 15 | YDS 373 / 350 / 330 / 250

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

GREAT SEASONS

A look back

The Cohasset boys lacrosse and girls tennis teams each had outstanding seasons. The boys got to Harvard and the Division 3 State Championship game, and the girls tennis team won the Div. 3 South Sectional Championship.

Here's a look back at some of the action.

work hard and these girls certainly did that. I truly did believe, with the athletes we had and the support from our administration, that we could do this. We have pushed our boundaries, and pushed our limits as far as we could, and what a way this is for our seniors to end their careers."

The game tied 4-4 after the first 13 minutes, before the Cougars put on a late surge to go into the half on top, 7-4. That margin grew when NDA pumped home three more goals in the first 2:38 of the second half for a 10-4 lead.

But from that point on the Lancers (22-2) began rallying, and junior star Kristina Schafer scored three of her team-high four goals as Longmeadow tried to catch up.

NDA had taken control of the game with its tenacity at winning faceoffs, which became even more critical as the second half wound down and the efficiency with which Schafer and her mates were scoring became apparent. For the second half, the Cougars won eight faceoffs to five for the Lancers, and four of those Longmeadow wins came via referees calling some NDA infraction on the draw.

Nonetheless, the Cougars stayed poised and focused on their mission. A timeout with 11:38 to play served to remind them to take their time with their possessions, since the clock was working against Longmeadow, which never got closer than four goals until its final tally with 2:41 left.

"During that timeout we talked about how we wanted to slow it down a bit, hold onto the ball, and maintain possession," Frank said. "The way they kept throwing the ball into the net in that second half, we didn't want to give them any more possessions than necessary. I think we did a good job of slowing them down, and a good job of just holding onto the ball."

That critical element of poise was never an issue, perhaps because the Cougars were tested so severely in getting to the title game.

"We've tried to stress that championship games like this are the most fun to play in," said Frank, who, in her playing days, won state titles at Westwood High and four NCAA crowns at Northwestern. "Hopefully our past experience this season in big games helped some of our nerves to go away. Playing against teams like Westwood, and now Longmeadow, is why we are where we are today – they pushed us to this level."

"I think we got a little bit nervous when they started coming back," said junior midfielder Mary Kensinger (Scituate), who snagged a crucial ground ball in her own end with 50 seconds to play. "But we kept our composure, and played our game. We've learned how to handle the pressure. It's true NDA has never been this far before, but this team's experience in tough games this year had to help us."

The 10-7 win over Westwood in the South Sectional final gave Notre Dame a world of confidence.

"We had to mentally and physically prepare ourselves to play Westwood," pointed out UConn-bound senior defender Julia Simmons (Milton). "That kind of experience was invaluable in getting ready for this game. Longmeadow was definitely a tough opponent, where everyone they have is a scoring threat. We had to be very conscious of our defensive slides, and pay attention to whoever had the ball, as well as who was cutting.

"Before that last timeout, when we had possession we had not been looking as much to execute and score," Simmons added. "But along with reminding us to hold onto it, Coach wanted us to make good decisions and run it up the field, and try to score if we could."

"In a game like this, against a team like Longmeadow, no lead is really safe," said Columbia-bound senior midfielder and captain Mariel Teague (Cohasset). "But we had gone over all sorts of scenarios in practice. Certainly, keeping possession was huge, especially at the end, but we wanted to play a careful game at all times.

"Our preparations for playing in games like this was endless," Teague added. "But having to play six playoff games to get here prepares you pretty well, too. Today was a matter of us being in the mind-set of, whatever they threw at us, we were going to come back and play better. We came in here determined not to be denied."

have been mentions about Junior being left off as damaging to his or her college career.

When choices are being made, it sometimes comes down to athletes in the same sport battling for one place in the list, which comes from Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth. There may be more.

Trying to choose first and Best of Rest team is a contrast in style.

How might a superstar in Divison 3 fare against a Division 1 or 2 player at the same position?

We try to figure that out. It is a fun challenge, and the answer is most definitely not just handing it to that Div. 1 athlete.

For any parents who wonder if a coach has been campaigning for a player or players to make the team, the answer is no.

They don't have to. Generally during the season, coaches have mentioned the stars, and the hard workers who may deserve a mention, but don't have the big numbers or name in the roundup every week.

We listen. If a coach tells us a player is the best in the area, we listen, and watch, and ask about players from opposing teams.

Any coach is free to contact us about someone they feel should be there. We welcome the input. I know I do.

There have been parents who have helped out in the past. They back up the numbers, and even point out opposing players.

Then there's Athlete of the Month.

This one can be truly random. There are so many fantastic athletes and performances that narrowing it down to one athlete, or even two can be a challenge.

Occasionally I'll ask for help from either a coach or athletic director, honor a team, and sometimes it may be the hardest working player out there.

The award isn't always a high school athlete either. You may find a Little Leaguer with three perfect games, or the adult who won a national title in a chosen sport.

Hopefully this rant of mine might help take some of the mystery out of the process.

If you are a parent or athlete and feel left out, you can contact us and we listen. It has happened that an athlete was left out and it was inadvertent.

Space available in youth tennis program

The Cohasset Recreation Department has been teaching tennis to the youngest generation since 1972. In fact, this year's tennis "pros" are alumni of this long-standing summer tradition. Sara Corry and Kylie Coffman, both 2013 graduates of Cohasset High School (CHS), will serve up instruction to kids ages 7-12 all summer long at the Bancroft Field tennis courts. Gabrielle Lemoine, a CHS Junior will also instruct. All three picked up their racquet at a very young age and look forward to sharing their love of the game with the kids.

Corry, who began taking lessons when she was eight years old, was the 2012/13 Captain of the Cohasset High School tennis team, which remained undefeated until the State semi-finals.

"I did the Rec. Program as a kid," recalls Corry. "It's so much fun to come full circle like this and to be able to teach, and hopefully inspire, the younger kids in the same way someone else did for me."

Coffman began playing at age 6 and is also a Cohasset Youth Tennis alumn.

"Tennis is a great sport that pushes you as an individual player but can also motivate you as part of the bigger team," says Coffman.

Youth Tennis is a seven-week program. Each participant will have two hours of instruction per week. Classes are kept small to provide as much individualized attention as possible. Corry and Coffman say that games like "Jail" and "Alligator" are fun ways for the kids to get the basics down.

"We'll teach them the different parts of the court; how to keep score; and basically set the foundations for them so that they know what to do and can take their skills farther if they decide they like it," says Corry.

Lemoine will teach at least one week of the Summer Program. She played competitively from age 10 to 12 before taking some years off and joining the High School team.

"Everyone can develop at their own pace with tennis," says Lemoine. "I also like it because it's relatively easy to pick up and you can play it for a lifetime."

The Youth Tennis Program runs from July 8th to August 16th, some classes are full so please check the website, cohassetrec.com for availability and registration.

At $89, the Director of the Recreation Department, Ted Carroll, is proud to point out that this Cohasset Summer Program is truly "one of the Town's best bargains...it's fun, no frills and simply teaches kids to enjoy the sport of tennis."

TOWN COUNSEL

DeRensis named to state board

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis signs the Book of Oaths in the Secretary of State's Office accepting the appointment on June 5. COURTESY PHOTO

"Your experience and sound judgment will contribute substantially to the Board."
Governor Deval Patrick

On May 20, Governor Deval Patrick appointed Paul DeRensis to serve as "Public Member" representing the public on the Board of Registration in Medicine, the agency that supervises and regulates the medical profession in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. This agency is under the Executive Office of Health and Human Services.

DeRensis is also Cohasset Town Counsel.

The medical profession is a key driver of the Massachusetts economy and of the Massachusetts quality of life, where this profession serves as a beacon not only to the Nation but to the world, attracting those who seek the superb medical resources of the Commonwealth from all around the world. These outstanding medical resources include great medical schools, leading medical practitioners, research institutes, and world-class hospitals and medical institutions.

Paul DeRensis is a municipal lawyer (graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School) eight times recognized as a "Superlawyer" in the municipalities/cities category, with long service as town counsel to various municipalities in the Commonwealth, and is a six -term Selectman: the laws and procedures that apply to his municipal boards are substantially similar to those that apply to state boards. "Your experience and sound judgment will contribute substantially to the Board," Governor Patrick states in his appointment letter of May 20.

DeRensis stated upon being sworn in on June 5, 2013 "as Public Member I intend to implement the Administration's vision, to contribute my legal and practical knowledge of government law and procedure, and to represent all the citizens of the Commonwealth to protect and enhance the quality and safety of the medical profession in the Commonwealth."

BRIEFLY

Scouts to sell flags June 22

Boy Scout Troop 110 will be at the Cohasset Transfer Station from 8 a.m. to noon, Saturday, June 22, where they will be selling cloth 60 inch by 33 inch American flags for $20.

All proceeds will go directly to the Boy Scouts to fund their trip to the National Jamboree this July and scout camp at Camp Squanto in Plymouth.

The scouts are also offering to retire old flags for free, so out with the old and in with new, just in time for Fourth of July.

Open House at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host a Community Open House from 1 to 5 p.m., on Saturday, June 29, at Buttonwood, 747 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Route 3A.

The festivity is to honor Betsey Detwiler who is retiring after 25 years of service to the community and in independent bookselling. The public is invited to celebrate Betsey's next chapter. Refreshments will be served.

Call Catherine Davis at Buttonwood, 781-383-2665, for more information.

Choosing poor-quality vinyl windows is a mistake.

Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Call before July 13th!

GIMME SHELTER

Siblings are cute as can be!

PAULA J. FATERSIK

These little ones are two of four kittens in a recent litter. Their sisters, Skye and Wendy, are also available.

This week, we have a sister and brother, Blue and Peter, who would love to be heading for a new, loving and safe forever home! These beautiful babies are new arrivals to the shelter and just so sweet and loving. Ready for play, activity, affection and attention, they will be a fun and lively addition to a home filled with tons of love and TLC.

Peter loves to play, play, play and Blue, being the little lady she is, lets him win but has her own inquisitive nature that makes her so entertaining to watch. She is right there at the end of a play session, cuddling up next to her tiger brother. They are both beautiful and handsome. Blue is a soft, grey, Russian Blue mix with many traits of the breed and Peter is a great looking little boy. Beautiful beige, chocolate and black markings make him a striking kitten. Lots of personality and playfulness make him an entertaining character.

These little ones are two of four kittens in a recent litter. Their sisters, Skye and Wendy, are also available. They are both jet black beauties and very active, playful and curious. Their mom, Tinkerbell, is a beautiful baby herself! She is only 7 months old, very petite, and has pretty tiger markings with big, beautiful eyes. Having a litter so early means she has had a bit to deal with. She will be spayed soon and ready for her forever home too. It is time for her to be a kitten again too!

There are other kittens and cats available and just waiting to be chosen for their true and forever home. It's not easy for them living in a shelter, but we are very lucky to have so many people who choose Hull Seaside as their destination when looking for a new family member. Thank you to all of you who support us in our effort to bring people and animals together to share a wonderful connection and relationship.

You can call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Blue and Peter as well as other kittens who are currently in foster with Hull Seaside.

Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue to see more of our kittens. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets.

If you are interested in spending time volunteering at Hull Seaside, please call Nancy, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-925-3638 for details. We are always looking for dedicated people who have a special connection and desire to work with our feline residents.

Petco Unleashed continues to be a wonderful supporter for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue. We are so happy to be able to set up in the store for visitors to see our available cats and view the photo board showing many wonderful residents who are ready for adoption. Board members and volunteers are sharing information and we are grateful for the opportunity to be on site at Petco.

As always, we are thankful for all of the donations received that help feed and keep our cats and kittens comfortable in the shelter. There is still a need for kitten foods, wet and dry, as we have more expectant moms who are now in foster homes and close to delivering their little ones. Keeping up with all of them makes for a very busy schedule and our foster parents are the best. Thank you to all of them!

COHASSET FARMERS MARKET

Features new logo, new additions

When browsing around the Market, look for the Market Table and the weekly drawing for a Cohasset Farmers Market Bag.

Whether you're looking for fresh farm produce, just picked flowers, prepared foods, homemade goodies and unique artisans' crafts, the warmth of the community at the Cohasset Farmers' Market awaits! Opening day 2013 was Thursday June 20th with new expanded hours from 2 to 6:30 p.m. until September 12th, and 6 p.m. closing through the last market day on October 17th. Due to popular demand, the organizers of the Market have lengthened the hours to accommodate commuting customers. Founded in 1996 by a core group of hearty Cohasset residents, the Market boasts a venue on historic Cohasset Common that is a true celebration of all things New England.

The Market boasts a stunning new logo by Keith Conforti, TWIST Creative Group, which captures the essence of the Common's heritage and tradition, a place that has provided a vibrant setting to community events since the founding of the town. Edible South Shore, a popular publication for those seeking local freshness and healthy food options has listed the Cohasset Farmers' Market in their most recent edition. Keeping up with modern times, the Market can also be found on Facebook and Twitter, with additional information located on an upgraded website compliments of Karen Quigley of Karen Quigley Design at: cohassetfarmersmarket.com .

For those wishing to weekly updates from the Farmers' Market with news of fresh-off-the-farm products, special events and entertainment, please contact Cindy Prentice, Director, Holly Hill Farm at cprenticehollyhill-farm@verizon.net.

When browsing around the Market, look for the Market Table and the weekly drawing for a Cohasset Farmers Market Bag. Any questions, comments or ideas that you have for the Market are always very much appreciated!

For years, market customers of all ages have enjoyed the offerings of the local farmers who bring fresh fruits, vegetables, herbs, cut flowers and plants. Local food-makers will feature jams, sauces, honey, breads, baked goodies and prepared food for a quick and healthy meal. Area craftsmen and artisans proudly display their handmade soaps, herbal goods, note paper, pottery, beach glass and stone artwork & jewelry. Face painting for the kids, balloons and featured animal events as well. All this, along with cooking demonstrations, special events, contests, and live music will make you wish that summer could last forever. Come enjoy the best of the season on the Common, Thursdays until mid-October, and take home a little sunshine!

Cohasset students recognized on Derby Day

Derby Academy celebrated its 222nd Derby Day Exercises on Friday, June 7, 2013. The 206th Derby Lecture from the pulpit of New North Church was given to students, faculty, trustees, parents and guests by the Rev. Tim Schenck, Rector of The Episcopal Parish of St. John the Evangelist in Hingham. During the Derby Day ceremonies, 45 members of the Class of 2013 were honored for their time at Derby Academy. Head of School Andrea Archer and President of the Board of Trustees Walter Sullivan '79 awarded and presented, respectively, diplomas to the members of the graduating class, including the following Cohasset residents: Daniel Evan Baldry, Kelsey Han Behenna, Jonathan Gerard Erach Desai, Olivia Villamil Gomez, Zachary Chase Herman, Julia Skye Herzfelder, Meredith Harwood Julian, Loring Roy Lauretti, Holly Cameron Maher, Elizabeth Hancock Mullaney, Abigael Joanne Osmanski, Eamon Joseph Osmanski, Camerin Alicia Rawson, Madelyn Nicole Schwandt and Madeline Tea Stavis.

Cohasset residents who earned Academic awards included:

• Olivia Gomez, grade eight, was awarded The Latin Prize and earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year. She served as part of the Color Guard during the Derby Day Procession, an honor given to the captains of the Spirit Teams at Derby Academy. Olivia was also honored with the Derby Academy Madam Derby Pin, given each year to the eighth grade girl who best typifies the Derby Spirit.

• Zachary Herman, grade eight, earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year.

• Julia Herzfelder, grade eight, was awarded the Martignetti Prize in Modern Languages for her study of Spanish, and the Zildjian Music Award. She also earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year.

• Meredith Julian, grade eight, was awarded the Coyle/Driscoll Art Prize and the Susan Feins Prize for Excellence in Science. She earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year. She was also named as a 2013 Derby Day Parade Marshall, an honor given to the two students with the highest grade point average in the graduating class. In this role, Meredith and her fellow Parade Marshall led the annual Derby Day Procession.

Eighth-graders Ashleigh Hogan of Duxbury, Lexi Donnellan of Hingham, Olivia Gomez of Cohasset, Meredith Julian of Cohasset, and John Ragone and Jack Metgzer, both of Hingham pose by the bell that they had just rung marking the start of Derby Day on June 7. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

• Loring Lauretti, grade eight was awarded the Wheelwright Family Prize in English and earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year.

• Elizabeth Mullaney, grade eight, earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year.

• Camerin Rawson, grade eight, earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year.

• Madeline Stavis, grade eight, earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year.

• Mary O'Donnell, grade seven, earned a Book Award for having earned an A- or better in all academic subjects for the entire year.

Congratulations to all students on their achievements this year.

GRIN AND BEAR IT: Send us your Boston Bruins pride photos

The big bad Bruins are back in the Stanley Cup Finals for the second time in just three years. Facing another "original six" team - the talented Chicago Blackhawks - makes this match up even more exciting for all who bleed black and gold.

We're asking you to show us your Bruins pride by sending in fan photos - from games, viewing parties or just sitting around in your Marchand jersey and rooting on the home team!

We'll post them to an online gallery on your Wicked Local website and publish them on the your news page of your weekly newspaper.

HOW TO SUBMIT: Log on to your Wicked Local website, click on the headline: "GRIN AND BEAR IT: Send us your Boston Bruins pride photos" and click the link that reads: "Send us your Boston Bruins pride photos"

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 1, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Before you adventurous Arians charge right into those new projects, take a little time to learn where you'll be going so you can avoid getting lost before you get there.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your time is devoted to career demands through much of the week. But Venus, who rules your sign, might be planning how (and with whom) you'll spend your weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be put off by the surprising turn in the way your project is developing. You've invested enough time in it to know how to make all the necessary adjustments.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The work week goes smoothly for the most part. But a weekend visit to a place in your past could hold surprises for your future, especially where romance is involved.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A sudden attack of shyness for the usually loquacious Lion could be a sign that deep down you're not sure enough about what (or whom) you had planned to talk up in public.

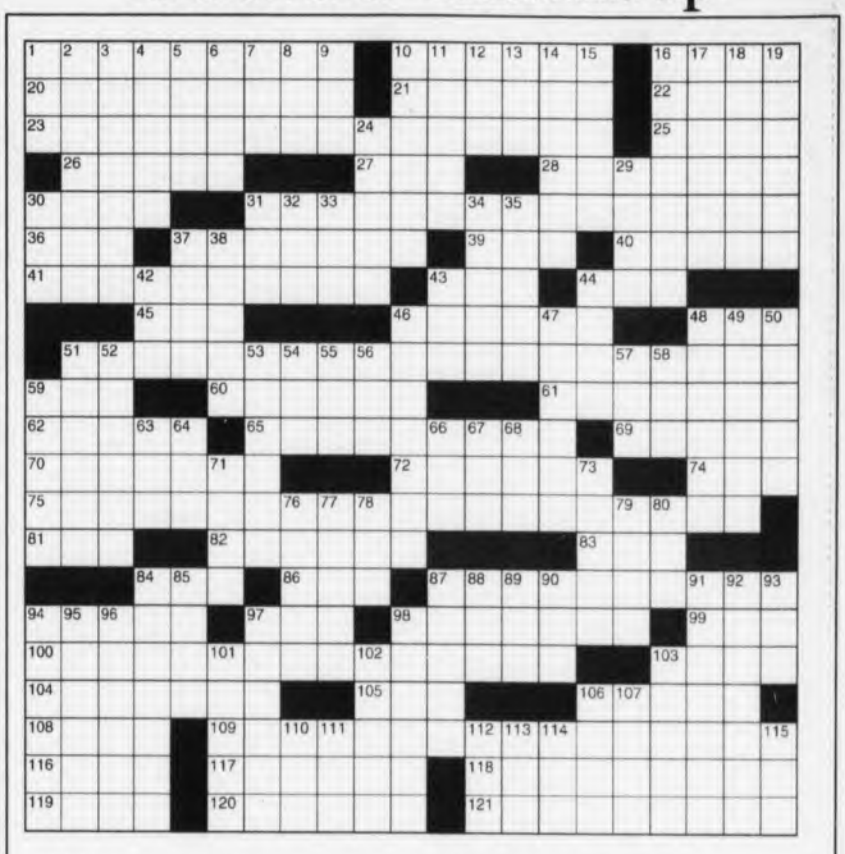
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Deal with that job-related problem on-site — that is, at the workplace. Avoid taking it home, where it can spoil those important personal plans you've made.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good time to let those favorable comments about your business dealings be known to those in a position to be helpful. Don't hide your light; let it shine.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Avoid added pressure to finish a project on deadline by steering clear of distractions. To put it somewhat poetically: Time for fun — when your tasks are done.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be uneasy about an offer from a longtime colleague. But before you reject it, study it. You might be surprised at what it actually contains.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Deal firmly with a difficult family matter. It's your strength they need right now. You can show your emotions when the situation begins to ease up.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recent dispute with some co-workers might not have been completely resolved. But other colleagues will be only too happy to offer support of your actions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Let go of that Piscean pride long enough to allow someone to help you with a surprising development. That could make it easier for you to adjust to the change.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Thelma E. Chase

COHASSET – Thelma "Elaine" Chase, of Cohasset, age 82, died peacefully at home, surrounded by family, on May 15, 2013, after a lengthy illness.

Born and educated in N. Hornell, NY, she was the wife of the late Robert T. Chase of Norwell. For many years, she was a devoted and loving companion to the late William T. (Sonny) Barnes of Cohasset. Together, they blended their families and raised four girls, Dama Ella Chase Dow of Cohasset, the late Alicia Chase Eicoff-Shadley of Abington, Vicky Barnes Williams of Cohasset and Judith Barnes Salvaggi of Braintree. She is also survived by her grandchildren, Christina M. Dow of Hull and Cohasset, Zack Eicoff of Hingham, John L. "JL" Williams and Garrett B. Williams, both of Cohasset, Laura Patnaude of Braintree, Chris Salvaggi of West Bridgewater and three great-grandchildren.

For many years, Elaine and Sonny spent the winter months traveling, from coast to coast, in their motor home. When not traveling, she enjoyed animals, all creatures great and small, gardening, chair caning, making braided rugs, and woodworking classes. She took great pride in her vegetable garden, especially her zucchini.

Before her declining health, Elaine worked in the cafeteria at Plymouth River School in Hingham, as well as at BJ's Wholesale Club in Weymouth. She very much enjoyed going to work and seeing her friends that she met at both jobs.

By her request, services will be private. In lieu of flowers, donations in Elaine's name can be made to South Shore VNA and Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Baystate Drive, Braintree, MA 02184.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Be careful putting objects in the passenger area of your car. In case of a crash, they become projectiles and can cause injuries to you or a passenger. Even smaller objects can cause serious injuries to children. It's always safer to store them in the trunk or in the case of a minivan or SUV, in the well behind the backseat. COURTESY PHOTO

Gomez wins Cohasset

But U.S. Rep. Edward Markey takes the state

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Nobody knew who I was outside of Cohasset, a couple of Little League baseball teams, and the amazing people I work with. But look at us now."
Gabriel Gomez

Gabriel Gomez might have lost the special Senate election, but he managed to win over his hometown and the South Shore where he won 54 percent of the vote.

Despite only five months of campaigning, Republican businessman Gomez, 47, who lives just yards away from Cohasset Town Hall on Highland Avenue, faced off against veteran Democratic Congressman Edward J. Markey. In his first statewide political race, Gomez managed to secure 46 percent of the vote.

"We were up literally against the whole Democratic party," Gomez said in his concession speech at the Seaport Hotel in Boston. "In the face of this adversity, we couldn't have fought a better fight, and I'm proud of what we did."

The election was called at 9:15 p.m. Tuesday with 90 percent of precincts reporting; Markey won 54 percent of the vote. Gomez said in his speech that he proved wrong those who said that a Republican would not stand a chance against a Democrat in Massachusetts.

Cohasset had a 48 percent voter turnout – versus only 27 percent of the state's total voters – and swung Republican, with 1,780 voters choosing Gomez and 1,029 picking Markey. This was a significant increase over the Senate primary turnout in Cohasset, which saw only 1,773 of Cohasset's 5,839 eligible voters casting their ballots. In Tuesday's election, 2,822 of the town's

Hot final week

School year ended June 27

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The sun is blazing, cars are jammed up on the way to the beach — summer has officially kicked off in Cohasset. It's the end of June, but school has been in session all month.

Due to unforeseen events over the past school year, including a fall hurricane (Sandy) and winter blizzard (Nemo) that knocked the power out in town, the Cohasset school district maximized its snow days. As a result, the last day of school was Thursday, June 27.

It's a later release than in recent years; the last day of the 2011-2012 school year was June 18.

Osgood elementary school Principal Robert LeCount, who has worked in the Cohasset district for 12 years total, noted, "It's been a long time since we've had a school year that has gone on until the 27th of June."

However, if the district had used up all its snow days last year, the 2011-2012 school year would have stretched on until June 25.

"Cohasset, I think, was in a unique situation this winter; we had the storm and lost the power," LeCount explained. "Not having the power, we couldn't run the schools, so we had to do the snow days even though if you looked out on the street it was fine. It was a different winter for us."

First time in the 'Tri'

Athletes anticipate their first Cohasset Triathlon

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Pass through Cohasset on any given day and you'll see them — rain or shine, bikers and runners racing through town, achieving personal fitness goals and putting healthy lifestyles on display. And, for some, training for the athletic contest of their lives.

Considering that those racing in the Cohasset Triathlon on Sunday, June 30 will compete against the likes of Olympian Gary Hall, Jr. and two of Sports Illustrated's fittest men of all time, Rick and Dick Hoyt (of Team Hoyt fame), it's no wonder athletes all over town are ramping up their fitness.

In its seventh year, the Cohasset Triathlon has become a staple summertime event. Looking at the suited-up athletes training all around town, one thing is for certain — either the triathlon has had a major effect on Cohasset residents, encouraging them to partake in a healthy lifestyle, or Cohasset just so happens to be a very athletic town.

Some triathletes, such as former U.S. Senate candidate Gabriel Gomez, who lives in town, have competed in the Cohasset tri every year since its inception. But many of the 1,000 athletes that will hit the waves and the road this weekend are doing the tri for the very first time.

The Mariner spoke with a handful of first-timers who live in town, and found that the athletes shared many commonalities.

Intoxications result in individuals taken into custody

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Intoxicated

An officer on patrol at 1:17 a.m. on Sunday (June 23) came upon two men, 41 and 46 years old from Cohasset and Dudley respectively, who were showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication, riding children's bicycles on S. Main Street near Spring Street.

The 46-year-old man fell off the bike he was riding and had a large bump on his hit his head, so the ambulance and another officer arrived. While they were trying to help the man who fell, the 41-year-old Cohasset man interfered with the officer and paramedic trying to assist him. Police took both men into protective custody and they were released to their wives at 3 a.m.

The first officer on the scene initially thought the two men had taken children's bikes to ride home but as it turned out, the bikes belonged to the children of the Cohasset man.

Protective custody

A 61-year-old Cohasset woman was taken into protective custody and held overnight at the police station after she became belligerent and tried to drive away after being refused service at a local establishment. No one saw the woman drive up but she was intoxicated and denied service at Dooley's on Depot Court. The manager called police when the woman tried to get into a parked 2003 VW Jetta and drive away.

The woman, who was highly intoxicated, became unruly with police. Her car was towed and she was transported to the station.

Cruiser struck

At 7:40 a.m. yesterday (June 27), a Cohasset police cruiser (2012 Tahoe) was rear-ended in traffic on Route 3A north by Stop & Shop. A Scituate man in a Ford F150 pickup truck crashed into the back of the police Tahoe, police said. There were no injuries reported on scene and no tows required, but both vehicles sustained damage and will have to be repaired.

The police officer was quite shaken-up and was subsequently taken to he hospital with non-life threatening injuries, Acting Chief William Quigley said. The driver of the F150 was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

Restraining order

A 35-year-old Mansfield man is facing several charges after he allegedly stabbed his 39-year-old Cohasset girlfriend in the hand during a disturbance on Saturday (June 22). The woman reported the incident to police on Sunday and said her boyfriend had thrown the knife at her that had stabbed her in the hand and driven off in her 2004 Chevrolet Tahoe. She was granted an emergency restraining order from an on-call judge, police said.

Cohasset contacted Mansfield Police who acted on their behalf and arrested the boyfriend. Cohasset sent officers to Mansfield to pick him up. He was arraigned Monday on charges of assault and battery; assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (knife); and using a motor vehicle without authority.

Hit pole

Police responded to a single-car accident on S. Main Street at 3:48 p.m. on Sunday (June 23), Police said the 75-year-old Duxbury woman driving a 2004 Toyota Highlander north on S. Main Street by St. Anthony's said she thought she had fallen asleep before striking a utility pole. There was minor damage to the pole but the Highlander appeared to be totaled and was towed. The Duxbury woman, who was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes.

Motorcycle

Police and fire responded to a motorcycle crash at the entrance to Stop & Shop on Saturday (June 22) around 8 p.m. Police said a 21-year-old Hull woman on a 2012 Suzuki motorcycle had misjudged the angle of the turn from Route 3A at the lights while making a left into Cohasset Plaza. She ran up onto the traffic island and fell off. The motorcycle had to be towed and she was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, police said.

Unlicensed

An officer conducting traffic enforcement on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) and Beechwood Street on Tuesday (June 18) around 1:31 p.m. observed a gray Ford Escape that was headed north on Route 3A go through the red light at the intersection. He pulled the car over near Pond Street. The 41-year-old man driving the vehicle did not have a driver's license and could only present a Brazilian passport even though he had been in the country for more than a year, police said. His car was towed and he is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and for the red light violation.

Unlicensed

A 41-year-old Abington woman is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation after the 2007 Jeep Cherokee she was driving struck a 2013 Ford, head-on, in the parking lot at Leo's Exxon on Thursday (June 20) around 9:30 a.m. Police said she came off Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) into the lot and hit the other vehicle, that was registered to a 51-year-old Pembroke man. The Jeep had to be towed; the Ford was drivable, police said.

Accident

At 9:51 p.m. on Friday (June 21), police responded to a two-vehicle accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) near the entrance to the Greenbush station. Police said a 1998 Toyota sedan, operated by an 81-year-old Weymouth woman, struck the right side of the camper, when car apparently tried to pass a 2008 Ford camper, operated by a 51-year-old Collierville, Tenn. man, on the right. There were no injuries and no tows. The 81-year-old was cited for marked lanes violation, police said.

Loading zones

Police are continuing to monitor the loading zones on Depot Court and ticket violators. Most of the problem involve motorists parking at the loading zone near Constitution Park by the Community Center on Mondays and Fridays between 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. when the zone is restricted for commercial deliveries. The loading zone near Mr. Dooley's is off limits to non-commercial vehicles 24/7.

The two loading zones are clearly marked with signage explaining the restrictions.

Police said if commercial vehicles are forced to park in the travel way on Depot Court, it creates a safety hazard for emergency vehicles trying to get through. The loading zones were created to give commercial vehicles a place to unload without blocking the street.

Erratic driver

Police responded to a report from a cell phone caller about an erratically operated GMC Equinox on Monday (June 17) around 5:15 p.m. on N. Main Street. The caller provided a description of the vehicle and direction of travel. An officer caught up with the vehicle in the village and the driver, a 63-year-old Scituate man, checked out, police said.

Not missing

Police responded to a 9-1-1 call from some crying children on Monday (June 17) around 6:30 p.m. As it turns out, the children's mother was outside checking the hose emptying water from the basement. The kids apparently could not locate their mother and thought she was missing.

Fraud averted

Twice over the past week, police have received calls from two different women who recognized telephone scams, quickly hung up and called police when the caller asked for their bank account information. In both cases the women, ages 84 and 76, respectively said the calls appeared to be from outside the country. The women did not provide any of their bank information to the caller. Police said these women did the right thing by hanging up and notifying them.

Dumpster

An establishment on King Street notified police on Saturday afternoon (June 22) after observing a man dump trash in their private dumpster. They provided a license pate and the 47-year-old Hull man was required to return and remove his trash.

Grounded

Police, fire and the harbormaster responded to a distress call from a small pleasure craft that was grounded on rocks off Sandy Beach on Saturday (June 22) around 1:30 p.m. Police said the boat was not in danger of sinking and the occupants all had life jackets.

Tires dumped

Papa Gino's at Cohasset Plaza complained to police on Saturday (June 22) that someone had dumped a large tractor tire, two small tires and a conveyor belt behind the restaurant.

Clippings

A Forest Avenue resident called police on Thursday afternoon (June 20) to complain that the landscapers her neighbor had hired were dumping grass clippings on her side of the property line. The police told the landscapers to stop and they did. The landscapers also picked up any of the debris they had put on her property, police said.

SENATE ELECTION

Markey moves from House to Senate

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

Throughout the U.S. Senate race, Democrat Ed Markey's opponent tried to turn his 37-year career in Congress into a liability, painting him as a part of dysfunction in Washington, D.C.

A solid majority of Massachusetts voters apparently disagreed Tuesday, adding at least 17 months to the veteran lawmaker's tenure on Capitol Hill. Markey carried 55 percent of the vote with 99 percent of precincts reporting, soundly defeating Republican Gabriel Gomez.

Markey will now complete the term former Sen. John Kerry left to become U.S. Secretary of State. Markey will not have long to rest from the campaign trail – his term ends in 2015, and if he hopes to win another one, he will have to run again next year.

In his victory speech at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston, Markey vowed to fight for everything from rebuilding roads to the economy to gun safety legislation to college affordability.

"I do not go to occupy a seat in the Senate," Markey said. "I go there to stand for you, to speak for you, to seek change that lifts up your families and your future."

During the campaign, he said voters shared their hopes and dreams as well as their frustrations with Washington gridlock.

"I am tired of gridlock, but I will never compromise on our principles," Markey told the crowd shortly before blue, red and white confetti began flying.

In a concession speech, Gomez said he would not make excuses for his defeat, but noted that Markey's campaign massively outspent his. One thing he learned in the military, he said, is that "not every fight is a fair fight."

"In the face of this great adversity, we could not have fought a better fight and I could not be more proud of what we did," Gomez said.

The results came as little surprise to political observers. Maurice "Mo" Cunningham, an associate political science professor at UMass-Boston, said both candidates left much to be desired in the races they ran.

"In this state, a generic Democrat defeats a generic Republican, and that's what we got," he said.

Cunningham called the race "a triumph of centralized money," noting the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee lined up behind Markey early on. Markey raised and spent more than three times as much as Gomez.

Peter Ubertaccio, a political analyst and director of the Martin Institute at Stonehill College in Easton, said results mirrored a divide seen in other recent elections. Gomez fared well on the South Shore, Cape Cod, parts of the North Shore and Worcester County, while Markey crushed him elsewhere, Ubertaccio said.

"Until Republicans can start to make in-roads in Greater Boston area in particular, they're going to continue to see themselves shut out of statewide office," he said.

Many town and city clerks, as well as Secretary of State William Galvin, predicted meager turnout, thanks to a combination of voter apathy about the race and a heat wave that might have discouraged some voters from venturing out.

Galvin predicted just 37 percent of voters would show up at the polls. Initial results suggested turnout was even lower than that.

The battle to fill Kerry's former Senate seat lasted just six months. Kerry stepped down in January. Markey defeated fellow U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch in an April 30 primary election. Gomez, a political newcomer, emerged a surprise winner in the primary after a three-way race with former U.S. Attorney Michael Sullivan and state Rep. Dan Winslow, R-Norfolk.

A former private equity investor, one-time Navy SEAL and son of Colombian immigrants, Gomez sought to cast Markey as an out-of-touch political insider. Gomez, who lives in Cohasset, portrayed himself as an independent thinker who would buck Republican orthodoxy and shake up Washington.

"Until Republicans can start to make in-roads in Greater Boston area in particular, they're going to continue to see themselves shut out of statewide office."
Peter Ubertaccio, political analyst

Markey, a Malden native, sought to tie Gomez to Republican policies generally unpopular in Massachusetts, such as his opposition to a federal assault weapons ban and willingness to vote to appoint an anti-abortion justice to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Markey also cast himself as a legislative leader on telecommunications, energy and the environment and a longtime advocate for the state.

Republicans hoped for an upset like Scott Brown's 2010 defeat of Democrat Martha Coakley for Senate, but Cunningham said that was likely a result of unusual circumstances that have since diminished – a terrible economy and President Barack Obama's unpopularity.

Ubertaccio said Massachusetts voters have proven willing to send Republicans to the State House, but they are more wary of electing them to Congress. That leaves GOP candidates running not just against their opponents, but distancing themselves from their national party.

"It's just hard to run for office when you have to run against your own party at the same time," Ubertaccio said.

GOMEZ

5,872 eligible voters lined up at the polls.

During his speech, Gomez gave a nod to the town he calls home.

"Throughout this campaign I was humbled by thousands of people I've met," said Gomez. "We can be proud of we accomplished, literally starting from scratch five months ago.

"Nobody knew who I was outside of Cohasset, a couple of Little League baseball teams, and the amazing people I work with," the now former Senate candidate said. "But look at us now."

So what's next for Gomez? Gomez could not be reached for comment.

But there is speculation that the businessman and former Navy SEAL could return to private life or vie for the Senate seat again when the unexpired term Markey is filling is up in 2015. Another election will be held in late 2014.

Republicans will also compete for the offices of governor and lieutenant governor. Governor Deval Patrick, whose term is up in January 2015, has said he is not interested in seeking another four-year term.

Ray Kasperowicz, chair of Cohasset's Republican Committee, said that he appreciated Gomez's effort and would be happy to support him a second time around, should he choose to run again.

"I think Gabriel worked very hard, put out an 'A-1' effort. We all appreciate what he did; he put up a good fight and obviously did well in Cohasset," said Kasperowicz. "I hope he and his family had a good time on the campaign, and I'm sure they expanded friendships around the country."

Having gotten "out there" will help Gomez if he campaigns again in the future, the Republican committee chair added.

"He does have those contacts, and I would say that's probably a strong possibility," that Gomez could give it another go, said Kasperowicz. "If he's interested in doing it again, we'd be happy to support him."

Kevin R. McCarthy, past chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, said that no matter where one stands on the political issues, all in Cohasset can take pride in the hard fought effort Gomez made for the vacant U.S Senate seat.

"We are indeed fortunate to have had and to still have the public service of Gabriel and his family in our town. He did us all proud," McCarthy said. "That said, as a Democrat, I and I know all Democrats are especially proud to send Ed Markey to the U.S. Senate from Massachusetts. His vast experience in Washington and his proven lifelong compassionate dedication to public service will benefit all residents of Massachusetts as we continue to navigate through rather rough and challenging political waters."

Then senate candidate Gabriel Gomez is interviewed on the run by Globe reporter Joshua Miller during his three-mile run from the Scituate VFW hall to the Cohasset Legion Hall during a campaign stop on Thursday (June 20). For more photos, see page 23. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Current Cohasset DTC chairman John C. Chapman said the DTC was pleased with the support that Cohasset gave to Senator-elect Markey.

"The results in other towns like Cohasset suggest that while the hometown effect may have boosted turnout it didn't much influence how people voted," he said. "The issues are what mattered."

Other area towns that came out big for Gomez were Hingham (3316 to Markey's 2693 votes); Hanover (2063 to 982); Norwell (1643-980); Scituate (2898-2077); Marshfield (3258-2134), Duxbury (2248-1424), Pembroke (2093-1163), and Weymouth (5503-4518).

SCHOOL

Cohasset High School seniors wrapped up their school year on May 24, over a month ahead of the rest of the student body. Graduation was held on Saturday, June 8 at the South Shore Music Circus.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo explained that she and the School Committee discussed options for the school calendar, considering canceling April vacation or having a half-day on Good Friday instead of a full day off, that would have ended the school year a little sooner. However, when parents were surveyed they did not have an appetite for these changes, according to Cataldo.

Certain state requirements must also be met before the school year can officially close, said Cataldo. Students must attend school for 180 days. The state also requires that all schools must be closed by June 30. Cohasset schools must be officially closed on June 28.

"We're cutting it close," said Cataldo, adding that Scituate got out on the same day. Marshfield schools broke a week earlier but will start earlier – in August – as a result.

She acknowledged that with the heat wave hitting the Boston area this past week, the school buildings – not to mention the staff and students – have been sweltering.

LeCount joked, "Somebody turned up the heat!"

"The kids are hot," said Cataldo. "We're having a hot streaked we never guessed."

Mary Fran Olson of the PSO said that she's been sending her three children – who are in first, fourth and sixth grade – to school with frozen water bottles each day.

Olson has been vocal about her wish for a new and improved school calendar.

"A lot of schools around the state are starting to look at needing two spring vacations," said Olson. Students have time off around Easter in March as well as April vacation.

Olson added that if some changes were made to the calendar, "it really wouldn't be that hard to get us to a first week of June end date... If you look at January through February, the kids are barely in school."

The PSO member added that she is concerned that her children are "done learning" with summer in full swing, and also that they are missing out on recreational activities.

"We lost a week of rec. club and sailing club," said Olson. "In Cohasset, we live for the summer and to lose those days" is disappointing. "To change that," she added, "we have to take a serious look at the calendar."

The next two school years have similar release dates. The 2013-2014 year is scheduled to wrap on June 18, while 2014-2015 ends June 17, barring no snow days.

Despite the late release this year, Olson said that as a parent, she has nothing to complain about as far as Cohasset schools are concerned.

"We're so lucky we have such a fantastic school system," said Olson. "The kids get a phenomenal education."

"Not having the power, we couldn't run the schools, so we had to do the snow days even though if you looked out on the street it was fine. It was a different winter for us."
Osgood Principal Robert LeCount

Cataldo, who is wrapping up her second school year as Superintendent, echoed the sentiment.

"I'm grateful to this district. I think it's a wonderful district; they embrace the schools; the students come to school ready to learn. It's a unique opportunity for kids because of the size of Cohasset," said Cataldo, adding that the district's small size allows the schools to connect with families in a way "you can't see anywhere else."

Despite the summer heat and winter hardships, LeCount said he is looking back on the past school year – his first as Osgood principal (LeCount was the adjustment counselor for 11 years) – in a positive light.

"The school year has gone well," LeCount said. "It was an extended year because of the storms but it's been a wonderful year. It's wonderful to be back at the Osgood school, a challenge because in a different role, but nonetheless enjoyable because this is a special place."

The first day of school for Cohasset students is Tuesday, Sept. 3, the day after Labor Day. Teachers have a two-month reprieve, returning on August 28 before enjoying a four-day weekend before students are back in class.

New baby and more great news to report!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Baby girl

Tom and Dawn (Meehan) Pologruto's new baby girl, Josephine Mary Pologruto, was born on Monday, June 17 in Huntington, New York. She weighed 9 pounds 5 ounces and measured 21 inches long. Big brothers John and Thomas are happy to welcome their baby sister home! Dawn grew up in Cohasset. Proud grandmother is Barbara Meehan.

Yard sale!

Don't miss the yard sale at Beechwood Congregational Church on Saturday, June 29 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The proceeds will benefit the Ground Level Coffee House held at the church, on Church Street for teens and 20s. The next coffee house will take place on Friday, July 5.

Special gift

Jillian Perrone, age 10, of Cohasset donated 8 inches of her hair to Pantene Beautiful Lengths. Susan from Rudolph Adamo cut her hair pro bono and it is being sent to Pantene that uses hair to make wigs for patients, who have lost their hair due to cancer treatments.

Thanks to Rudolph Adamo, Jillian, and Pantene for helping to make wigs for those who need them!

Trip to France

Tanner Gildea of Cohasset, a junior at Boston College High School, recently participated in BC High's Summer Immersion Program in Lyon, France.

Tanner spent three weeks living with a French family, taking classes at Centre Saint Marc, the Jesuit High School of Lyon and learning of the city's rich history which dates back to antiquity. Among the sites Tanner visited were the Roman Amphitheatre, the Gallo Roman and Fine Arts Museums and the Basilica of Fourvière. The trip culminated with a three-day excursion to Paris where Tanner toured such historical monuments as the Eiffel Tower, the Louvre, Notre Dame and the Chateau of Versailles.

The French Summer Institute is part of Boston College High School's Global Education Program, which also includes programs in Argentina, China and Ireland.

Nichols College

The Office of the Registrar at Nichols College in Dudley, has announced the dean's list for the spring semester of 2013. Congratulations to Jake Wheelwright, a member of the class of 2013 from Cohasset, who achieved dean's high honors.

The dean's list gives recognition to those students who achieve high grades during a single semester. In order to be included in the dean's list, a student must maintain a minimum grade point average of 3.2 for at least 12 credit-hours and receive no grade below a C+ during the semester. A student who earns a grade point average of 3.6 or higher is awarded dean's high honors.

Wake Forest

Hats off to Ryan Daly of Cohasset who graduated from Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Stonehill College

Stonehill College recently named Cohasset resident Samantha A. Sears, a member of the Class of 2014, to its dean's list for the Spring 2013 semester.

To qualify for the dean's list at Stonehill, students must have a semester grade point average of 3.50 or better and must have completed successfully all courses for which they were registered.

Providence College

Kerry McCabe, a resident of Cohasset, and a member of the class of 2015, has been named to the dean's list at Providence College for the spring 2013 semester. To qualify for the dean's list, students must achieve at least a 3.55 grade point average with a minimum of 12 credits.

Saint Michael's

Ian M. Lyster, son of Natalie and Stephen Brandt of Cohasset was named to the dean's list for the spring 2013 semester at Saint Michael's College. Lyster is a senior environmental studies major at the liberal arts and sciences, residential Catholic college located in Burlington, Vt.

Students who complete a minimum of 12 credits and achieve a grade point average of at least 3.4 at the end of a semester are recognized for their scholarship by inclusion on the dean's list.

Lyster graduated from Cohasset Junior-Senior High School before coming to Saint Michael's.

Connecticut College

Victoria Wade, a member of the class of 2015 at Connecticut College and a resident of Cohasset, has been named to the dean's honors list for the 2013 spring semester.

At Connecticut College, dean's honors is a recognition for students who have earned a grade point average of at least 3.65, and dean's high honors is a recognition for students who have earned a grade point average of at least 3.78.

Colby College

Kate L. O'Callaghan of Cohasset was one of 502 seniors who graduated from Colby College on May 26, receiving a bachelor of arts degree at the college's bicentennial-year commencement in Waterville, Maine. Kate, the daughter of Harold and Catherine O'Callaghan of Cohasset, majored in human development (independent major). She is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School.

UNH

The following Cohasset students have been named to the dean's list at the University of New Hampshire for the spring semester of the 2012-2013 academic year.

Amy Costa earned honors; Nicole Hajjar earned high honors; Amy Meikleham earned high honors; Timothy O'Leary earned Honors

Students named to the dean's list at the University of New Hampshire are students who have earned recognition through their superior scholastic performance. Highest honors are awarded to students who earn a semester grade point average of 3.85 or better out of a possible 4.0. Students with a 3.65 to 3.84 average are awarded high honors and students whose grade point average is 3.5 through 3.64 are awarded honors.

Pomfret School

Grace Keenan of Cohasset has been named to the high honor roll for the spring term at Pomfret School. A student earns high honors with a 3.5 average and no grade below a "B-." Grace is a member of the Pomfret class of 2015.

DVDs

DVD's of the 2013 CHS Senior Pre Prom Red Carpet Gala from May 24th 2013 are available to purchase for $20 each. Also DVD's of the 2013 CHS Graduation from June 8th 2013 are available to purchase for $20.00 each. To order a copy please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197(cell) or email your request to galvin_shaun@yahoo.com Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20 per DVD to Shaun Galvin P.O. Box 526 Hingham, MA 02043.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

THE BEST IN TOWN AND THE BEST AROUND!

GIMME SHELTER

Tinkerbell has cat-titude!

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Oh my, what a sweet and petite little girl we have to introduce this week! Her name is Tinkerbell and she is anxious to sprinkle some twinkling pixie dust on a special someone to be her person, or family, who will bring her to a loving forever home. Believe it or not, this tiny feline just had a litter of four and she is just a kitten herself! At just 7 months old, Tinkerbell deserves the fun and excitement of a baby cat just as much as her kids.

Her features are quite beautiful. With beige, cocoa and black, tiger fur, a small and slender body and big, wide-open eyes, she draws you in right away. No, she does not wear little green slippers, but has four sweet paws that need some fun and exercise in a real home. Attention? She really wants it. Playtime? Tinkerbell needs it. She can be all kitten and after all she has gone through, love, reassurance and a safe home are what we are hoping she finds very soon. It is always hard to see such young cats robbed of their childhood and also a reminder of how important it is to spay and neuter pets.

Tinkerbell's namesake was so tiny that she could hold only one feeling at a time, but we think that this kitty will be bringing lots of personality and joyful antics all wrapped up together when she moves into her new home. She may be slight in size but will no doubt have a full pocket of delightful cat-titude.

You can call Judy at 781-534-4902 for more information on Tinkerbell as well as other kittens and cats who are currently in the shelter and in foster care with Hull Seaside.

Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information on all of our wonderful cats. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Visit our Facebook page for updates, stories, helpful links and pet care information.

If you are interested in spending time volunteering at Hull Seaside, please call Nancy, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-925-3638 for details. We are always looking for dedicated people who have a special connection with cats and the desire to work with our feline residents.

As always, we are thankful for all of the donations received that help feed and keep our cats and kittens comfortable in the shelter. There is still a need for kitten foods, wet and dry, as we have more expectant moms who are coming in to our foster homes and close to delivering their little ones. Just this week there was a new arrival so thank you to all who are helping us. Keeping up with all of them makes for a very busy schedule and our foster parents are the best. Thank you to all of them!

Donations of fresh bedding and towels are appreciated as we continue to take in more young cats and try to provide a clean and comfortable temporary home. Laundry detergent and cleaning supplies are appreciated as well. Please visit our website at www.hsar.org to check our wish list. We are an all volunteer shelter and depend solely on donations from our supporters. We are grateful for all of your help.

Paula J. Fatersik is a volunteer and feature writer for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

ENGAGEMENT

Myers – Riley

Mr. and Mrs. William Ankiewicz of Tewksbury, announce the engagement of their daughter, Lauren Theresa Myers, to Brian Richard Riley, Esq., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Riley of Cohasset.

The bride-to-be, a graduate of Everett High School, and a 2007 graduate of the University of Massachusetts School of Nursing, is a medical intensive care unit nurse at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

Lauren's fiancé, Brian, graduated from Cohasset High School, Providence College, Class of 2000, and Suffolk Law School, Boston. He is an in-house counsel at Iron Mountain, Boston. Brian was recently admitted to the Bar of the United States Supreme Court.

A May, 2014 wedding is planned.

Cohasset Historical Society museums open

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Refinance your car loan!

FIXED RATES AS LOW AS

1.69%* APR

FOR UP TO 63 MONTHS

Are you paying too much for your car loan?

Start saving now! Find out how much you can save and how you can pay your loan off quicker. Visit your nearest Crescent branch or call 508-559-5409. For your convenience, we can even take your application over the phone! Or apply online at www.crescentcredit.org.

*Offer applies to non-Crescent Credit Union loans. Refinance cannot exceed 100% of the book value of the car, pay-off amount, or 100% of the NADA value. APR (Annual Percentage Rate) as of 04/18/13 is based on automatic payment from a Crescent checking account. APR is for 2009-2013 models with a 63-month term. Without automatic payments rate is 0.25% higher. For 1.69% APR, maximum LTV (loan to value) is 100%. For 63 monthly payments at 1.69% APR the repayment amount would be $16.60 per $1,000. Other rates and terms available based on model year. Offer may be withdrawn at any time. Subject to credit approval. Membership eligibility requirements apply. Anyone who lives or works in Plymouth, Bristol, Norfolk or Barnstable counties in Massachusetts can join Crescent Credit Union. A $5 deposit to a Crescent Credit Union checking or savings account will establish membership.

Check out these great rates:

Model Year	Term	APR* (as low as)
2009 - 2013	63 months	1.69%
2008	63 months	2.49%

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

2013 Launch Party July 6

The Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) is hosting its annual launch party Saturday, July 6. All adult members and friends of the CSC are cordially invited — past members are especially welcome, as are parents whose children will be eligible for lessons in upcoming seasons.

There is much to celebrate this year, as the fundraising campaign for the new clubhouse has advanced enough that the club expects to break ground on the new building once the 2013 sailing season concludes. The launch party's silent auction is the CSC's main fundraising event, and this year all proceeds will go towards the new building fund. We are still seeking auction items, and no gift is too big or too small. If you wish to donate an auction item, e-mail Deb Johnson at debjoh2000@yahoo.com.

The festivities will take place at the clubhouse from 6 to 11 p.m. Dinner, a lobster and BBQ chicken feast, will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. BYOB. Tickets are $50 per person. Contact Linda O'Brien at 781-383-2234 for dinner tickets through June 30. You may get tickets at the CSC starting July 1. There is no charge to come socialize and bid on the auction items.

Yoga on the Farm

Join yoga instructor and certified holistic health coach Linda Storm for outdoor yoga at Holly Hill Farm Saturday mornings from 8 to 9 a.m. through Aug. 31 (no class on July 6). Bring a mat and enjoy an hour of gentle Vinyasa style yoga, moving with the breath. All levels are welcome. There is an indoor space available if the weather does not permit outdoor yoga. Fee is $12 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $15 for non-members. Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

For more information about the farm and the nonprofit education center, the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

HAPPENING

Ground Level Coffeehouse

Cohasset's Ground Level Coffeehouse is hosting another night of good music, good community, and really good coffee on Friday, July 5 at Beechwood Congregational, 51 Church St..

The fun starts at 7 p.m. with an open mic night. Embracing the Independence Day theme, attendees can enjoy hot dogs, red, white and blue smoothies and, of course, a selection of coffee and tea.

Stick around to hear the sounds Joe Weydt of the Weydt, featured performer of the night.

THE HEART OF ART:

Osgood teacher Ogden retiring after 19 years

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"May you build a ladder to the stars and climb on every rung. May you stay forever young."

The words are Bob Dylan's, but they fit Osgood art teacher Betsy Ogden to a 't.'

After 19 years of teaching art to kindergarten, first and second grade students in Cohasset, Ogden is retiring. Thursday, June 27 was the last day of school and Ogden's last day of teaching.

Last week, as she reflected on her nearly two decades of teaching in Cohasset, Ogden grew emotional. The realization that she was leaving had not quite sunk in until then, she said.

"You know it's funny, I'm just talking about it now," she admitted, teary-eyed.

The longtime art teacher explained that she has instead focused on the projects she's been doing with the kids, including clay pot centerpieces for an upcoming senior citizen luncheon. Ogden's projects often involve students giving back to the community, such as crafting cards for veterans for holidays. The kids recently completed red, white and blue fish-themed cards to mail to Brockton veterans for the 4th of July.

Her favorite lessons over the years include colorful clay friendship necklaces and "Random Acts of Kindness" books that the students wrote about "the good deeds they were doing."

Children enjoy the hands-on learning they get in the art room, said Ogden.

"We have lots of fun in here," she said, adding that they're learning about master artists as they cover their hands and the tabletops in paint. "The kids are like little sponges — they know Picasso, Monet, VanGogh, Frank Lloyd Wright..."

The art teacher said that even her youngest students are able to rapidly identify these artists. "It's amazing to me, how smart the kids are. They have such good memories, and they are so art smart."

Of course, the children are encouraged to let loose while learning because, as Ogden pointed out, "There are no bad grades in art."

Not only do Cohasset students recall facts about art — they remember the art teacher who taught them all about it (see sidebar).

"I get love letters from the kids all the time that say, 'You're the best art teacher.' Of course, I'm the only art teacher they know," she grinned. "It's easy to be the best!"

Teaching in Cohasset

Ogden first came to the South Shore in 1993 with her husband, Wayne, who landed a job as Duxbury High School principal; he is also now retired. Both former educators hail from Arlington, Mass., where they attended high school together. The couple moved to

Duxbury from Vermont and have two children who are grown and both live in New York: Zach, 32, and Maggie, 29.

Ogden started teaching in Cohasset the following year, and had a somewhat unorthodox job interview.

"It's different from how interviews are done now," she said. "I brought in my portfolio and laid it out on the floor. I said, 'I love art and I love kids.' By the time I left there, they called and offered me the job."

Ogden leaves behind some colleagues that she has worked alongside from the beginning, including Osgood principal Bob LeCount, who started at the old Osgood School – which is now the library – the same year as Ogden. LeCount was the adjustment counselor at the time.

LeCount said he has "mixed feelings" about Ogden retiring. "I'm happy Betsy is able to go on, but we're going to miss her."

The principal recalled how he used to pop into the art teacher's classroom. "It was always fun to go into the art room and work with Betsy. It was hands-on and enjoyable, and you got to see the kids in a different context. Betsy was wonderful when she invited us into her class," LeCount reflected. "I commonly left with glue on my fingers... That's how she was. We were welcome to come in, help out, and do our own art."

Now, LeCount added, Ogden will be free to focus on her own art.

"Betsy in and of herself is a brilliant artist," he shared. "To be able to have a job where she can teach that to other people... not a lot of people get that opportunity, and Betsy has taught thousands of children. I'm sure amongst them are brilliant artists, too; she may have planted the seed that those artists will flourish."

An Osgood teacher who wished to remain anonymous, but who started teaching the same day as Ogden years ago, said that the art teacher has left her mark on the school.

"Betsy's presence is felt all over the building, not only on the bulletin boards but in the forms of banners and posters all over the school. Betsy was always the one who made the welcoming signs and thank you signs, many times with the help of the students, for special visitors and events held at the school."

In addition to her students' artwork, the art teacher also constantly displayed thoughtfulness and kindness, her colleague said.

"Betsy always thought of others before herself... she would have homemade cookies and treats out for us on her own birthday. She would put [treats] out on the days that the teachers were having conferences. In addition, Betsy would give each of us a piece of her artwork in the form of bookmarks and cards when she knew it was our birthdays. She donated through her artwork and that of the students to countless charities and organizations."

Ogden said that she's enjoyed giving so much of herself over the years because the Cohasset community made it easy to do.

"I've always been so supported here. It really made me love the job; it makes you want to give as much as you can when you know it's appreciated."

Peace, love, and lemonade

That Ogden is into nature is quite evident, as she uses recycled and "found" materials for her many projects. She started a garden at Osgood five years ago with a group of students she dubbed "The Green Club." Knowing her fondness for all things green, the school planted a tree in her honor.

Being socially and environmentally conscious is important to her, and is reflected in her work and the work her students have done, such as paintings of wind turbines that blanket a bulletin board in the hallway.

"It's the way of the future," Ogden said of green living. "I just try to open the kids' eyes to the different options. Instead of throwing things in the trash, we reuse everything in the classroom —cardboard, scraps of yarn, yogurt cups, anything."

With her "peace and love" philosophy, Ogden is a walking throwback. "I'm a product of the sixties and seventies," she smiled. "I think that's what it's all about."

Among Ogden's accomplishments throughout her tenure is receiving a $5,000 grant from Mattel 11 years ago for being "Teacher of the Year. Ogden won because of an essay written by one of her then third graders, Whitney Jaffe, who graduated from CHS last year.

Along with the money, Ogden said that Mattel sent two "art teacher" Barbie dolls. "But they did not look like me!" she joked.

As a final project, Ogden took that Dylan quote – one of her favorites – and painted it onto a black and neon-colored mural featuring a boy and girl surrounded by stars. The mural will stay in the school as a gift from her.

Ogden also handcrafted ceramic peace sign necklaces to give to her students and parents at a special garden party – featuring cookies and lemonade – that she hosted on Tuesday as her way of saying goodbye.

"It's been an amazing 19 years," she said. "Now onto the next adventure."

Leaving while she loves it

Ogden will retire to her pottery wheel and traveling with her husband. With exciting opportunities ahead to create and showcase her own artwork, the artist is reluctant to stop doing what she's been doing all the years — nurturing little artists.

"This is the dream job," she said. "I can honestly say every day I come in, I just love my job. I never want to be absent — I can't give the kids to anyone else."

While it's tough to give them up now, Ogden said that she wanted to end her teaching career while she still loves it.

"That's what I want — I want to go out loving my job, being healthy, and be able to do my own artwork and do something else positive." Ogden said that she would like to volunteer more and continue working with kids. She might also come back to Cohasset and sub now and then.

It sounds like she would be more than welcome. LeCount said that he is confident that no matter what Ogden decides to do in the coming years, she will find a way to leave her mark.

"Betsy's next chapter, we don't know," said LeCount. "She will paint the world some other way. But one thing we can be sure of — the world is a better place because Betsy's hand is here."

Mrs. Ogden memories

The Cohasset Mariner's Facebook friends shared what they will miss about the retiring art teacher.

"Our children have been out of the Osgood since 2003, and we still have art created in Betsy's classes hanging in our kitchen. Many thanks!" – Grace Honor Evans

"Wonderful part of 2013 CHS graduation [where Ogden was honored]. Mrs. Ogden in her red shoes quoting Dr. Suess!" – Susan Spafford

Ogden said at graduation, "Don't cry because it's over; smile because it happened."

"Every school should have a Betsy Ogden—she so freely shared her artistic talents, her compassion for all people, and her zest for a peaceful world. The color, light and joy sprang out of her as she inspired children to express themselves in their work and to see the world as a place to celebrate and contribute. She is one in a million – or trillion – and the retired lady teachers (BELLES) are looking forward to having her at our 'gatherings'! We love you dearly— to the stars and back!" – Faith Maloney

"I had the privilege of working with Betsy when I taught in Cohasset. A wonderful person, colleague, and teacher. Happy retirement to her! Osgood is going to have big shoes to fill!" – Heather Brannock

CEF GRANT AWARDS 2012-2013

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to thank you once again for your very generous support of our efforts to promote excellence in Cohasset Public Schools. The investments from our fall and spring grant application and approval process are below. The CEF will continue to provide the incremental resources for programs and materials that are not covered by the Cohasset School District's operating budget. The CEF invests broadly in the following strategic investment categories: 21st century classroom, expansion of the core curriculum, after-school enrichment, college preparation and professional development.

We are grateful for the incredible support the community provides and doubly so for your generosity which allows the CEF to fund these strategic grants and encourage teacher innovation. Thank you and have a wonderful summer!

Spring 2013 Grants (School)	Description	$ Amount
Apple Mac Lab for Technology Courses (HS – 21st Century Classroom)	Re-introduces technology curriculum to high school with courses in video production and computer technology.	$20,000
CSCR Summer SeaPerch Exploration Program (HS – After School Enrichment)	Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) project to build remotely operated vehicles to document critical habitat in Cohasset Harbor.	$3,550
FIRST LEGO™ League Robotics Program (HS/MS – After School Enrichment)	Supports growing after-school club for students to design, build, and program robots as part of the global FIRST LEGO™ Tech Challenge teams.	$5,462

Total 2012-2013 Grants Awarded by CEF = $68,272

The CEF works in partnership with our schools and the community at large to promote excellence in Cohasset's public education.

LIFE AT CHS

Best school year in recent memory

I would first like to thank CHS graduate Whitney Malone, the most recent bearer of the CHS-to-Cohasset Mariner torch, for passing down the privilege of writing for the town paper.

MATTHEW MACCORMACK

We finally made it. No longer will we anxiously pore over the school calendar, counting down the days until release. No longer will we sit sweating in our classrooms, as the sun shines out the window and temperatures soar into the nineties. No longer will we complain about finals or last-minute assignments.

The 2012-2013 school year has finally breathed its last breath.

While its true that CHS students counted down the days until release, this school year has been one of the best in recent memory. With surging school spirit fostered by an active and vocal Class of 2013, the year at Cohasset High was eventful to say the least. Filled with sports, concerts, dances, dodge ball tournaments, field trips, and of course plenty of hard work and studying, the majority of the student body can look back on this year favorably.

I would first like to thank CHS graduate Whitney Malone, the most recent bearer of the CHS-to-Cohasset Mariner torch, for passing down the privilege of writing for the town paper. Who am I, you may be asking? As a rising senior at CHS, I am a busy student, athlete, and participant in extra-curricular activities. In addition to being a member of the soccer team and the CHS band, I am also fortunate enough to be the Vice President of the Class of 2014. I have a strong interest in the field of journalism and will be the editor-in-chief of the school newspaper, The Spinnaker, next fall. Some of you may recognize my name from 143TV's CSPN, where I co-host and produce Cohasset's very own sports show.

Well, enough about me, and more of what you want to hear! The last few weeks went by rather slowly, despite being jam packed with events. As courses wrapped up and students took finals, the elections for next years' student council took place, with students packing the auditorium to listen to speeches from candidates. Additionally, the new administrators, principal Carolyn Connolly and assistant principal Brain Scott, began a tradition to honor underclassmen with academic and athletic awards. Students from all three classes were awarded certificates for outstanding effort and performances in the classroom, and several League All-Stars and varsity letter winners were honored, as well.

The last day of school brought joy to many, as students flooded out of the doors of CHS to pursue summer jobs, volunteer work, and of course, some relaxation and time at the beach.

I look forward to writing for the Mariner next year, and I hope to see you all in the fall. Until then, enjoy the summer sun, and keep it classy Cohasset.

Matthew MacCormack is the new Life at CHS columnist. His column will appear weekly starting in September.

Thank You!!

As another school year comes to a close, the Cohasset Education Foundation would like to thank everyone in the community for their extraordinary support. As of June 22, 2013 the CEF has raised over $1.4 million in contributions and has awarded over $710,000 in grants to the schools. Your donations have also allowed the endowment fund to grow to the point where investment income now helps fund a portion of the CEF grants. This success was made possible because of your overwhelming support and participation in the Annual Appeal Campaign, the 6th Annual Spelling Bee, the CEF spring fundraiser - the Derby Day Gala. We feel very fortunate to be part of a community that supports its students and excellence in education. For more information about the CEF or how you can become involved please visit our website www.cohasseteducation.org. Thank you for helping promote excellence in Cohasset public schools!

OUR VIEW

Election reflection

Cohasset can take more pride than much of the rest of the state in that 48 percent of registered voters in town participated in Tuesday's Special Election. Without a doubt, Cohasset's turnout had something to do with the fact a hometown guy, Gabriel Gomez, was on the ballot.

However, a 48 percent turnout also means that 52 percent of voters in town did not vote Tuesday.

We think there is a touch of irony that the Special Election for the state senate came so close to the Fourth of July when America celebrates Independence Day.

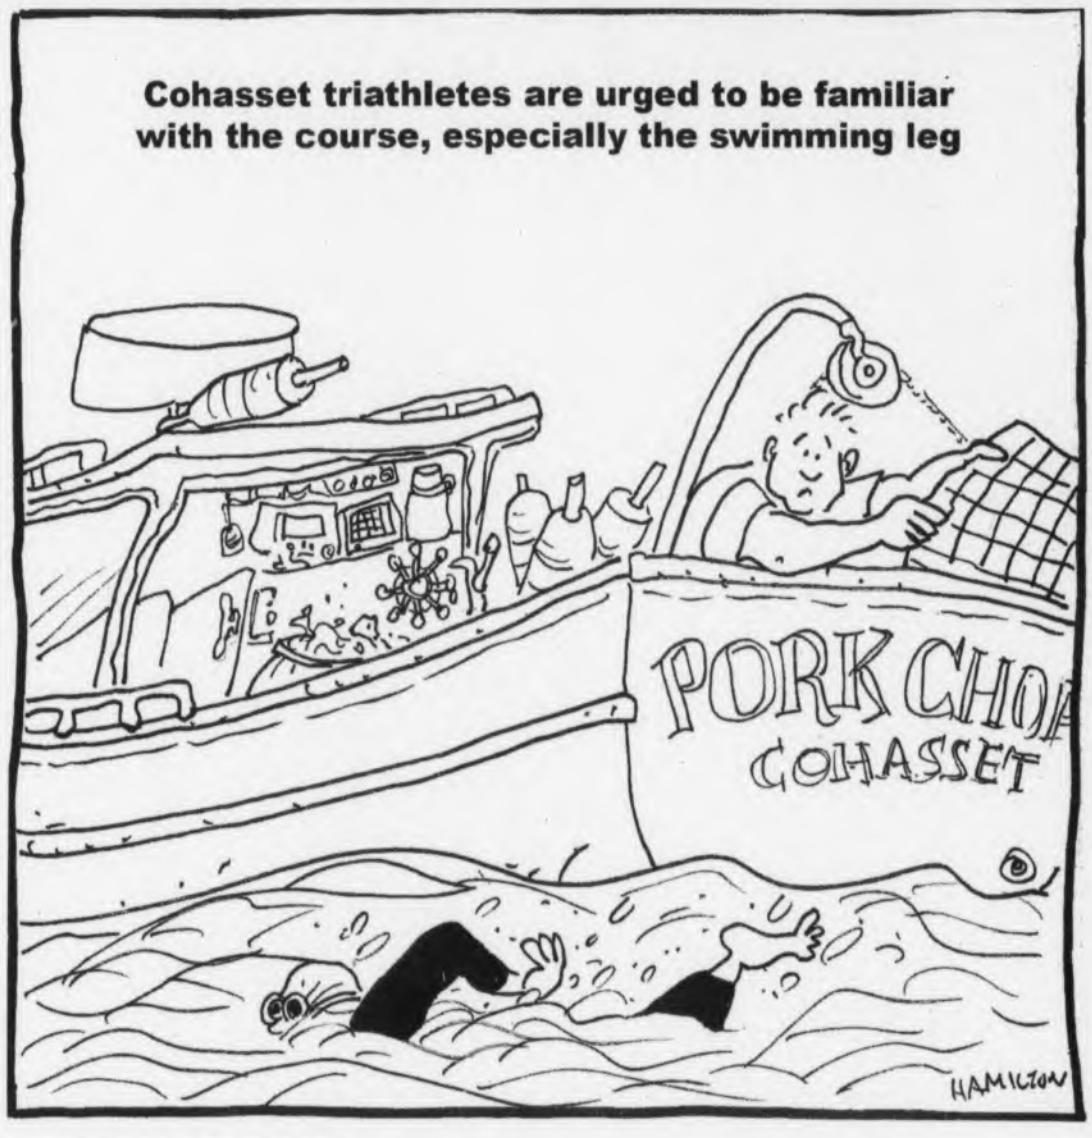
We do not think our forefathers, who signed the Declaration of Independence, would be very proud of the turnout for the Special Election to fill the seat vacated by long-term, former U.S. senator, John Kerry, who is now Secretary of State.

When so many people around the world do not have the right to vote, it never ceases to amaze us that so many Americans opt to sit out elections.

Some might argue that voting takes too much time, requires too much effort or they are uninformed on the issues or do not think their vote would make any difference. There is always an excuse.

We believe it is our responsibility as Americans to become informed, get involved and vote.

Interestingly in Hingham, which has 6 precincts, precinct 5A at Linden Ponds had a turnout of 73 percent as compared to 36 percent town-wide. Linden Ponds is a large retirement community.



While precinct 5A is located at Linden Ponds, therefore making it very easy to vote – we believe that age also makes a difference. Members of the "Greatest Generation" – those that lived through the Great Depression and World War II are in their "later golden years" and appreciate the sacrifice that so many have made to make our democracy possible. It is likely that more Cohasset seniors and those around the state voted Tuesday than their younger counterparts.

We would like to suggest that Cohasset families make it a special event when their sons and daughters turn 18 to ensure they register to vote. Also, try going to the polls as a family for that first "teenage" vote. Chronicle the day by including a photo in a scrapbook. Before the election, make it a point to talk about who is running and why, and what the key issues are. Make voting and participation in our democratic process a family affair and part of the dinner-time or car-time conversation.

We do want to thank the 2,822 Cohasset voters who took the time to vote Tuesday.

Early deadlines next week!

Due to the Fourth of July holiday next Thursday, the Mariner will go to press a day early next week. All photos and copy are due by noon, Tuesday (July 2). The Mariner will still arrive on the newsstands and in your mailboxes on Friday (July 5). Please call editor Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 with questions. She can also be reached by email at: mford@wickedlocal.com

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Art Center appreciates festival support

South Shore Art Center wishes to thank the community of Cohasset for providing us with such a beautiful space for our arts festival — this year our 58th. We are grateful for the support from the Town and its residents: special thank you to everyone at the Town Hall, DPW, Police and Fire Departments who make our jobs so much easier.

A big thank you to Tim Waite, arts festival coordinator, for presenting an outstanding Arts Festival to record crowds.

Thanks to all our wonderful sponsors: Audi Norwell/Porsche of Norwell, Image Resolutions, Dean & Hamilton/The Cook Estate, Hingham Institution for Savings, Pastene, South Shore Music Circus, Renewal by Andersen, Work N' Gear, Conway Insurance Agency, South Coastal Bank, Pilgrim Bank, Barbara Bahr Sheehan Design, Colony Rug, Goodwin Graphics, Flemings of Cohasset, Graham Waste, Granite City Electric, King Jewelers, RBC Wealth Management, Rockland Trust, Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly Insurance Agency, The Bulfinch Group, Atlantic Bagel, Cohasset Collision, Cohasset Jewelers, Decision Mortgage, Derby Street Shoppes, L.P. Carpenter Interiors, Victoria's Pizza and many more.

Jazz Reception sponsors included Audi Norwell/Porsche of Norwell, Dean & Hamilton, Image Resolutions, Bacardi, Curtis Liquors, Panopticon Imaging, and Tony DiPaolo.

Finally, a heartfelt thank you to all of our fabulous volunteers, participating artists, youth crew, and the Art Center staff who kept things running smoothly throughout the three-day weekend.

Cultural Council Community Input Meeting

The Cohasset Cultural Council will host a Community Input Meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday, July 11, at the Town Hall Auditorium. The purpose is to solicit feedback from residents on how best to allocate public dollars for programs and activities in the arts, humanities and interpretive sciences.

The meeting will feature a special "sneak preview" performance by the 19-member cast of Zombie Prom, presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club. This is just one of the many organizations the Cohasset Cultural Council supports as part of its mission to provide high-quality arts and culture programming to local residents.

The Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

Cohasset's all-volunteer, municipally appointed council receives an annual allocation of approximately $4,000 to fund projects by individuals, organizations and schools that serve a broad range of interests and needs. The Council receives many more proposals than it is able to fund. Last year, for example, it received $12,796 in requests but could afford to support only $4,183.

Because it distributes public dollars, the Cultural Council must periodically gather local public opinion and learn more about what the community needs. This helps to develop useful criteria and funding priorities to guide its grant-making decisions.

Attendees are asked to RSVP to Sarah Wood Torrey at 781-383-3493 or CohassetCulture@gmail.com.

New commenting platform

System aims to build, improve web conversation

On Thursday, June 27, (wickedlocalcohasset.com) launched a new set of social and interactive features underneath online articles. Our goal is to enhance the experience by giving readers new ways to interact with each other, share opinions and engage with the news.

Another goal is to continue to make commenting less anonymous, which we hope will make readers think twice about posting inflammatory, hateful or objectionable content, thereby increasing the level of civility on the website.

Comments submitted through the old system will continue to appear under past articles. But all existing commenting accounts will be disabled, requiring users to sign up for a new account to discuss new articles.

New commenting accounts can be created using an existing Facebook or LinkedIn account. Users who don't have one of those accounts can go to Facebook or LinkedIn right now to create a profile that can be connected to a commenting account. Look for the "Sign up" link on the new comment boards under articles.

In an attempt to move away from the anonymous nature of our previous commenting system, we'd like people to have their real identities associated with their Facebook and LinkedIn accounts. If we detect a Facebook or LinkedIn account that is created with a fake name, we will disable the associated commenting account.

Once readers are signed up and logged in, here are a few of the new features they will find:

• In addition to plain text comments, users can attach a photo or video to illustrate their post. Photo and video submissions are subject to moderation before appearing.

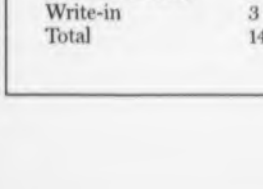
• Readers have the option to "like" other comments they see. The commenting system uses "likes" to determine the most popular comments and commenters. Readers will have the opportunity to filter and sort comment boards so the most-liked posts appear at the top, leaving the least-liked comments at the bottom.

• Writers have the ability to reply to a specific comment in a thread, helping readers keep better track of all the conversations happening within the same topic.

• With just two clicks, readers can share comments they write or read to their own Facebook timeline, Twitter feed or e-mail.

• Readers can follow the action on a specific comment board by signing up for email notifications. Email will be sent when other writers add posts to the article that interests them.

A few other points:



• Readers who see a comment that is objectionable can click the "Flag" link, which will alert a moderator who will review the comment and remove it if necessary.

• We will continue to suspend or disable the accounts of users who can't keep it clean and be civil.

• We will continue to disable the commenting feature on stories where a discussion isn't productive. The topics include crimes, deaths and other sensitive subjects, along with articles where moderators are deleting a majority of the comments because of incivility.

FOR THE RECORD

'100 days' marks milestone

GREGORY MATHIS

In the spirit of that healing process, we're going to be looking at what has transpired since that fateful day.

The Boston Marathon bombings shook us all, one way or another.

You didn't have to be a marathon runner, a spectator near the finish line, or even in Boston that day to have some sort of connection to the tragedy.

As we've learned in the days and months since April 15, the attacks had a far-reaching impact beyond the city's limits.

The nation and the world watched as the details of the bombings unfolded on Marathon Day as we realized the extent of the injuries and the damage done. The ensuing search for the suspects and the eventual gunfight and manhunt through the streets of Watertown that led to the death of one suspect and the arrest of a second brought an end to that chapter of the tragedy.

But time does not stand still for those families who suffered losses in the attack, or were seriously injured. For them, the healing process may be just beginning.

In the spirit of that healing process, we're going to be looking at what has transpired since that fateful day. With an eye toward July 24 as the 100th day after the bombing, we hope to highlight how this tragedy has impacted many lives – 100 lives to be exact.

"100 Days/100 Lives" is designed to understand the scope of the tragedy. As we know from covering this story from its beginning, it touched many lives from communities all across the Commonwealth, the country, and the world.

The story of the marathon bombings hasn't ended, though. It's only just begun as those seriously injured have recently been released from hospitals and rehabilitation centers and are preparing to meet the challenges that come with moving forward with their lives. The story continues as The One Fund Boston begins to help those in need in the coming weeks.

In some cases, we'll be circling back with the many folks we've already interviewed who had a connection to the race, either as a runner or spectator, or some other way. How has time changed their perception of the events surrounding the bombings? What sort of health issues have arisen or been remedied? How are they doing moving forward 100 days removed from the tragedy?

In addition to those directly effected, we're also interested in talking to the many first responders who reacted and acted so bravely at the finish line and during the Watertown manhunt, the doctors and nurses who treated the wounded and performed admirably in difficult and chaotic times following the two blasts near the finish line, and to the countless people in all our communities who have rallied to support family and friends impacted with fundraising efforts.

GateHouse Media New England newspapers and the corresponding websites produced extensive coverage of the bombings and its immediate aftermath, drawing on our connections with the communities. We're looking to once again draw from our expertise and collective reach to provide readers with a comprehensive understanding of what has transpired since Marathon Monday 2013.

So look for "The Boston Bombings: 100 Days/100 Lives" in the newspaper the week of July 24 and be sure to check out the special website that will be dedicated to collecting the content generated throughout eastern Massachusetts to understand the magnitude of the tragedy and the many lives it has touched.

Funny, I don't feel so independent

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

As we approach the Fourth of July holiday, I thought I'd share a few ramblings.

• We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States

• If you haven't taken a few minutes to read the Declaration of Independence; do so, it's simply awe-inspiring.

• As the years go by, my appreciation for Independence Day and all that it stands for gets stronger and stronger. However I have to admit, I'm not much of a parade guy.

• Wouldn't it be cool if Cohasset did a fireworks display from a barge in the middle of Little Harbor?

• The best thing about the warm weather is that I am actually typing this Front Porch View from my front porch.

• A recent Facebook post from the Cohasset Police Department about a former Cohasset resident being arrested for selling heroin got me thinking. It's been roughly eight months since the Cohasset Police arrested two individuals for making weekly cocaine deliveries to numerous Cohasset residents. I wonder where those residents are getting their fix these days. Have they gotten other armed drug dealers to make weekly deliveries into our neighborhoods or do they have to go somewhere now and pick their drugs up? Either way, I'm sure the whole ordeal has been extremely trying for them.

• I think Gabriel Gomez has done the town proud.

• Heard that some were offended by the political signs that read "Cohasset for Markey". Really? There are so many things in life to get offended by; I cannot see how this makes the list of Top 10,000. Wonder if the same people found the bumper sticker "Illinois for Romney" offensive?

• Did you vote? Don't complain if you didn't vote.

• My iPod has an awesome Fourth of July mix. Ray Charles, Woody Guthrie, 'X' & John Kiley are just some of the artists.

• My favorite Fourth of July memory is from 1994. I was down in Washington DC and flew back to Boston on a late night flight. There were probably 20 people on the plane and the pilot made an announcement encouraging all of us to sit by a window on the left side of the plane. It was a crystal clear night and from DC to Boston and we must have witnessed close to a hundred fireworks displays as we flew up the coast. It was truly amazing.

• Lyle Lovett is playing at the Music Circus on the 6th. Lyle puts on a wonderful show of great music augmented by his arid dry sense of humor. Years ago, we saw him on July 4th at Tanglewood. During the show someone shouted out "Happy Independence Day," he paused for a moment and replied "Funny, I don't feel so independent."

• Haven't seen or heard much about the Avalon sidewalk project as of late. Now that school's out there'll be kids trying to cross over 3A on a regular basis. Be a bit more cautious as you drive through that stretch of road.

• Hidden Gem – have you been to JW's Burger Bar in Scituate yet? What a great little hole in the wall.

• Is it possible to have a Dell's Lemonade without getting a brain freeze? I'm working on finding out, will keep you posted.

• King Arthur had the 'Knights of the Roundtable' soon I'll be introducing the 'Kids of the Roundtable'.

• Congratulations to the Mets for winning the Major League Championship with one of the best plays you'll ever see in youth sports; a 1-3-2 tag out at home double play to end the game. There is a spectacular photograph taken moments after that play that is floating around on Facebook that truly personifies "the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat". I hope the Mariner is able to get a copy and share it with you all.

• The op-ed pages of the Mariner have been a must read over the past few weeks; with highly informative letters and commentaries along with a series of columns by recent Cohasset High School graduate Matt Gregory. Matt's writing and analysis has been stellar. I for one am quite pleased to know that he's heading off to Georgetown because if he were sticking around I'm pretty sure my days on the porch would be numbered.

• It's been six months since 27 people were killed in a matter of minutes in Newtown, Conn.; shot over and over and over and over again with an automatic firearm. It's been 12 months since 12 people were slaughtered in a matter of minutes with an automatic firearm in Aurora, Colo. It's been almost 3 months since 3 people were killed in Boston by a bomb made from a cooking pot. The cooking pot is called a weapon of mass destruction yet the automatic firearm isn't. Can you guess which one has the lobbyists with deep pockets?

• While on the subject of guns, I wonder how many times the new radio voice for the Patriots will give pause after he announces that the Patriots offense is lined up in a 'shotgun formation'?

• Anyone else think that the new blue bags hold less trash than the older bags with the tie strings?

• I love the two dories that are moored along Jerusalem Road? A warm thank you to whoever owns them.

• Is there a more appropriate beer to drink on Independence Day than Samuel Adams?

• My next article isn't going to be easy for me to write...

As always, thanks for reading and Happy Birthday America.

Sandy Beach open for the summer

In preparation for the opening of Sandy Beach on Saturday, June 15, the beach was cleaned up and restored after several severe nor'easters and Hurricane Sandy caused serious damage and erosion to the South Shore shoreline. The Sandy Beach bathhouse/guard shack sustained damages, the dune fencing was destroyed, rocks along the parking lot shifted and moved, sand on areas of the beach was replaced in areas by rocks and seaweed. The parking lot, owned by the Town of Cohasset also suffered in the storms and is in need of repairs. The trustees of the Sandy Beach Association worked with town officials and maintenance companies to get the beach restored.

Lifeguards are on duty from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily through Labor Day weekend. DJ Weiss has been hired as the beach manager this year. DJ returns to Sandy Beach after serving as a lifeguard for the past five years. He will be in charge of scheduling and guard procedures for the staff of summer lifeguards and beach maintenance workers.

The trustees of Sandy Beach Association (SBA) have launched a new website for the beach to provide the Cohasset community with accurate, current and important information about Sandy Beach. Local resident, Doug Eymer of Eymer Designs, developed the Sandy Beach website: cohassetsandybeach.com. It provides information on the local tide charts, weather, history of Sandy Beach and links to water testing as well as other important features. It also serves as an important source for current information on beach closings due to weather, water pollution and other events related to the beach. The Sandy Beach Association has also launched Facebook, Instagram and Twitter accounts to keep the community connected with up to date information, events, news and photos from Sandy Beach. The links to these sites are available on the website.

The Trustees are pleased to announce the 2013 recipient of the SBA Scholarship. This $1,000 scholarship is awarded to a Cohasset High School senior who demonstrates a passion for marine biology and environmental studies. The recipient this year is Giselle Hart.

The SBA sent out its annual fundraising appeal letter to Cohasset households this month, asking residents to donate to the non-profit fund. Sandy Beach clean up and maintenance, lifeguard and beach maintenance staffing, and upkeep and repairs to the bathhouse are paid by the Association through these donations. The beach does not receive any town funding or assistance to ensure that this valuable resource is made available to residents of Cohasset or any outside assistance to pay for the staffing or maintenance of the beach. A list of donors will appear in the Mariner at the end of the summer season.

All facilities stickers are for sale at town hall. Stickers are required for all cars to park at Sandy Beach. The proceeds of the all facility stickers go to the Town of Cohasset. Sandy Beach is maintained and run solely on donations. Parking fines for parking without a permit is $50.

On June 30, the Cohasset Triathlon will be run through Cohasset. This race will begin at 7 a.m. A portion of the beach parking lot will be closed at 2 p.m. on Saturday June 29. The entire parking lot will be closed until noon on Sunday, June 30. Lifeguards will be on duty on Saturday the 29th until 7 p.m. Lifeguards will not be on the beach until noon on Sunday the 30th.

For more information on Sandy Beach, please visit the website at: cohassetsandybeach.com or email the trustees at info@cohassetsandybeach.com.

TRI

Each of the five featured athletes is over the age of 30, with only one under 40; each person also claimed to work out regularly as part of a healthy, active lifestyle. Each triathlon newbie also admitted that they wanted to "try the tri" because living in town has given them an up-close view of the event each year.

Each decided that this would be the year they would finally stop thinking about the triathlon and just do it.

The triathlon has long been a community-centered event by calling attention to the small, seaside town of Cohasset. Director/organizer Bill Burnett said that he started the event to not only raise funds for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) but also to give back to Cohasset.

Burnett likes how the triathlon draws so many different athletes of all different fitness levels, "from superstars to first-time triathletes. We work hard to ensure that all of our athletes feel welcomed and have a terrific race experience."

While the race does crown a victor at the end in a ceremony celebrating the top three male and female finishers, Burnett said that in the end, everyone who tries it is a winner. He especially loves to see the looks on the faces of those who have never competed before but manage to complete the race.

"To see the expressions of accomplishment from our first-time triathletes as they cross the finish line makes all of the hard work so rewarding," said Burnett.

One man who knows that feeling well is Dick Hoyt, 73, who has pushed his son, Rick, 51, who suffers from cerebral palsy, in his wheelchair in over 1,090 triathlons and marathons around the country over the past three decades.

Team Hoyt is sharing their remarkable story during a special presentation at First Parish on the town common on Saturday. The main message they wish to impart? "Yes you can."

It's fitting, then, that Hoyt had some advice to pass on to first-time triathletes. He noted that many first-time racers are most concerned about the quarter-mile ocean swim.

"People are nervous and scared they're going to get kicked in the head," said Hoyt, adding that he and his son have often employed a strategy. "We used to wait till a lot of the swimmers were gone; we would stay to the outside, not in the middle of the pack."

Another tip: eat! Hoyt said that it's crucial to keep in top shape for the race.

"I try to eat every two hours, a couple of bagels, bananas— I'm a banana boy," said Hoyt. Triathletes should eat two to three hours before the event, he said. Also important: staying hydrated.

Judging from the regimens the following five triathletes-in-training have put themselves through, it appears they are more than ready to tackle the big race on Sunday.

"I have all the confidence that our first time triathletes are well-prepared for race day," said Burnett. "We have provided a number of resources to ensure our athletes are ready," including a "what to expect" conference call last month. The event's website (cohassettri.com) has a lot of information for first-time races.

Burnett does have some parting advice to share with Cohasset's crop of new triathletes, however.

"My advice on race day? Enjoy the experience, relax, and be proud that you call Cohasset your home."

The Mariner asked the following five Cohasset triathletes-in-training to share their hopes, fears, and expectations for Sunday's race.

Mary Fran Olson swims in the water off of Sandy Beach while getting ready for her first triathlon.

Mary Fran Olson, 44

Why did you want to try the tri? "I've always kind of cheered people on. My brother flew in from St. Louis last year [to compete] and everyone kept asking me, 'Will you do it?' I have an old bike and like to sit at the beach... But once I decided, athletes in town have been incredible, saying, 'You can do this,' giving me that encouragement; it's been a really neat journey. We moved here in 2007... we've been here basically since [the triathlon] started. It's right here in our town; just a lot of people encouraged me to try. Honestly, I want to put the [triathlon] sticker on my car and have earned it!"

Do you think living and training in town give you a leg up? "It's nice to train on the actual course. There are no surprises; I know where the hills are and I hate them, but at least I know where they are."

What has been your biggest training challenge? "Definitely swimming, but I'm finding I'm enjoying it the most. It's really peaceful out there. Once I got a hang of the wetsuit, I've been enjoying the swim... I'm probably going to be my slowest, but who knows with the broken toe [Olson kicked a rock coming out of the water at Sandy Beach]. I know how to swim, I'll be fine, but swimming in a wetsuit is very different... I'd panic if I couldn't touch. Friends said, 'You're not going to sink; the wetsuit is a flotation device.' That calmed me down."

Having watched the tri every year, what do you enjoy most? "It surprised me when I was down there – I volunteered the year before – you see all shapes and sizes, from the elite athletes to the 80-year-olds... You don't have to be a super-athlete [to compete]. It's a personal thing. Only the top three people win— you're really competing against your own strength."

Most of our first-time triathletes are in their 40s; it seems to be the trendy time to try the tri: "I'm 44. I laugh because I look at the age groupings, and I should've waited a year— I would be in the next year up. There are a lot of very fit 40-year-old women!"

Mary Fran Olson will be doing her first triathlon this year.

John McMahon, 43

How do you feel going into the tri? "It's exciting. It's my first triathlon. There's a little bit of nervous energy, but it should be fun."

Have you done a similar race before? "I ran my first marathon at 29 and have run competitively since then."

How have you ramped up your fitness routine? "I'm biking 40 miles a week now, where before I really wasn't biking at all. Cohasset Cycle on [Route] 3A is so great... They were slammed with tune-ups but they squeezed me in, and will have my bike ready for Friday. They did me a solid."

What's been your biggest challenge? "Certainly the swim part is what terrifies with me most, but I feel if I can be confident with two of the three legs, the swimming will be over before I know it and the rest will be smooth sailing. I've scuba dived but usually in warm weather; I never swam with a wetsuit before... I'm going to swim [in the ocean] this week. It's like taking a practice SAT test, getting used to sitting down and taking the test— if I'm comfortable in the wetsuit and comfortable with where I get into and out of the water, I think it'll be a lot easier."

Why did you decide to try the tri? "We actually found Cohasset because of the Cohasset road race. We lived in Brookline for a long time... the second or third time we ran, decided we were going to move to Cohasset.... It's kind of special to us in that way. I couldn't have told you where Cohasset was in 2004— I literally had to get the Mapquest directions and find it... [The race] is such a beautiful way for somebody from out of town to see the town."

What do you like about the Cohasset Triathlon compared to other races you've done? "A race is only as good as the race director. This race being as popular as it is, it sells out, and is growing as much as it possibly can, is a credit to Bill [Burnett]. It's one of the reasons the race is so good, what he has done to prepare us. He's so accessible in sending us emails to get us prepared and excited. People want their races to be experiences... Some of the things Bill is doing, like with the Hoyts, I think it's really great. I'm planning to bring my daughter down to that on Saturday; their story is so amazing. I feel like Bill is doing those little things to make it more of an experience and not just a race. People want to feel some sense of camaraderie and accomplishment."

Are you ready for the race? "All things considered, I think I'm in a good spot. I'm trying to do as much homework and trying to anticipate everything, being that it's my first race. I think I'm as prepared as I'm going to be, but I'm excited."

What made you decide to try the tri? "I've only been in Cohasset for three years, but I've gotten to know a decent amount of people who have done the race before and have done the race... I'm very goal-oriented if I have a task I want to do; it gives me that motivation to accomplish something. I try to keep active in general; [the race] gives me that extra motivation to do it. I know I'm not going to ever win a race, but at the same time I don't want to come in last... I'll give it a good effort. To be able to say I even attempted to do a triathlon... I thought it would be a good personal goal."

Have you done any similar races before? "Not a triathlon. I've done road races. Since I've moved to Cohasset, I've done the Race by the Sea twice... I've done a couple other 5Ks, one in Scituate."

What's been your biggest training challenge? "I'm not a diehard runner. Training for the first 10K I ever did, I dreaded running. I thought I was going to dislike the thought of running, but then I didn't mind it at all. I think I know what to anticipate on the swim; I've been training in a pool in Boston; I've swam at Sandy a couple times... but it's the first part of the race... I just don't know what to anticipate. Road biking is really new to me; it's going to be a challenge for sure. I just got a bike myself last week!"

What part of the race are you most looking forward to? "The swimming competitively is definitely very new; biking is going to be my favorite. I used to live out west in Park City and used to mountain bike a lot."

How have you ramped up your fitness routine? "I've been swimming in the pool... The first couple times I got under water, it was humbling. I've been doing a couple laps consistently and watching [training videos on] YouTube. I've been on a great website, beginnertriathlon.com. I keep all my training logs on the website and put in the whole calendar of my workout."

What else has helped you prepare? "I have a friend that did it for the first time last year and gave me some advice, but for the most part, this website has been my go-to."

Does living and training in town help? "That's the benefit of living in town— I get to run the course. And there are a lot of athletes in town, which is great."

Christina Grossman, 47

Have you done a triathlon (or similar race) before? "I've never done a tri; I've done a bunch of 5K runs and a 10-mile run, but I've never done a bike or a swim. I'm excited and nervous, but it'll be fun."

What made you decide to try the tri? "There's that sort of hometown morale... I think what really inspired me the most to do it is my husband turned 60, and we decided we really wanted to do something together. He's done many, many marathons and several triathlons... He's given me pointers. It's a fun thing to do together."

What is your training regimen like? "I've had this state in my head, when it's pouring out but not lightning, where I think, 'I'll go for a run anyway.' When not training, I'd go inside and do spin class [instead] or just skip a day... [During training] you have this deadline. I've been pretty consistently doing at least one thing every day, and also realizing I'm not in it to win it. I've tried to keep in perspective that it's for me; I'm confident I can complete it and just want to have fun with it."

What's your favorite part of the race? "The swim... I swim at Sandy Beach all summer long, any day that I can; I've always been a swimmer. That's one of the things that inspired me to do it; I love to swim at Sandy on my own, so why not put on a wetsuit and do the tri?"

Chrsitina Grossman rides down North Main Street on her hybrid bike.

Does it help to train in town? "It is lucky to be living in town where you can do the whole bike route and get familiar with the hills."

How have you prepared yourself mentally? "It's just like rehearsing for a play. I'll just try to stay calm, cool and collected, and just remember that it's something I'm doing because I want to."

What are you looking forward to most? "I think it's fantastic and I wouldn't have picked any other triathlon as my first one. It does feel you're joining in an activity; it's special. I've watched it every year; it's fun to try it out."

Meaghan Leahy, 31

What made you decide to try the tri? "I had initially decided to because two of my brothers have done it the past couple years and are doing it again this year. It's really inspiring to get down there and see it... Every year I say, 'I'm so going to do it.' I've been all talk. I finally decided, well, I'm 30 and need to do something with my life [Leahy turned 31 on Thursday, June 27]. I signed up for it and got a few of my cousins involved. There are eight cousins also competing— they're coming from Connecticut, New York, Michigan, and Florida... We have a small family competition, so it's really exciting. We've already started the trash talking, the New York versus Boston rivalry."

Have your family members who are veteran triathletes helped you prepare? "People have been giving me hints on what to do. Two of my brothers have done it, and they are both really athletic."

What is your training regimen like? "This year I really aggressively set a schedule for myself. A few months ago, I did a half marathon for the first time and I did a couple of obstacle races... there's one in Marshfield called the Ruckus Run."

Have you taken advantage of training in town? "I like to know the layout of [the course] but don't want it to become too regular... if I kind of don't know where the beginning and end is, I'm more focused on my speed and my training... but I definitely run and bike a lot from my house, and swim at the beach; I just try not to do the exact course."

What's been your biggest training challenge? "I'm freaked out about the swim; I'm scared of seaweed! I don't know, there's something about it..."

Meagan Leahy is running her first triathlon. Both her brothers have done the race, and her eight cousins are doing it this year so it is a good excuse to be part of the family party.

FIELD HOCKEY

Summer Clinic

The Cohasset Field Hockey Boosters will host two summer clinics for players in grades 4-9 in July on the turf at Alumni Field.

There will be two sessions, one for beginners/inexperienced players, and another for intermediate/advanced players. All sessions are from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The clinics are open to youngsters from all towns and will be taught by Cohasset High School graduates and current college players Sage Stebbins (Siena College Field Hockey Division I) and Camryn Caron (Assumption College Field Hockey Division II).

Beginners/inexperienced players

July 8, 9, 10 and 11

Intermediate/advanced players

July 29, 30, 31 and August 1.

The cost is $75.00 per session

These clinics are offered to all rising 4th-9th graders who are interested in learning to field hockey and to improve their skills/overall knowledge of the game.

For more information, contact Sage Stebbins: sm07steb@siena.edu or 617-750-7243 or Camryn Caron: camryn.caron@assumption.edu or 339-236-0365

TITLE IX

A movement towards equality

More than 40 years later, women's sports continue to evolve

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

A crowd of 16,479 screaming fans filled Jeld-Wen Field in Portland, Oregon on a sunny, Sunday afternoon in late April to watch professional women's soccer. Nearly the same number showed up at a softball stadium in Oklahoma a month later to catch the NCAA College World Series. A little closer to home, sidelines were stretched to capacity at girls lacrosse state tournament games in June.

All of these fans, supporters, parents, cousins, friends, and just the average fan came out for one reason: to watch a female sporting event. Those numbers weren't fathomable a little more than 40 years ago. And those numbers wouldn't have existed today had it not been for one of the most groundbreaking pieces of legislation ever enacted by Congress and signed by the President of the United States. Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 was signed by President Richard Nixon on June 23, 1972, changing the landscape of female sports and leveling the playing field for all.

"My mother went to the athletic director and then the school committee to say, and it was a valid question, 'Why does my son have more opportunities to play sports than my daughter.' Little did my mom know at the time that she was a leader in the

Davis rules

Emma Davis wins Individual tennis title

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Not too many athletes have the chance to win two championships in one high school season, but that is what happened to Cohasset sophomore Emma Davis on the tennis courts this spring.

Davis played No. 1 singles for the Cohasset girls tennis team that won the Div. 3 South Sectional Championship, and a week later scored a State Championship in the MIAA Individual State Tournament, to successfully defend the title she won last year.

What makes the title special is a combination of the fact that Davis also plays top-level tournament tennis, where she is No. 1 in Mass. and No. 3 in New England.

Many players with her talent skip high school tennis.

Not Davis.

"We have an awesome team," Davis said after the team's Div. 3 South Sectional championship win over Ursuline. "It's so fun to be part of a team. They all came to my matches. They're so supportive. That made it better."

In the late rounds, Davis faced a couple of challenges. In the semifinal, she beat Nichole McCann (Amherst) 7-6, 6-1, and followed with a 6-3, 6-3 win over Shrewsbury's Jessica Perkins.

Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan was excited about Davis' winning the title.

"It's so nice to see Emma repeat as state champion," Meehan said. "It's a far harder task the second time because everyone who's gunning for you has nothing to lose and she had to take all of the risk by playing. I give he so much credit for putting herself out there to play again. She faced some tough opponents but played really smart tennis and won both the semi finals and finals in straight sets."

Meehan was a reason Davis played.

"I love the whole team aspect," Davis said. "I like being a part of a team. I wasn't going to play my sophomore year, but Gigi is just so awesome. She really helps the team build a great bond."

Post 118 ready to pick up pace

Scituate/Cohasset set for busy schedule

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

Despite the best laid plans, when it comes to sports like baseball, teams are at the mercy of Mother Nature.

Don't blame Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 if they might hold a bit of a grudge against her.

That would be directly related to the fact that the team got a late start to the season due to rainouts.

A year ago, Post 118 made a late season surge and grabbed the fifth and final

Great start for new team

Girls thrive with community support

By Nikki Lanzetta
Cohasset Club Coach

The Cohasset Girls Club Team had a terrific inaugural season, made possible by the generous efforts of many people.

The club was funded by a booster program spearheaded by community members, Jeff and Maggie Moy.

Secondly, many parents (and even non-parents) enthusiastically donated their time to walk the golf course with the girls and provide additional support. Cohasset Golf Club also was extremely generous in donating their facility for practice time as was Rockland Golf Course.

The team consisted of six 8th graders and seven 7th graders. Their experience levels ranged, but were mostly minimal. A few of the girls had played nine holes, some had played a few holes coupled with lessons, and some had never touched a club be-

TALKING GOLF

Arnie and Golf-o-rama

PAUL HARBER

Some 50 years ago Arnold Palmer made a visit to South Shore

Arnold Palmer (above) and Gary Player were the Show before the arrival of Jack Nicklaus on the PGA Tour and they took their act to Hingham's South Shore Country Club 50 years ago. FILE PHOTO

The best golf stories are those that live forever. They usually involve a legend of the game that came, saw our courses and conquered them.

For instance, years ago Tom Kite visited Brockton Country Club and hit balls places no one else has ever hit them. He was there because the former head professional, Bob Day, served as Kite's caddie on the Tour in a previous life.

It's been almost a century, but they still talk about the smothered hook Walter Hagan hit out of the trees on the sixth hole at Thorny Lea and miraculously put the ball on the green.

But one of the best stories is about the time the King – Arnold Palmer – and his court – Gary Player – came to Hingham for a match at South Shore Country Club in the early 1960s.

They still laugh about the time Arnie asked one of the locals where to hit it on a certain hole.

The local said, "aim it at that tree."

Palmer did. And the ball whistled past the tree into a dense collection of scrubs and underbrush.

"I thought you said I could hit it there?" said Palmer.

"I didn't know you could hit it that far," replied the embarrassed local.

The Palmer-Player exhibition always seemed a fog-shrouded yesteryear event to me.

It was before I played golf and those tall tales belonged in the same world with Francis Ouimet, Eddie Lowery and Bobby Jones. They lived in faded black-and-white photographs or old jumpy news real clips.

But thanks to local golfer Kevin Baumister, the Palmer-Player match is more real to me today than every before. It seems as if I was there.

Baumister has a DVD of the day. Somebody took a color home movie– high tech in 1962 – and it has been digitally preserved.

Of course, your iPhone could produce a much better recording with sharper images. But for 50 years ago, it's pretty good.

The first thing you notice is Palmer and Player's youthful appearance.

Arnie isn't the frail old man wheeled out by the USGA to scorn us for slow play by the irritating "While We're Young" campaign.

They are so young. Palmer was only 32, a handsome and dashing lean and mean golfing machine; and it is so odd seeing Palmer chain-smoking. Player is only 27 and sporting a crew cut; and both are wrinkle free.

The second thing that strikes you is the number of fans hovering around the golfers, circling greens and shrinking fairway.

Security is limited because it was a time when we all felt safe.

It was the Golden Age for South Shore Country Club, and golf in the region, and all because of one man, Phil Farina.

He was the principal owner of the golf course and although he lived in the big house next to the golf course, "he was always up the club. I don't think he ever took a day off," said Bob King, now in his late 60s, who has been a member since he was 12 in the 1950s.

"What amazed me the most about the match," said King, who was a three-sport athlete at Weymouth High School at the time, "was how pure they both struck the ball."

King remembers Farina very well, too.

"He did so much for junior golf," said King. "He encouraged us to play in tournaments. He started junior events and I doubt I would have had the career I did without that exposure."

Farina did so much to promote golf in the region and there is so little to recognize him.

There is the Farina Cup, a three-day match play event around Labor Day at the club, but few know who he was or what he did.

Along with the late and great Patriot Ledger golf writer Roger Barry, they began the Southeast Amateur, one of the premier amateur tournaments in the state.

Farina also tried to bring the PGA Tour to the South Shore after seeing how successful the Palmer-Player exhibition went. He was unsuccessful in the venture. Pleasant Valley CC's Cuzzy Mingolla made a better pitch.

However Farina brought 12 PGA Tour pros to South Shore CC for a match against the top 12 New England PGA pros in 1963. They called it Golf-O-Rama.

But he did a lot more than that.

"When I was just beginning my career," said long-time member Bill Wallace, "I didn't have the money to join South Shore. "So what Phil did was give me a break on the fee. He was that kind of gentleman."

Wallace isn't the only one, either. What the golf world needs now is not more Palmers and Players. It needs more Farinas.

US Public Links is history after next year's tourney

Kingston's Aiken wins qualifier that took a week to settle

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

Brockton CC's Mike Calef will not be around to defend his State Amateur championship. He will be home in Texas.
DAVID COLT PHOTO COURTESY OF THE MASSACHUSETTS GOLF ASSOCIATION

One of the longest qualifiers in US Open history ended Sunday night at Plymouth Country Club.

The 36-hole qualifier for the US Public Links Championship began on June 17 at Maplegate Country Club in Bellingham for Kingston's Herbie Aikens, Granite Links' Joseph Frew and Connecticut's Dave McNally.

After 36 holes of stroke play, Boston College golf captain Nick Pandelena took medalist honors, but the battle for the second qualifying berth for the July 11-14 national championship at Laurel Hill GC in Lorton, Va., had to be settled.

If you can remember back to June 17, a tremendous thunderstorm rolled across southeastern Massachusetts and tournament officials decided to hold the playoff another day because of the adverse weather conditions.

So three golfers, who fashioned two-round aggregates of 151, teed it up at Plymouth CC on Sunday at 6 p.m., for the one berth and two alternate spots, with Aikens winning the playoff and advancing to the National Championship.

Ironically, the US Publics is a terminal tournament.

An unprecedented move by the U.S. Golf Association will end the US Public Links Championship – and its women's companion tournament – after next year and replaced them with new competitions, the US Amateur Four-Ball Championship and US Women's Amateur Four-Ball Championship, which will begin in 2015.

The site and dates of the USGA's new events have yet to be determined.

The Public Links and Women's Public Links, the fourth-oldest championships, dating back to 1922, are the first USGA championships to be retired and it makes sense.

They no longer serve their original purpose.

It began as the Everyman Open, created for blue-collar workers and those who could not afford private club memberships. In the Dark Ages of the US Golf Association, their tournaments were not open to pubic golfers.

However, the Publinks evolved into just another tournament for collegians, who dominated the field over the last three decades.

The APL, started in 1922, is the USGA's fourth-oldest championship. The WAPL dates to 1977. Many will theorize that the championships' demise was caused by college players' domination, which minimized the everyman appeal of a championship created for truck drivers, teachers and the like.

A 1979 decision to open all USGA championships to public-links players was when the USGA first considered ending the Publinks.

Morse qualifies for US Sr. Open

Weymouth native and former Ponkapoag GC champion Andy Morse is playing in the big time again. The mini-tour veteran earned a berth in the July 11-14 US Senior Open last week when he fashioned a 2-over par 73 at The Kittansett Club in Marion. There were 82 golfers battling for the two spots. Floridian Mark Costaregni shot even par 71 to take medalist honors and Morse prevailed in a playoff over Norfolk's Don Reycroft and Nantucket's Brian Secia for the second spot. David Pierce of East Bridgewater (76), Dave Turgeon (76) and Chuck Gomes (79) of Norton, Joe DiMarzio (84) of Scituate and Rick Cunha of Plymouth (84) were in the field.

Qualified success stories everywhere

Plenty of local golfers qualified for the July 8-12 State Amateur at Longmeadow CC last week at Plymouth CC. Three Thorny Lea sticks – Matt Parziale of Brockton (3-over 72), Peter Gordon of South Easton (74), and Tommy Parker (75) of Boston led the way. Dedham C&P's John Gratton, Hanover's Brendan Ridge (73), Scituate's Jeffrey Durkin, and Milton's Jack Weeks are also going to Longmeadow. In another State Amateur qualifier at Winchester, Plymouth CC's Matt Miller earned medalist honors, firing a 1-under par 70. Thorny Lea's Steve Burak took second with a 72 and Joe Harney of Granite Links tied for seventh with a 77. It should be an interesting State Amateur. For the first time in a while, there is no defending champion. Brockton CC's Mike Calef, who beat Haverhill's Mark Souliotis 3-1 in the 36-hole championship match, is not defending his title. He lives in Texas and played in the championship a year ago because he was on vacation in the area visiting family. He was exempt into last year's State Amateur after winning the State Mid-Amateur the previous year when he did live in Brockton. It will be interesting to see who is leading the MGA Player of the Year points race after the State Amateur. Right now Thorny Lea's John Hadges holds a slim lead (325 points to 323) over Old Sandwich's Doug Clapp with Norwell native Brian Spitz a distance third with 238. Clapp closed the gap with his second low amateur finish at the State Open two weeks ago at Woodland.

Local results

The winners of the 2013 Member/Member Tournament at Scituate Country Club are Ruth Marshman and Saundra Robbins with a 67, beating Julie Chapman and Alison Corner in a card-off. In third place was Brooke Diesel-Veith and Karen McSweeney with a 68. 4th place was decided by a card-off also with Jane Gould and Audrey Phinney winning with a 70. Zena Cronin and Diana Dunphy came in fifth.

Idle thoughts

The Country Club in Brookline has more power than any of us will ever know. They turned down Massachusetts Gov. Deval Patrick and his wife, Diane's application for membership. Every other club in the world, on so many levels, wouldn't dare reject them. I would love to see is the list of those who have been denied membership at TCC.

Got a good golf story? A tournament result? Photo? Please forward to Paul Harber at pharber@wickedlocal.com playoff spot in Zone 6 East, where they were swept by Norwood in the best of three Zone 6 playoff series in three games.

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

Post 118 is attempting put together its team in the early part of the season.

They will be busy with a game Friday against Morrissette at Adams Field in Quincy. They will host Morrisette at home on Sunday.

Post 118 will play Holbrook on Monday, Hyde Park on Tuesday and against Canton on Wednesday.

"We are trying to put the pieces together," said Cohasset general manager and coach Scott Arnold. "We did not have our entire team for the opening game against Weymouth and that was my fault. We had five players that wanted to try out for the Bay State Games. We are used to it, because over the past four years Cohasset has gone deep into the high school tournament and we have not had them for the first week of the season.

"Our players all have roles on this team. We have a starting nine. We have a four-man starting rotation and a closer. Our pitchers don't play in the field. Everything is in place on our roster."

Post 118 looks to Connor Gibbons, Chris Smith, Chase Michaud and Alex Kopacz in its starting rotation. Gibbons and Smith both had solid seasons for Scituate. Brendan O'Connell also catches for Cohasset.

They will will look to Cohasset's Chris Murphy behind the plate and Terrence Doonan at shortstop. They also have Andrew Don, Colin Murphy, Jake Brady and Jamie Timothy in the infield.

Tim Kensinger, Connor Goetz, Liam Burke, Mickey Barry, T.J. Foley and Michaud are in the outfield.

In its opening game of the season, Post 118 lost to Weymouth 11-2 in a game marred by seven errors.

"We had a lot of first year players in the game," Arnold said. "They have to learn not to give six outs in an inning."

Gibbons pitched five innings and allowed two earned runs for Cohasset.

Timothy and Michaud each had an RBI single for post 118.

Canton, which returned to Zone 6 East after five years in Zone 6 West beat Cohasset 4-2, then ran into a hot Braintree team and dropped a 12-3 decision.

It didn't get better as Milton swept a doubleheader 7-6 and 11-0.

"We have played well defensively," Arnold said. "Our bats have not come around as of yet. We are hitting the ball at people. The Canton and Braintree games were like the Weymouth game. We just hit the ball at people. We will come around. Mickey Barry has been hitting the ball hard as has Tim Kensinger."

Arnold feels that if you go by history over the past few years, Post 118 will start hitting the ball.

They were able to hit the ball in their late season run last year to grab the final playoff spot in Zone 6 East.

"Our history," said Arnold. "is that we have been able to get on a roll and make things happen for ourselves."

fore. They started practice the week of April 1st and continued through the end of May, braving some less than desirable spring weather. Weekly practice consisted of two lessons and two days on the course. The girls worked on all aspects of the game, including putting, chipping, pitching, bunker play, and their full swings. They were also exposed to etiquette and the Rules of Golf.

During the last two weeks of the season, the girls were lucky enough to play four matches against the Junior Varsity teams from Hingham and Notre Dame Academy, a daunting task for middle school students new to the game. Though they were narrowly defeated both times by NDA, they escaped with their first victories against Hingham! The final match of the season featured their first 9-hole regulation round as a team and it was played at South Shore Country Club. They won six out of the eight of their individual matches against all high school girls.

Given the success and enthusiasm of the program, the goal is to make the team a Cohasset High School Varsity Sport. I could not be more proud of the courage, maturity, and growth the girls showed throughout the duration of the season.

GYMNASTICS

Championship caliber

Head over Heels gymnasts at Nationals

"I am going to take first today," declared Caroline Videtto, of Kingston- one of the many hard-working, determined gymnasts from Head Over Heels in Norwell.

Caroline confidently set her goal high, for the Xcel Regional gymnastics meet, and much to her excitement, first place she took! This marks the first year Mass. gymnasts, from the USAG Xcel program, had the opportunity to compete in a regional meet against gymnasts from NH, VT, CT, RI, ME and NY.

In total, eleven Head Over Heels gymnasts qualified to represent the state of Massachusetts the weekend of June 8. Neve Sannella, Olivia McNamara, Natalie Greenbaum, and Olivia Ricard from Scituate; Meaghan Bishop and Mary Kate Armstrong from Hanover; Clare Trinchet, Raina Kenigsberg, Maeve Lyons, and Hannah Kelman from Hingham; and Caroline Videtto from Kingston all competed.

In addition to our regional qualifiers, Head Over Heels had many successes at the Mass. state meet, thanks to the following accomplished, State Champions: Rowan Woodin from Hingham, Emma Thomas from Cohasset, MacKenzie Caldwell from Marshfield, Emma Butzbach from Hanover, Madeline Schiller from Norwell, Caroline Videtto from Kingston, and Elizabeth Davidson and Olivia Ricard from Scituate.

Head Over Heels gymnasts diligently train for their meet season, two or three times per week, from Septmber through June, and most continue their training through the summertime. Passion for this sport and their teammates, drive them to train hard and reap the benefits of victory!

There is ongoing enrollment at Head Over Heels. Contact us at 781-659-3378 and check out our website at www.headoverheelsma.com.

U14 Coastal wins title

Boys Division2 wins Coastal Soccer 2013 championship

After finishing the spring season with an impressive 8-1-1 record, the Cohasset Boys U14 soccer team, won the Coastal League Championship this past Sunday.

Cohasset advanced to the league finals against Kingston with wins over Pembroke (3-0) and Hingham (4-0). Kingston handed Cohasset their only loss and tie of the regular season. With revenge on their minds and a place in the Massachusetts Tournament of Champions (MTOC) at stake, the Cohasset boys played their best game of the season in the finals. Cohasset won 2- 0 and will represent the town and the Coastal League in the state tournament this coming weekend in Lancaster, MA.

This is an accomplishment that very few players in the state, let alone Cohasset have achieved.

The team was lead by a very strong defense all season with George Bryan, Mitchell Buckley, Liam O'Connell, Andrew Sullivan, Sean McElhinney and Luca Curatola, all playing significant roles along the back line.

Michael Legge has yet to concede a goal in the playoffs as the team's goalie. The midfield of Cole Joslin, Gavin Dunkelberger, Jack Nee, Kyle McFetridge, Cameron Pattison, Jay Frederick and Brian Doyle provided defensive support and created scoring opportunities.

Up front, Nathaniel Purdy, Zander Arnold and Conor Joslin scored goals at crucial times during the playoffs. Head coach Andy Legge, with assistance from Liam O'Connell and Dave Frederick look forward to the team continuing its tremendous play this weekend in Lancaster against the best teams in the state.

Prior to 1972, there were no professional women's soccer teams, no Women's National Basketball Association, no college softball program that drew thousands of fans, and at some high schools and colleges, no sports for female athletes. Then came one of the most historic days in athletics.

"No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance." - Title IX

Before Title IX was signed into law, boys sports teams received precedence, getting gym time before girls, getting more practice time. Girls also had far less options than they do today. Just in the last decade, high schools have added girls lacrosse and ice hockey.

"I wish we could go see those women (the pioneers for Title IX) and say, 'Thank you,'" said Sammi Lehr, former Cohasset High basketball star now playing for Colby Sawyer College.

Title IX not only gave female athletes equality to their male counterparts, its effects were far-reaching and affected each other in different ways.

"It's equally important for the kids that aren't quite maybe the big athletes you hear about, but the other ones. I've seen many girls come into the programs, and we're teaching them the sport for the first time, and they come along and they finally get it," said Scituate's Linda Martin, who played college basketball with ESPN's Jackie MacMullan at the University of New Hampshire. "And you see such a transformation in their whole confidence level. They feel part of a team. They are so proud. You can just see the smiles on their faces. They take that new confidence and apply it to school. It's huge. Back to the old days, the only groups girls would have either didn't do much or maybe were a cheerleader. That whole other group of girls had nowhere to go."

The younger generation, current high school kids and those coming up through the youth ranks, certainly appreciate what they've been given, what they've been afforded to due to the tireless efforts of those who stood up, spoke up, and demanded equality for female athletes.

"Sports have been a major part of my life since I was a young girl," Norwell's Mary O'Connell said. "And without them, I don't think I would be as confident, responsible, and reliable. It's taught me leadership skills and (that) you have to be committed to a team all the time."

Choosing poor-quality vinyl windows is a mistake.

Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Call before July 13th!

BUY 1 WINDOW GET 1 WINDOW 40% OFF[1]

WITH

NO MONEY DOWN NO PAYMENTS NO INTEREST FOR 1 YEAR[1]

Minimum purchase of 4 or more. Interest accrues from date of purchase, but is waived if paid in full within 12 months.

Our Fibrex® material is 2X STRONGER THAN VINYL

We use the most stress-free installation method offered by Andersen Windows.

Because our windows are custom-built to fit precisely into your home, we don't disturb your home's interior or exterior. Our Master Installers are craftsmen who are as detailed about their window and patio door installations as they are about their clean up.

Choose your window styles, colors—and even your financing![1]

Choose a program where you don't pay anything for an entire year. Or maybe a low monthly payment feels good to you.[1] Tell us what works in your personal economy.

Cohasset High students visit Costa Rica

By Giselle Hart
Special to the Mariner

Nowhere else on earth can you find such density of flora and fauna, stunning fragrance, or blends of exotic species than in the richness of the tropical rainforest.

Over April Break, a group of 15 Cohasset High School students led by teachers Laura Humphrey and Ann Thomae traveled to Costa Rica on a conservation mission. The trip was organized through Ecology Project International.

For some of us, it was our second time visiting Costa Rica. But for most, it was our first time out of the country. All the same, what a week!

There is so much green, so much weather, so much biodiversity, so much range and culture packed into one little country, and yet, it is no bigger than the state of West Virginia. Tucked in between the bisection of the Caribbean and Cocoas tectonic plates, Costa Rica lies in one of the most seismically active regions in the world, and we can attest to that personally. It would take us two hours to drive distances that would only take 30 minutes here. We navigated through and around mountains in our affectionately named tour bus, "Bertha," all the while listening to our driver Sergio's awesome playlists and mixes —"Bohemian Rhapsody" may have made one or two appearances.

We started our trip in a rainforest surrounded by banana and pineapple plantations on the Caribbean coast. Nowhere else on earth can you find such density of flora and fauna, stunning fragrance, or blends of exotic species than in the richness of the tropical rainforest. We spent most of our free time learning about the country and the land, sea turtles, and conservation, but the trip was by no means a holiday on a relaxing five-star resort. From there we traveled to the Pacuare Nature Reserve, where we spent three grueling nights patrolling the beach to look for leatherback sea turtles laying their eggs.

Somewhere amidst the sticky humidity, banana plantations, poor plumbing, cold showers, impromptu guitar sing-alongs, and unremitting howler monkey calls, we fell in love with this country. We battled through the trials of a CODE TEN and staying up all night (literally) to watch sea turtles lay their nests. It was trying and it was awesome.

There is simplicity to life in Costa Rica that makes one feel alive, that makes the senses feel like they're on fire. It was corporeal, spiritual, and relaxing all at once.

As far as the food goes, I've got two words: rice and beans. For drinks, we tried a variety of juices that were always sweet and fresh, everything from orange juice to oatmeal water.

From Pacuare we visited a Costa Rican high school, where the students spoke very little English. As a result, where words failed, music did the translating. After their presentation of a dance around the maypole to Boney M's catchy "Brown Girl In The Ring," our CohoTico group gave an impromptu performance of "I'm Yours," followed by a dance party consisting of "Gangnam Style" and salsa dancing.

The trip ended with an overnight in the mountains and a day of whitewater rafting. There was so much to take-in the entire trip, that it is difficult to summarize the experience into one article. Perhaps, one of the most amazing parts was our last night; we stayed in the same hotel as our first night, and let's just say, the first night's stay was less than impressive. Yet, on the last night, after all we'd done (and one scorpion found in a bed later), it felt as though we had discovered a five-star resort, a gem hidden between the mountains and lowlands of Costa Rica.

BEGINNING JULY 7TH

St. Stephen's to host Sunday morning mass on the beach

"When they had gone ashore, they saw a charcoal fire there, with fish on it, and bread...Jesus said to them, 'Come and have breakfast.'
—John 21: 9,12-13

If you arrive early enough, your brain may still be as foggy as the seascape awaiting your arrival. Coffee in hand, you'll negotiate your way from the empty parking lot to the starkly deserted beach, and then slowly, intentionally, your lungs will breathe in a few deep inhalations of sweet, salty air. You'll notice the sun beginning to squeeze through the foggy mist, and then — as the cold sand squeezes through your toes, you'll swear that for just a moment you thought you saw him, sitting on his haunches — just over there — at the water's edge. "Come, have breakfast," you hear him beckon as you rub your still-sleepy eyes...Jesus, inviting you to break bread with him on the beach.

In half an hour the sun will burn off what remains of the morning's haze and your dreamlike vision of Jesus will fade into memory as a new one under the bright light of the sun begins to take form and shape: a growing crowd of casually clad people, clusters of smiling faces, chatting quietly and welcoming each new arrival. Families standing around barefoot, children playing in the sand...senior citizens relaxing in their folding chairs, walkers off to one side...zombie-like teenagers in pajama bottoms and t-shirts, squinting at the too bright sun...a black lab here, a Springer spaniel there...

The altar catches your eye with its simple beauty. A stoneware communion set stands regally atop a white, cloth-covered card table — three large, pink conch shells paying homage before it. In the foreground, a driftwood cross — bits of sea glass and fishing net adorning its outstretched arms.

Someone smiles and hands you what looks like a menu — a laminated sheet of paper printed on both sides with the prayers for Holy Communion. "Good morning," he says, "we're glad you're here."

The service starts with a moment of silence in which to listen to the waves whispering in the distance hypnotically. The wind brushes against your face and in the absence of human sound you notice with shared surprise the sudden awareness that this is amazing, this is breathtakingly beautiful, there is something going on here and whatever it is we're all feeling it: God is in this place. God's Spirit is in this gathering. We are about to break bread with Jesus on the beach!

A dog barks, a child coos something about her "dwoggie," and grinning widely, the priest extends her arms and says, "Blessed be God: Father, Son and Holy Spirit."

"And blessed be God's kingdom, now and forever," you respond with the others — and you know now that you are just exactly where you're meant to be.

Susan Sturdy

COHASSET – Susan Sturdy, 57, of Cohasset, passed away on June 16, 2013 after a valiant battle with cancer. She was surrounded by family and loved ones at the time of her passing.

Susan was born Oct. 4, 1955 in Boston, Massachusetts. A graduate of Harvard College and Boston University School of Law, Susan practiced in Boston at law firms Goodwin Procter and Mintz Levin. Eventually, she moved to Fidelity Investments, where she spent the last sixteen years of her career. A brilliant corporate lawyer, Susan loved her job, and continued to work through her illness. But most of all she treasured her colleagues, many of whom she considered close friends.

Susan was not only a gifted lawyer, but also an avid gardener, cook, seamstress, interior designer, and landscape architect. Her Cohasset home is a tribute to her artistic talents. She loved to entertain family and friends, especially during the holidays, which she had a special knack for making truly magical. She loved captaining her classic speedboat on the warm waters of Peconic Bay with the gentle summer breeze in her hair. She had a wonderful sense of humor and she laughed often, usually to the point of tears. She knew something about just about everything, and her sage advice will be sorely missed by those closest to her.

Above all else in life, Susan's pride and joy were her three children.

Susan is survived by her much loved long-time companion, John O'Reilly, her parents Robert and Joyce Sturdy, of Cohasset, and her three children, Katherine Englander and Elizabeth Englander of New York City, and Thomas Hislop of Cohasset. She is also survived by her four brothers Robert of Marshfield, David and his wife Charlotte of Scituate, James and his wife Gwen of Williamsburg, Va., Charles and his wife Stacy of Cohasset, and her sister Jean and her husband John Snyder of Topsfield, as well as thirteen truly beloved nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were held at the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset, MA on Thursday, June 20, 2013 from 5 - 8 p.m. A Funeral Service was held at St. John's Episcopal Church in Hingham, MA, June 23, 2013 at 2 p.m

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Dana Farber Cancer Institute to honor Dr. Patrick Wen and his colleagues, who gave us so much wonderful time with Susan, or to South Shore Hospice, which gave us great comfort in the final days.

Gluten-free meals

Get your gluten-free menu started with these tips:

■ Start your day with a gluten-free English muffin that's crispy outside, fluffy inside and topped with delicious, nutritious goodies. Try topping yours with mashed avocado that's been whisked with crushed chili, a splash of lime juice and a pinch of salt. Or, if you like something sweeter, try gluten-free almond butter with raspberries, blackberries or a dash of cinnamon sugar.

■ Go beyond the basics for your midday meal with a standout sandwich. Rethink tuna salad by using Dijon mustard instead of mayo and adding capers, diced sundried tomatoes and preserved lemon. Or go for a veggie extravaganza with portobello mushrooms, roasted red peppers, crunchy sprouts and hummus.

■ Everyone loves pizza for dinner. Using gluten-free tortillas, the whole family can create personalized mini-pizzas with thin, crunchy crusts. Simply assemble the toppings of choice and either grill or toast in the oven.

EASY RECIPE

Chicken Satay

Prep time: 15 minutes
Refrigerate: 1 hour
Cook time: 6 minutes

■ 2 T fish sauce
■ 2 T red curry paste
■ 2 t minced fresh lemon grass
■ 1 pound boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into 3/4-inch strips
■ Bamboo skewers
■ 1/2 cup store-bought peanut satay sauce

Mix coconut milk, fish sauce, curry paste and lemon grass in small bowl until well blended. Place chicken in large resealable plastic bag or glass dish. Add marinade; toss to coat well.

Refrigerate 1 hour or longer for extra flavor. Remove chicken from marinade. Discard any remaining marinade.

Soak bamboo skewers thoroughly in water for at least 30 minutes before threading with chicken. This prevents them from burning when on the grill.

Thread chicken strips onto skewers. Broil or grill over medium-high heat 3 minutes per side or until chicken is cooked through. Serve with peanut satay sauce for dipping.

Fourth of July is not complete without apple pie

By Lisa Messinger
Creators Syndicate

Freedom is the name of the game on the Fourth of July. So why not extend that privilege in a fun way to your party guests' taste buds?

Alongside your red, white and blue decorations, paper plates and cups, make everything you set on the outdoor buffet a playful and delicious choice they can decide upon, such as:

■ Platters of large, juicy red, green and purple grapes.

■ Bowls of bananas and plantains.

■ Salad bar with romaine, arugula and spinach.

■ Angus beef hot dogs, turkey hot dogs and tofu hot dogs.

■ White frankfurter buns, wholegrain frankfurter buns and pretzel frankfurter buns.

■ All-American, Dijon and spicy mustard.

■ Plain potato chips, sour cream and chive potato chips and cheddar potato chips.

■ Orange juice, orange soda and orange-flavored iced tea.

And for dessert, why not serve both this outstanding all-American apple pie and the famed French upside-down apple pie (tarte tatin).

Lisa Messinger is a first-place winner in food writing from the Association of Food Journalists and the author of seven food books, including "Mrs. Cubbison's Best Stuffing Cookbook" and "The Sourdough Bread Bowl Cookbook."

All-American Apple Pie

Yields 1 9-inch pie

■ 1 (9-inch) store-bought or homemade pie crust that includes top and bottom
■ 6 to 8 preferably firm and slightly tart apples, such as Granny Smith, Gravesteins or Rhode Island Greenings (about 3 pounds)
■ Granulated sugar (see note)
■ Ground cinnamon, to taste
■ About 3 T sifted all-purpose flour
■ 3 T butter, cut in small bits

SXC.HU/ORB

If crusts are homemade, keep them chilled. Preheat oven to 375 F.

Peel and core the apples and slice them about 1/4-inch thick. Toss with sugar and cinnamon and with the flour.

Fill the pie's bottom crust with apple slices, mounding them somewhat in center. Dot with butter. Cover loosely with top crust, using a little water to seal crusts together. Crimp edges using a fork or the tip of a knife, making several dents in the top crust.

Place in the preheated oven and bake for 1 hour, or until golden brown and giving off a pleasant scent. Preferably serve warm.

Note: The amount of sugar is determined by how sweet the apples are.

Puff Pastry Tarte Tatin

Yields 6 to 8 servings

■ 1/4 pound (1 stick) unsalted butter
■ 1 1/2 cups sugar, divided
■ 10 Golden Delicious apples
■ 2 T lemon juice
■ 1 9-inch circle pre-baked puff pastry (see note)

Preheat oven to 350 F.

In a 9-inch ovenproof skillet, melt butter over medium-high heat. Stir in 1/2 cup of the sugar and cook, stirring constantly until it turns golden brown. Carefully remove from heat and set aside.

Peel, core and quarter the apples. In a nonreactive bowl, toss together the apples and lemon juice. Arrange apple quarters rounded sides down in the ovenproof skillet, like a flower pattern, filling in the gaps with more apples placed curved side up. Sprinkle 1/2 cup sugar over the apples. Cook over medium heat until the apples start to brown, about 5 minutes.

Transfer the skillet to the oven and cook until the apples are tender, 20 to 30 minutes more. Remove from the heat and let the apples cool to room temperature.

Before serving, preheat the broiler.

Return the pan to medium heat, just until the caramel softens enough for apples to loosen. Remove the pan from the heat and top the apples with the pre-baked pastry. Invert a round heatproof serving platter over the pastry and, carefully holding the platter and skillet together, invert them; then lift off skillet to unmold the tarte tatin onto the platter. If any apples stick to the skillet or become dislodged, replace them on the tarte tatin. Sprinkle the top evenly with the remaining sugar and caramelize it very briefly under the broiler.

Summer is the season for fruity beverages

By Kathryn Rem
More Content Now

Summer officially started June 21, and that's the perfect season for fruit beverages. Not only are they hydrating, they supply vitamins, minerals, fiber and great taste.

Thanks to Diana Schumacher of Springfield, Ill., for sharing a few of her favorites.

KATHRYN REM

Grapefruit and Strawberry Shake

Makes 4 servings

■ 1 cup fresh grapefruit juice, well chilled
■ 1 (8-oz) vanilla yogurt
■ 1 cup fresh, very ripe strawberries, hulled and halved
■ 1/2 cup cold water

In container of electric blender, combine juice, yogurt, strawberries and water. Cover; blend until smooth. Pour mixture into large pitcher. Keep refrigerated.

Horseradish

Besides cocktail sauce, how do you use horseradish? The Trading Post would like your recipes. If you have any, please send them in.

Strawberry Surprise

Makes 4 servings

■ 1 cup skim milk
■ 8 ounces frozen strawberries
■ 3 ounces orange juice concentrate
■ 1 banana, cut into chunks and frozen
■ 1 cup pineapple chunks

Place all ingredients in blender and process until smooth.

Fresh Fruit Slush

Makes 8 servings

■ 3 cups melon (cantaloupe or honeydew), cut into pieces
■ 1 cup frozen strawberries or blueberries
■ 1 banana
■ 2 cups unsweetened apple cider, cold

Freeze melon, berries and banana 8 hours or overnight. Place frozen fruit and cold cider in blender or food processor. Blend until smooth. Garnish with a few berries if you want.

Note: This tastes better when the fruit is a little overripe.

If crusts are homemade, keep them chilled. Preheat oven to 375 F.

Peel and core the apples and slice them about 1/4-inch thick. Toss with sugar and cinnamon and with the flour.

Fill the pie's bottom crust with apple slices, mounding them somewhat in center. Dot with butter. Cover loosely with top crust, using a little water to seal crusts together. Crimp edges using a fork or the tip of a knife, making several dents in the top crust.

SXC.HU/ORG

Place in the preheated oven and bake for 1 hour, or until golden brown and giving off a pleasant scent. Preferably serve warm.

Note: The amount of sugar is determined by how sweet the apples are.

Puff Pastry Tarte Tatin

Yields 6 to 8 servings

■ 1/4 pound (1 stick) unsalted butter
■ 1 1/2 cups sugar, divided
■ 10 Golden Delicious apples
■ 2 T lemon juice
■ 1 9-inch circle pre-baked puff pastry (see note)

Preheat oven to 350 F.

In a 9-inch ovenproof skillet, melt butter over medium-high heat. Stir in 1/2 cup of the sugar and cook, stirring constantly until it turns golden brown. Carefully remove from heat and set aside.

Peel, core and quarter the apples. In a nonreactive bowl, toss together the apples and lemon juice. Arrange apple quarters rounded sides down in the ovenproof skillet, like a flower pattern, filling in the gaps with more apples placed curved side up. Sprinkle 1/2 cup sugar over the apples. Cook over medium heat until the apples start to brown, about 5 minutes.

Transfer the skillet to the oven and cook until the apples are tender, 20 to 30 minutes more. Remove from the heat and let the apples cool to room temperature.

Before serving, preheat the broiler.

Return the pan to medium heat, just until the caramel softens enough for apples to loosen. Remove the pan from the heat and top the apples with the pre-baked pastry. Invert a round heatproof serving platter over the pastry and, carefully holding the platter and skillet together, invert them; then lift off skillet to unmold the tarte tatin onto the platter. If any apples stick to the skillet or become dislodged, replace them on the tarte tatin. Sprinkle the top evenly with the remaining sugar and caramelize it very briefly under the broiler.

Summer is the season for fruity beverages

By Kathryn Rem
More Content Now

Summer officially started June 21, and that's the perfect season for fruit beverages. Not only are they hydrating, they supply vitamins, minerals, fiber and great taste.

Thanks to Diana Schumacher of Springfield, Ill., for sharing a few of her favorites.

KATHRYN REM

Grapefruit and Strawberry Shake

Makes 4 servings

■ 1 cup fresh grapefruit juice, well chilled
■ 1 (8-oz) vanilla yogurt
■ 1 cup fresh, very ripe strawberries, hulled and halved
■ 1/2 cup cold water

In container of electric blender, combine juice, yogurt, strawberries and water. Cover; blend until smooth. Pour mixture into large pitcher. Keep refrigerated.

Horseradish

Besides cocktail sauce, how do you use horseradish? The Trading Post would like your recipes. If you have any, please send them in.

Strawberry Surprise

Makes 4 servings

■ 1 cup skim milk
■ 8 ounces frozen strawberries
■ 3 ounces orange juice concentrate
■ 1 banana, cut into chunks and frozen
■ 1 cup pineapple chunks

Place all ingredients in blender and process until smooth.

Fresh Fruit Slush

Makes 8 servings

■ 3 cups melon (cantaloupe or honeydew), cut into pieces
■ 1 cup frozen strawberries or blueberries
■ 1 banana
■ 2 cups unsweetened apple cider, cold

Freeze melon, berries and banana 8 hours or overnight. Place frozen fruit and cold cider in blender or food processor. Blend until smooth. Garnish with a few berries if you want.

Note: This tastes better when the fruit is a little overripe.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 8, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't be Sheepish about asking questions and demanding answers. You not only gain needed information, but also respect for your steadfast search for the truth.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A money problem that shows up early in the week is expeditiously resolved by savvy Bovines who know how to turn a momentary financial lapse into a monetary gain.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good time to shed negative energy-draining forces and develop a positive approach to handling current, as well as upcoming, personal and/or professional situations.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your urge to do your best on a current task is commendable. But don't let it become all-consuming. Spend some spiritually restorative time with those who love you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This could be a good time for all you Leos and Leonas to take your bows for your recent achievements and then go off to enjoy some fun times with your prides and joys.

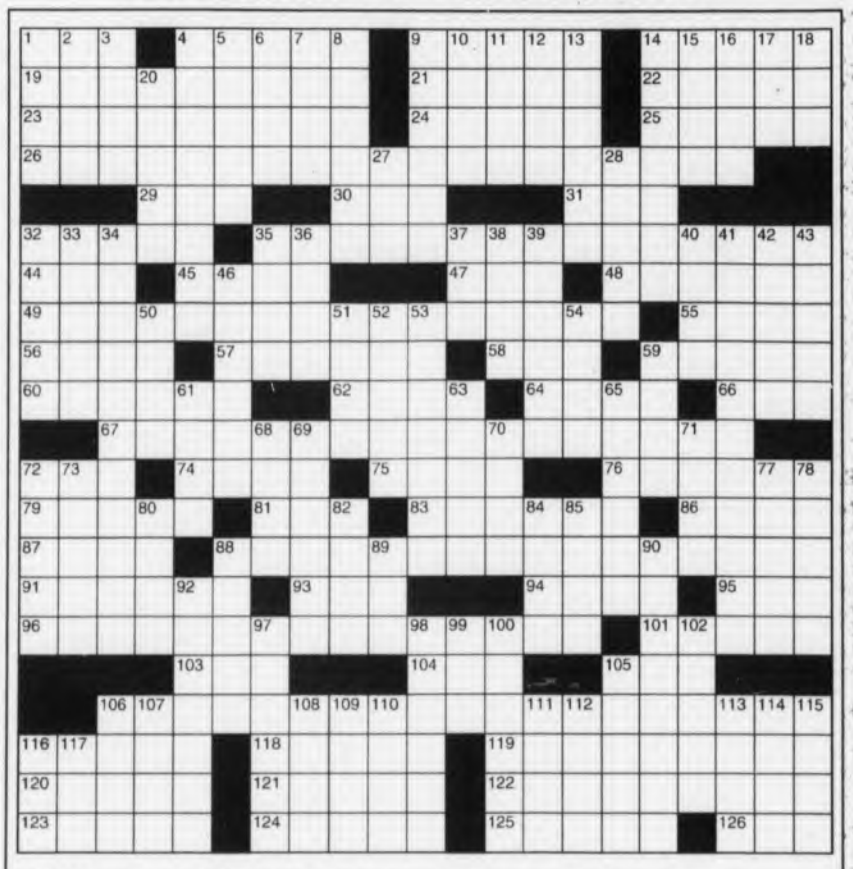
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A negative response to a well-intentioned suggestion could communicate a sense of distrust you might later find hard to refute. Think carefully before reacting.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your loving attention comforts a family member who is feeling a bit out of sorts. But be careful to prioritize your time so you don't neglect your work duties.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your curiosity might be resented by some. But those who know you will support your penchant for never settling for less than the truth. So stay with it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A pesky situation from the past recurs, albeit in an altered form. Deal with it promptly before it can go from merely irksome to decidedly troublesome.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't wait too long to submit your proposals after giving them a last look-over. If necessary, you should be able to defend any portion called into question.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A bid to use your workplace dispute-settling skills in another situation is tempting. But be careful: You might not have all the facts you'll need if you agree to do it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) That sense of self-doubt is so untypical of you, you should have no qualms in shaking it off. Remind yourself of all you've done and can do, and then do it again.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to charm others without sacrificing sincerity is what makes people want to follow your leadership.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

POST-TRI

First-timers, veterans talk about tackling the tri

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Last Sunday, June 30, Cohasset held its annual race that celebrates athletic achievement and the human spirit. The quarter-mile swim at Sandy Beach, 12-mile bike along Jerusalem Road, and 5K run through downtown attracts over 1,000 triathletes to Cohasset each year.

Talking to participants, it seems that the seventh annual Cohasset Triathlon was a smashing success.

Bill Burnett, the triathlon's founder and director, who owns and operates Streamline Events, said that he could not have hoped for a better race day.

"I couldn't have asked for a more seamless event — this was a 10 out of 10," said Burnett. "The mood was at an all-time high. The race exhibited a friendly competitive vibe and everyone seemed to have a terrific race experience — something we strive for every year."

It's an event that raises funds for a cause – the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) – while also trying to showcase the community that supports it. The race started off with the swim at 7:45 a.m. Sunday, and Sandy Beach was open for beach-goers by noon the same day. Main Street was cleared by approximately 9:30 a.m., and many cyclists were stopped along the bike route, which winds past St. Anthony's church, in order to accommodate parishioners attending church services that morning.

"Everyone pulled together as a unified team, and it showed. The triathlon brings out the best in our incredible community."
Bill Burnett, Race Director

It's believable when Burnett says, then, "it takes an army to execute this event.

"So many thanks go out to my coordination team, our volunteers, and all of the town departments,"

POLICE CHIEF

Search stopped

Split vote to wait for new Town Manager

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset will not have a new police chief anytime soon — despite the fact that the chief's position is currently budgeted and the town has received about 30 resumes from applicants for the position.

Deputy Chief William Quigley has been serving as Acting Police Chief since former chief Mark DeLuca was suspended in May 2012. DeLuca's contract with the town was not renewed when it expired in January 2013.

A vote by the Board of Selectmen last Thursday, June 27, halted the search for a new chief. The search has been underway since March. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski first advertised the position with the board's directive, then was asked to revise the advertisement and post it in the Boston Sunday Globe, MMA Bulletin and Monster.com, not just the State Police department Criminal Justice Information Services (CJIS) database. Milanoski complied and also rewrote the advertisement.

The selectmen later voted to hire a consulting firm to hold an assessment center once finalists were chosen from among the chief candidates.

The Cohasset Police Association's union president Michael Lopes said that the union feels the selectmen's vote to stop the process has "an adverse effect" on the department.

"All members of the Cohasset Police Association understand there's a process that has to be followed in regards to finding, choosing, and appointing a chief," said Lopes. "The members are proud to serve the town of Cohasset and its citizens, but we believe town leaders have a responsibility to the union

Selectmen admit to OML violation

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Mariner alleged that the discussions on who should serve as chairman had happened behind the scenes sometime between the election on Saturday May 11 and the board's Tuesday, May 14 meeting, a violation of the law.

Last Thursday, June 27, the Board of Selectmen admitted to violating the state's Open Meeting Law during their May 14 meeting, which was their first meeting following the annual Town Election.

The Cohasset Mariner filed a complaint with the Town Clerk and Selectmen's office on June 12 alleging that the selectmen violated the state OML on May 14, during which the board reorganized and appointed new officers for the year.

During the May 14 meeting, Fred Koed was unanimously elected as the new chairman with no discussion after being nominated by Martha Gjesteby; Karen Quigley seconded the nomination. Diane Kennedy, who had served as vice-chair for the previous year, was re-appointed vice-chair, also with little discussion. The Mariner alleged that the discussions on who should serve as chairman had happened behind the scenes sometime between the election on Saturday May 11 and the board's Tuesday, May 14 meeting, a violation of the law.

The Mariner found the lack of public discussion this year

Cohasset Historical Society museums open

What
Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum

About
The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Hours
The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

POLICE BEAT

Another rear-end collision at the Stop & Shop lights

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

2-car MVA

Police responded to a two-car motor vehicle accident on Route 3A near Stop & Shop on Friday (June 28) at 4:43 p.m. Police said a 27-year-old Cohasset woman in a 2006 Nissan sedan was headed north when she stopped at the light and was rear-ended by a 2011 Toyota Sienna sedan, operated by a 71-year-old Scituate man. The driver of the Sienna was cited for following too closely. There were no injuries but the Nissan had to be towed, police said.

Last week (June 27) a police vehicle was rear-ended at the light at Stop & Shop by a pickup truck operated by a Scituate man.

Missing meds

An elderly woman at Harborview Apartments reported to police last Tuesday (June 25) that she was missing some medications and money. However, she was not sure if the meds and money were lost or stolen.

Solicitors

Police responded to two reports last week about door-to-door solicitors who had not registered and obtained a permit from the police. The first call came in on Tuesday (June 25) about 5 p.m. from Forest Avenue about a man soliciting business for a contractor. Police located the individual and told him he needed to register and obtain a permit.

An unrelated complaint was received at 6:12 p.m. on Thursday (June 27) about a subcontractor who works for Verizon, who was selling the Fios service door-to-door without a permit. This man was 26 and from Randolph. He was also told to obtain a permit.

Police said neither man involved in the incidents last week has applied for a permit.

Under the town's bylaw, solicitors are required to register with the police and apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear a photo ID issued by the police.

Exceptions to the bylaw would be town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Flat tire

A 32-year-old Marshfield woman in a 2010 Lexus was headed north on King Street (Route 3A) when she hit a rock or large object that caused a flat tire on Wednesday (June 26) around 12:30 p.m. She continued on to an area near lower King Street where she could pull over safely and called AAA.

Police could not find the object she struck in the road.

Hitchhiking

Police gave a 68-year-old Scituate man, who had been hitchhiking on King Street (Route 3A) by Sohier Street a ride to his home on Glades Road in Scitute on Wednesday (June 26) around 8:20 p.m. after receiving a complaint about a man walking in the street. Police said it is illegal to hitchhike on a state highway.

Cross

Police were unable to locate a man who was seen walking along Chief Justice Cushing Highway toward Scituate carrying a large cross. The same man has been spotted in other towns. A caller reported seeing the man with a large cross on wheels at 12:50 p.m. on Thursday (June 27).

Unregistered

An officer stopped at 2005 Dodge Caravan on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Pond Street at around 7 p.m. on Thursday (June 27) because the registration sticker on the license plate had expired. The 55-year-old Scituate man was cited for driving an unregistered motor vehicle and the mini-van was towed, police said.

Acting strange

A 24-year-old Hull man reported to police last Friday at 3:28 pm. that a man had been in side the salon that is off Chief Justice Cushing Highway and had been acting strangely. No plate or direction of travel was provided. Police said to call back if the suspicious man came back.

Tenant-landlord

An ongoing dispute between the landlord and a local establishment continued last Friday when the business reported a verbal dispute with the landlord over parking. The tenant also alleges the landlord used ethnic slurs in the argument, a charge the landlord denies.

Disturbance

Police sent a group of 20- and 21-year-olds on their way after receiving a complaint about people yelling, swearing, throwing rocks in the water and causing a disturbance by the Border Street bridge around 12:50 a.m. on Saturday (June 29).

Summonsed

On officer conducting traffic enforcement on Forest Avenue on Saturday (June 29) observed a 2005 Hyundai sedan pass by with an expired inspection sticker. The officer pulled the car over, which was operated by a 27-year-old Scituate man. A check through the Registry of Motor Vehicles showed the operator's license had been suspended for failure to pay fines. The man is being summonsed to court for operating with a suspended license (subsequent offense) and for having an expired inspection sticker. The car was towed, police said.

Intoxicated

A 26-year-old Boston man who was passed out outside the Harbor Inn was transported to the hospital on Saturday (June 29) around 10:16 p.m. by ambulance. Police said he appeared to be suffering from alcohol poisoning. Investigation revealed he was not a registered guest at the inn. It appeared that someone dropped him off there, police said.

Parking lot

A 43-year-old Plymouth woman in a 2008 Jeep SUV is being summonsed to court for leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage after she allegedly struck a 2011 Ford sedan in the parking lot of the Music Circus following a show and drove off. The 55-year-old Milton woman in the Ford got the license plate of the Jeep. There was damage to the front right of the Ford. The detail officer at the Music Circus called a patrol car to the scene.

Trash picked up

A caller observed trash being tossed from a vehicle near Forest Avenue and Surry Drive on Sunday (June 30) around 3:44 p.m. and provided police with the plate number. The plate came back to a 51-year-old Cohasset man who reported that his 18-year-old son had the vehicle and had gone to Wheelwright Park. Police located the teen and a passenger, also 18, at the park. They returned and picked up the trash, police said.

Stickers needed

Police remind residents that the all-facility stickers are on sale at Town Hall that allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, as well as parking at all areas in town that require a sticker such as Sandy Beach, Wadleigh Park, Government Island and the end of Parker Avenue. Police have been ticketing parking violators.

Koed gets majority vote condemning phony signs

Gaumer objects to 'discussing the obvious'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen voted this week to condemn phony election signs placed around town before the May 11 Town Election. Police are still investigating to try and determine who was responsible. COURTESY PHOTO

One selectman voted against a statement condemning fraudulent campaign signs placed around Cohasset a few days before the May 11 Town Election.

Selectman Steve Gaumer, who won one of two selectmen seats in a four-way race, voted against the rest of the board when it came to accepting a statement prepared by Town Counsel Richard Hucksam that disapproved of the false signs.

The signs mentioned then selectmen candidate Karen Quigley and linked her to fired town manager Michael Coughlin, saying that a vote for her would "bring back" Coughlin to Cohasset. Coughlin as filed suit against the town, seeking reinstatement.

Quigley said when they were placed that these were not her campaign signs and constituted election fraud. She filed a report with the town's police department.

Koed said that he has worked on many political campaigns over the years and knows election fraud when he sees it. It's not a matter of free speech, since the signs closely resemble authentic political signs and use a person's name, Koed explained. Town Counsel's statement cited Mass. General Laws against the practice; if prosecuted, an individual committing election fraud could be punished with a hefty fine ($1,000) or imprisonment of up to six months.

The statement concluded that the board of selectmen "condemns this behavior and hopes that it does not reoccur in the future."

"My intention is to create public awareness around this," Koed said during the board's June 27 meeting. "Hopefully it doesn't happen again... This is not the town of Cohasset."

Gaumer said that while he appreciated the sentiment, he felt the statement was more "directive than investigative." He added that he spent an hour and a half of his time being interviewed by a police detective on this matter. "It's not an activity I appreciate being investigated on."

Gaumer indicated that the selectmen's votes could be better spent, suggesting sarcastically "we should also take votes at making sure we say please and thank you, and stop at stop signs."

Overall, Gaumer said he was tired of wasting the constituents' time "discussing the obvious."

Gaumer and Quigley won the election with Russ Bonetti, who is chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, a close third. Leland Jenkins lost his bid for a second term in the May 11 election.

Bonetti said later during the public comment period at the June 27 meeting that he was disappointed the board couldn't reach a majority vote on condemning the fake signs. "It's hard to believe there wasn't unanimity on that."

Bonetti added that he, too, was interviewed by a detective on the matter. "It took about a half-hour." And while Bonetti said that he agreed with Gaumer that perhaps the police "have bigger fish to fry" than finding out who made and posted the phony signs, the issue still "needs to be investigated."

Jack Keniley, Gaumer's campaign chairman, also spoke up during public comment and said that during the election, team Gaumer refrained from mud-slinging, and wished he "could say the same" of other candidates, indicating that some nasty emails were sent around.

"We went out of our way to run a clean campaign," said Keniley, adding that there were rumors that Quigley's campaign planted the signs to make her into a victim and garner a sympathy vote.

Quigley's response was incredulous: "Really, Jack? That's an absurd accusation. I did not do those signs; nobody associated with my campaign put those signs out. Really."

Koed said that he didn't hear any "pointing fingers" at anyone — he was making a simple statement on election fraud. "I'm hoping it won't happen here again."

TRIATHLON

Burnett added, including the police, fire, harbormaster's office and Dept. of Public Works (DPW). "Everyone pulled together as a unified team, and it showed. The triathlon brings out the best in our incredible community... We all should be proud of what we have built together as a team."

The Mariner previously interviewed first-time triathletes on their hopes, fears and anticipations, and why they wanted to "try the tri." The featured athletes were also asked to give their recap of the event, as were a few veteran triathletes.

Team Hoyt provided inspiration for many of this year's tri-athletes. PHOTOS/LAURA SINCLAIR

Veteran triathletes

One triathlete who has competed every year since the race's inception is resident Gabriel Gomez, who recently turned the national spotlight on Cohasset with his campaign for the U.S. Senate. Gomez lost the race to Congressman Ed Markey but won a majority of votes in Cohasset and across the South Shore.

Gomez said he had a good time on Sunday, however admitting that this race was not his personal best.

"It was painful. I hadn't done anything to get ready for it — I just did it," said Gomez. "I had signed up for it way before I knew I was going to do the Senate run... I could never miss it. Bill [Burnett] put on a phenomenal event. It gets better every year."

Gomez continued that it was "well worth it" to be part of such an event, ready or not. "It's gotten so high-profile, it's one of the premier triathlons in the country. It sells out in 15 to 20 minutes [when registration opens] in December; you literally have to be online the second it goes on sale."

The Boston businessman turned Senate hopeful said that he plans to race in next year's tri. "I'll do it every year, just like I think I'll do the Boston Marathon every year. I did it this year; it's such an emotional thing. Those are two events I'll make sure I do every year, no matter what."

Cohasset resident Jason Soules, who competed on Sunday and has done so every year, like Gomez, said that for him, the triathlon is the highlight of the year.

Soules said that what he likes best about the tri is how it showcases "the beauty of our town and the spirit of our residents. The event uniquely energizes a broad spectrum of the community to come together, to race, volunteer, and/or cheer," he said. "It was great fun, as I rode and ran past, saying 'hi' to all of the supporters in their yards or out at the end of their driveways."

Another multi-year participant is Rob Simms, who said that all seven triathlons have been "amazingly well-run." Simms compared Cohasset's triathlon to others he has raced in.

Cohasset's "course is well thought out and is safe for the participants," said Simms, "and at the same time it provides plenty of challenge for experienced and novice triathletes alike."

Simms also boasted of the events' record sell-out each year, calling the event "a classic among regional triathletes." Perhaps most importantly for Cohasseters, "it also showcases our town and brings it together for a great cause."

Judy Stavis has also done the tri over the past seven years, and appreciates what it has done for the Cohasset community.

"Athletically, it has inspired many to branch out from their comfort zone and set a goal of completing a sprint triathlon, including my daughter, who has been watching the race year after year waiting to become of age to compete herself," Stavis said. "This race has also inspired our community to do more and give more, individually and collectively."

Stavis also thanked Burnett "for bringing his dream to our town and watching the tri grow into a 'rockstar' event where friends, family and athletes come together to volunteer, compete, and support each other and the JDRF fund through this event."

Like Gomez, Stavis noted that the event "gets better and better every year!"

First time at the tri

Each of the Mariner's five featured "first-timers" gave a recap of their triathlon experience.

Cohasset volunteer brings ice to racer in need

Cohasset Triathlon founder/director Bill Burnett was happy to report post-race that there were only very minor medical issues during the event.

One triathlete is especially grateful to a Cohasset woman who helped make his race easier.

John Young of Salem, who has competed in other triathlons before but raced in his first Cohasset Tri this Sunday, shared how a Cohasset resident assisted him during his run.

"I am a little person (LP) or dwarf and have been racing in triathlons for five years now. My back has been giving me trouble these past few weeks and it really played itself out in the run on Sunday," said Young. "About halfway through the run, I passed a water stop at a home and asked if they had any ice. They didn't, but offered to go in the house to get some. I said, 'please, don't bother' and kept going.

"About two minutes later, the lady who had offered ran up beside me and handed me a freezer bag full of ice," Young continued. "I thanked her and proceeded to dump it down the back of my top. It worked, and I was able to keep running."

Young was touched by the gesture, and said that it reflects upon Cohasset and the race itself.

"It was unexpected," said Young. "It really made for a great day. As a racer, the volunteers are what can make or break an event. Bill Burnett and [his company] Streamline Events put on top-notch races, and I can't wait to come back and race the Cohasset tri again next year."

For Meaghan Leahy, the event was a family affair. She raced alongside several of her cousins – who flew in from around the country for the event – while other family members cheered them on from the sidelines.

"We had a big family party after the tri — nine of us did it this year," Leahy said. "We had a small family competition. It was cool to see so many other cousins were excited and interested. There's a whole slew of 15 to 20 that will partake next year; hopefully next year we all get in so we can make this a family tradition."

As for her personal experience swimming, biking, and running in her first-ever tri, Leahy said she was happy with how she did.

"I finished — that's exactly what I wanted," she said. "The swim wasn't as difficult as I had originally prepped myself for." Leahy shared prior to the race that she was afraid of seaweed. "There were so many people in the water, after I came around the first buoy I sort of freaked out because there were so many people... but I backstroked through, so I didn't have to put my face in the water, and I made it through just fine."

For Leahy, "the run was the toughest part. It was the very end, and we were all so tired."

The first-time "tri-er" said that she drew inspiration from celebrity racers like Gomez, former U.S. Senator Scott Brown, and father-son Team Hoyt.

"It's inspiring, for sure," Leahy said of Team Hoyt in particular, the duo famous for the father – Dick, 73 – pushing his son Rick, 51, who is in a wheelchair, through over 1,090 similar races around the country over the past three decades. "If he can be pushing and pulling his son around," Leahy said of Dick, "I'm not doing so much."

Leahy is inspired to keep racing. Next, she and two of her cousins will tackle the Nike Women's Marathon in San Francisco this October.

"It was a good experience," she said of her first tri. "I'm just now excited to do more of them; I learned some things to do better next year."

Mary Fran Olson was also relieved to finish her first race. "I came in last in my age group, but I didn't have the worst time over all," she shared. "It was an amazing experience. So many people I knew were watching; being cheered on by name was exciting."

Like many others, Olson took her children to Team Hoyt's presentation and book signing at First Parish the day before the race, which she called "so inspirational. The kids got to see them racing, too."

Olson said that as a first-time triathlete, she appreciated that Cohasset's event "is so phenomenally run," and she enjoyed competing in "such an excellent race on home turf."

She added that she hopes to compete again next year, "hopefully without a broken toe," and "hopefully with a better time." Olson is also trying to convince some friends to join her next year, "so we can train together."

Christine Grossman, who lives near Olson, said that the two of them were often neck and neck during the race, and ended up working together as a team.

John McMahon, another first-time triathlete, said that one of the best parts of the tri came the day after, when he noticed several people around Cohasset still sporting the temporary tattoos with their race numbers from the day before, indicating, "I did the tri."

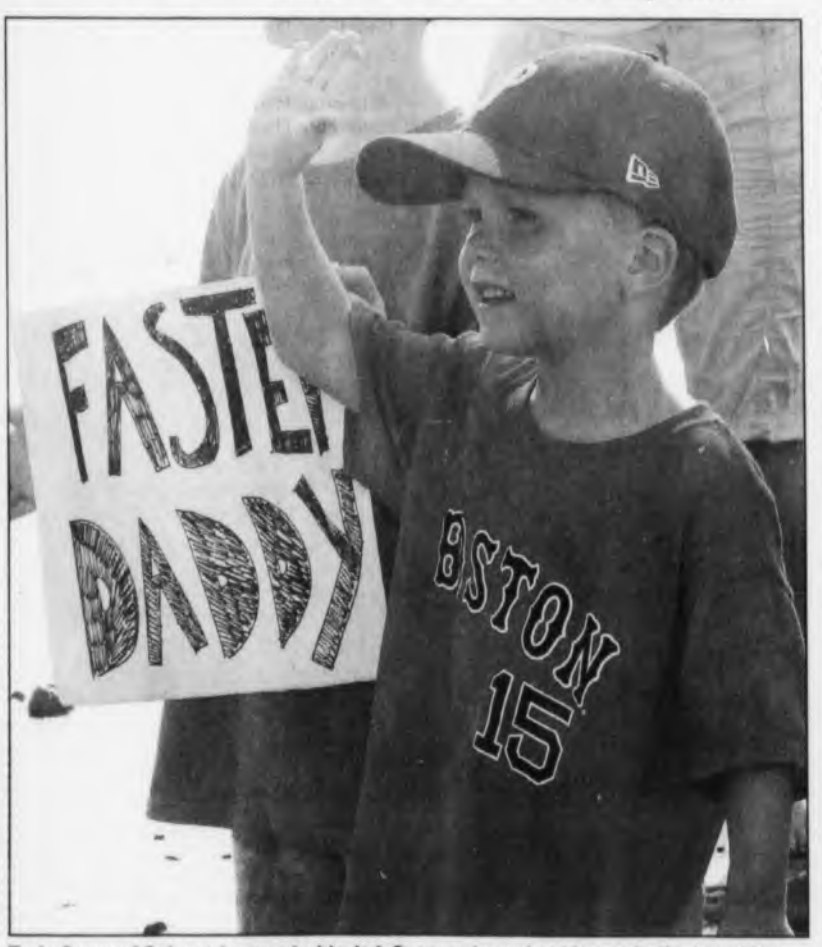
"They're hard to get off," McMahon joked of the tattoos.

He called the tri "an amazing experience," especially since it was his first. "I thought for a first-time triathlete, everything went according to plan. It was stressful when you first got there, but you noticed there were a lot of other first-time triathletes... Everyone was looking over their shoulders to make sure they got everything right.

"It was really so well done, it exceeded my expectations, how wonderful it was," McMahon continued. "I will never forget the feeling, how rubbery your legs feel [afterward]."

McMahon said that Sandy Beach provided a great place for his family to watch; the spectators around town were also a source of encouragement. He also appreciated that he could go online after the event and view what his finishing time was for each leg of the race, as well as the transition time.

"That was really cool," said McMahon. "If I'm lucky enough to get a number next year, I know what I can work on."



McMahon, like Leahy, was inspired by Team Hoyt. He also brought his daughter to the Hoyt's presentation Saturday.

"Dick and Rick were so great; their presentation was fantastic and inspiring," said McMahon. Team Hoyt's mantra also helped the new triathlete throughout his first race. "I thought to myself once or twice during the race, 'yes you can,' which is their motto — that helped."

So did something Burnett told the first-time triathletes, McMahon shared. "One word of advice: breathe. Both of those [phrases] really came in handy."

Overall, said McMahon, "It was an hour and a half-long smile for me." The newly minted triathlete added, "I'm already looking forward to next year."

First-time triathlete Jeff Weissensee summed up the experience. "The race was great— very difficult. You definitely earn every step and stroke you take."

Tavin Casey of Cohasset waves to his dad, Sean, as he makes his way to the transition area from the beach after the swim.

Brian Crumley and his son Bo, of Cohasset, enjoy the music of the Aldous Collins Band during the post race festivities.

TOWN MANAGER ACT:

Bill gets State House hearing in July

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"The Governance Committee voted yesterday [June 27], by a unanimous vote, that a delay in the passage of the TMA can be properly described as an emergency."
Christine Cunning, Governance Committee

Cohasset's Home Rule Petition to amend the Town Manager Act is on its way to becoming a state law, securing a hearing date for Tuesday, July 23 at the State House.

In a recent letter exchange between Cohasset's Governance Committee and State Rep. Garrett Bradley, the committee asked Bradley to help move the town's Home Rule Petition forward quickly in legislative process. Bradley told the committee during a meeting last month that the bill could take a while to be enacted into law; the worst-case scenario is by March 2014.

Changes to the TMA were voted on by the April 2013 Town Meeting and include clarifications on the roles of the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen. Perhaps most importantly, the revision removes a prohibition of town employees and volunteers from applying for the town manager position.

This change affects the pool of candidates who could apply for the job now that the selectmen voted earlier this summer to launch a search. Michael Milanoski has been Acting Town Manager since the selectmen voted to remove the last town manager, Michael Coughlin, in March 2012 after only six months on the job.

The retooled Act, which was originally enacted into state law in 1997, was submitted to the legislature, and then on to House Counsel, filed, and given a docket number [H. 3486] in May. Both the House and Senate voted to refer the bill to the Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government.

Bradley recently warned the Governance Committee, who drafted the changes voted on by Town Meeting, that the legislative process can be a lengthy one, and that while he and Senator Robert Hedlund would do their best to give the bill top priority, he did not want to build any false hope.

When asked why this bill was expected to take longer than Cohasset's original TMA, which became state law within a few months of Town Meeting's vote in 1997, Bradley said that perhaps at the time, former State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray had asked the legislature to approve the Act on an emergency basis. Cohasset was changing its form of government from a town administrator to town manager at the time.

Based on these comments, governance chair Christine Cunning wrote a letter to Bradley on June 28 indicating that her board voted that this TMA, too, constitutes an emergency.

"The Governance Committee voted yesterday [June 27], by a unanimous vote, that a delay in the passage of the TMA can be properly described as an emergency," Cunning stated in her letter to Bradley.

"This committee would like to see the legislation processed as quickly as possible because our work includes bringing current bylaws into compliance with revisions to the Cohasset Town Manager Act which the Town Meeting overwhelmingly approved," Cunning explained further.

Bradley responded to Cunning in a July 1 letter that he was forwarding her letter on to the Municipalities and Regional Government committee and that the committee's chairman informed him that the bill is scheduled for a hearing on July 23.

Bradley explained that he does not serve on the committee but said that he knows "various committees do their best to assign hearings as expeditiously as possible.

"Many committees have hundreds of bills so it takes some time to process them all," Bradley added.

Cunning also asked Bradley about a similar Home Rule Petition from the town of Sandwich being "bundled into an omnibus bill to be voted in July." She said that the governance committee would like the same consideration for Cohasset's bill.

Bradley responded that he had not heard of any plans to bundle bills. "Home rule bills, by nature, are stand alone pieces of legislation. I would be interested to speak with whoever gave you that information," he stated in his letter to the Governance Committee.

BRIEFLY

Committee appointments

The Board of Selectmen voted to approve a slew of committee appointments and reappointments during their Thursday, June 27 meeting.

Some town committee memberships are appointed by the selectmen, while others fall under the appointment of the Troika (a committee comprised of the Advisory Committee chairman, selectmen chair, and Town Moderator). Troika appointments include the Capital Budget and Alternative Energy Committees.

The selectmen made the following appointments and reappointments last week:

Cable Advisory: Paul Carlson, Pat Martin and Rick Schiffman

Community Preservation Committee: Susan Sardina, reappointed as the affordable housing representative.

Cultural Council: Mary Kennedy and Michael Riley.

Historical Commission: David Wadsworth and Peter Wood. Wadsworth recently stepped down as town archivist but voiced his desire to continue on the commission. Jackie Dormitzer was appointed as Town Archivist.

Open Space Committee: Dick Avery.

Stormwater Advisory Committee: James Fitzgerald.

The selectmen held off on voting on six positions for Elder Affairs at director Coral Grande's request. The board has three three-year positions and three associate positions up for appointment and/or reappointment.

The Senior Center Planning Committee has one position open, but selectmen liaison Diane Kennedy asked the board to wait on the appointment because the committee's charge needs tweaking.

Ground Level Coffeehouse

Cohasset's Ground Level Coffeehouse is hosting another night of good music, good community, and really good coffee on Friday, July 5 at Beechwood Congregational, 51 Church St..

The fun starts at 7 p.m. with an open mic night. Embracing the Independence Day theme, attendees can enjoy hot dogs, red, white and blue smoothies and, of course, a selection of coffee and tea.

Stick around to hear the sounds Joe Weydt of the Weydt, featured performer of the night.

VIOLATION

about reorganizing the Board of Selectmen surprising because of the hotly contested, four-way race for two open selectmen seats leading up to the May 11 Town Election. Quigley and Steve Gaumer were elected. Russ Bonetti, chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, was a close third followed by incumbent selectman Leland Jenkins, who lost his bid for a second term.

The town is also embroiled in controversy that includes lawsuits by former police chief Mark DeLuca and former town manager Michael Coughlin. Over the past year, the selectmen have been divided on how and when to proceed with a search for a permanent police chief and permanent town manager – all making the choice on who should lead the board in these tricky times worthy of public discussion, the Mariner believes.

In addressing the violation, Koed said during last week's that the "simplest course of action" was to assume a violation had occurred.

Gjesteby, who had nominated Koed for chairman, denied the violation and said that at the time she made the motion without knowing how the rest of the board would vote. Quigley, too, denied that any backdoor deliberations had been made, stating that if a violation had occurred, it was "unintentional."

However, Kennedy and Gaumer both indicated that behind the scenes discussions had gone on in between the May 11 election and the May 14 meeting, the board's first after the election.

Kennedy said that while an OML violation is tricky to prove, she came into the May 14 meeting having already heard that Koed was going to be elected chair.

"I was told by at least two people on Monday that the decision had been made, Fred would be chairman," said Kennedy, adding that the fact that this appeared to be "queued up" disturbed her.

Kennedy said last week that after spending a year as vice-chair, "Obviously I would have loved to have been chairman and spent the last year prepping to do so." However, she planned to state on May 14 that she would support Koed.

The selectmen vice-chair revealed that she also received an email from a chair of another town committee chair prior to the May 14 meeting that the sender said should have been addressed to Koed instead, since he would soon be the chairman. Kennedy said that she was now at peace with the situation and felt that the board should move forward and stop rehashing things.

Quigley commended Kennedy that she "handled the situation gracefully." However, Quigley chalked up any discussions on Koed becoming chair before the matter was actually voted to the town rumor mill. "I don't know how people came to that knowledge," she said. "I don't believe the open meeting law was broken... not intentionally."

Gaumer sang a different tune, calling the chairmanship "the worst kept secret the town's ever seen."

The new selectman elaborated. "The day of the meeting, I received three phone calls from people in town [stating that] the decision had been made."

Koed said he did not seek the chairmanship; Gaumer said he would take him at his word, however adding, "Where there's smoke, there's fire...This doesn't pass the smell test."

Gaumer wondered what the "plaintiff" – the Mariner – wanted. Koed responded, an admission on the violation and a workshop on the Open Meeting Law. The board agreed to hold one with Town Counsel sometime this summer. The selectmen also revoted the chairman and vice-chairman positions, as well as the position of secretary, which is held by Gjesteby. All votes, including the revote of the board positions, admission of the violation, and the one to hold an OML workshop, were unanimous.

The board had initially planned to discuss the Open Meeting Law in executive session two weeks ago over the objection of the Mariner. During the executive session that was also called for other matters, the board was advised to discuss the OML violation in open session hence last Thursday's discussion.

AROUND TOWN

Pilgrim Arena scholarships for Cohasset residents

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Happy Fourth!

Hi Cohasset...Happy 4th of July weekend to everyone. I hope that you are enjoying your celebrations, friends and families so far and will continue to do so throughout the weekend if you can. The weather has been interesting the past week or so to say the least but it looks like some summer-like days are on tap for us to enjoy. It is so nice to see the beach in action, the Summer Rec Camps and Farmers Market in full swing, Holly Hill Farmstand going strong...so many wonderful summer signs. Hooray!

Send me any of your event news, weekly programs, photos or summer fun special event information to share here in Around Town, just because Summer is here doesn't mean we don't want to know what's going on in town!

Triathlon

I want to congratulate all of the awesome participants in last weeks Cohasset Triathlon. The event is always so amazing to me from the planning, the orchestrating and of course, every champion who runs, swims and/or bikes in it, every one of you are a winner to me!

Police academy

Congratulations is being sent out to my son, Daniel Piepenbrink from all of us (myself, Dad, Calli and Cody,) his extended family and friends on his graduation last week from the Plymouth Police Academy. We all look forward to your career plans and choices in the future. Way to go Dan!

Boston College

Another Cohasset resident doing great work is Robert Troy who received a Bachelor of Science degree from the Carroll School of Management at Boston College. Robert, your family and friends are super proud of you, best of luck in all your future endeavors.

Scholarships

Congratulations to Maria Buckley and Matthew Gregory, who are each recipients of $7,500 Pilgrim Skating Arena Scholarships. Maria, a Montrose School graduate, will attend the University of Chicago, and Matt, a Cohasset High grad, is headed to Georgetown.

Maria and Matt were awarded their scholarships at a recent reception at the arena on Recreation Park Drive in Hingham. They were among a total of 10 recipients this spring from area high schools.

The arena has presented 470 scholarships over nearly 40 years, totaling $1.175 million. The scholarships are awarded to the most outstanding high school graduates among the dozens that apply each year.

BC High awards

Four young men from Cohasset, graduates of Boston College High School, recently won special awards at Senior Class Assembly, a time set aside to celebrate and reward its seniors.

Michael Fegreus won the Marci Fidelity Kearney Senior English award, the Animation Club Award and the Concert Band John Philip Sousa Award; Robert Hillman won the Director's award for Jazz Big Band; Trevor Schramn won the Campus Ministry St. Louis Project award, the Fireside Essay Scholarship, and the Hearts on Fire award for four or more Junior/Senior retreats; Zachary Strecker won the Diversity Cabinet Co-Curricular Award.

Congratulations all!

Med school

David Hansen, D.O., graduated from the West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine with a degree of Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine on May 25, 2013. David earned a bachelor of science degree in biology and a bachelor of arts degree in English from UMass-Boston in 2007. He is a 1996 graduate of Foxboro High School.

Hansen is the son of Hans and Maryanne Hansen of Tolland, Conn., and Cohasset, respectively. He is married to Wynee Lou. He plans to enter a general surgery program at William Beaumont Army Medical Center in El Paso, Texas.

On stage!

Guess what's coming to Cohasset in a few weeks? Disney's "High School Musical 2 Jr.,"that's what. It opens at Cohasset Dramatic Club as the first of their two summer musical theater workshop productions, on Friday, July 19th with a special performance for Cohasset's Summer Recreation Camp participants. The remaining performances are Friday and Saturday evenings at 7 p.m. and a Sunday.matinee at 2 p.m. All performances take place at the air-conditioned Cohasset Town Hall Theater. The 60-minute musical, designed for elementary- and middle school-aged performers, is based on the 2007 Disney Channel original film, a sequel to the wildly popular "High School Musical." The 42-member cast, made up of 8 – 13 year olds from the South Shore area is directed by Lisa Pratt of Cohasset with music direction by Mark Bono (Milton) and choreography by Tina Fabrizio (Scituate).

This Disney classic contains virtually all of the original music from the popular film. General admission tickets are $15 each and are available by reservation at 617-922-0280 or at the door one hour prior to each performance. For more information please visit at: cohassetdramaticclub.org. A great show for the family and one the kids won't want to miss.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Farmers Market: The local 'beet'

ERIN DALE

Summer is in full swing, and in Cohasset that means that each Thursday, the annual Farmers Market has taken over the town common. The tradition is in its 22nd season of bringing fresh, local produce to Cohasset.

Just as in seasons past, market vendors offer locally grown produce, fresh fish and lobster, homemade specialty and prepared foods such as breads, jellies, pies, cookies and snacks, handmade jewelry and crafts and more.

Special events are planned to span the summer and fall, from cooking demos to a pet parade. Local musicians also play on the town green to entertain patrons as they shop and sample delicious foods.

To those who love supporting the local economy and enjoying fresh fruit, veggies, and other locally made goodies, it's a magical time of year.

If eating what's local and in season is important to you, then the Cohasset market is the place to go. The organizers behind the farmers' market have compiled a list of what's currently in season and available at the market this month.

Now in season

July ushers in a wonderful abundance of fresh local produce. Here's what you can look forward to this month at the market: arugula, green beans, beets, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, chard, cucumbers, eggplant, garlic, lettuce, onions, peppers, radishes, spinach, summer squash and herbs.

Taylor Jesse of Cretinon Farm in Carver refills her sample box with fresh strawberries at the Cohasset Farmers Market. The market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m. on the common. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

To those who love supporting the local economy and enjoying fresh fruit, veggies, and other locally made goodies, it's a magical time of year.

Health tip

For a summer health tip, try cooking up some chard: the leafy green vegetable is a rich source of vitamins A, C, and K, and is full of cancer-fighting antioxidants. Try it raw in a summer salad or sautéed; its bitter taste goes away when cooked.

Save the date

In three weeks, local health coach Linda Storm will hold a cooking demonstration during the July 25 farmers' market. Storm served up healthy fare to a hungry crowd last summer as well.

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m. on the common through October 17, 2013.

GIMME SHELTER

Suzy is a cat-lover's delight

PAULA J. FATERSIK

She is absolutely beautiful and needs a very dedicated and loving home where she can be totally adored, and perhaps, be an only pet. COURTESY PHOTO

Being familiar with the Bengal breed will be a plus for her new family as they are quite unique, with high energy levels and need lots of interactive attention.

Exotic looks, tall and slender, Suzy is a true cat lover's delight. This young Bengal/tiger mix is about a year old is and has strong Bengal features, beautiful markings and the big personality to match. She is absolutely beautiful and needs a very dedicated and loving home where she can be totally adored, and perhaps, be an only pet.

Being familiar with the Bengal breed will be a plus for her new family as they are quite unique, with high energy levels and need lots of interactive attention. Curious and ready to explore, she will approach new surroundings confidently and with a purpose! Intelligent, alert and full of mischief, this youngster will need as much time as you can give her before she settles down for slumber.

Suzy was abandoned and fending for herself and since coming to the shelter a month ago, she has been showing us that she really prefers to be the focus of activity. Given her age, she still has some growing up to do. Still very kittenish and active, Suzy loves playing with all of the toys presented to her, especially wand strings. Her leaping ability is very impressive, another trait of her breed. A sturdy cat tower would be a great accessory for her. She will circle and rub up on your legs to get your attention, or push against your hand for a gentle petting, but she is also feisty and knows what she wants.

In the right home, Suzy will grow to be one very special girl. As she craves being together, needs and wants affection, her ideal home would be one where she is not left alone all day. Also, she will definitely appreciate space to play and exercise! Patience, love and commitment will help make Suzy a fabulous companion and family member.

To learn more about Suzy please call Judy at 781-534-4902. Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m.

To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information on all of our wonderful cats. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Visit our Facebook page for updates, stories, helpful links and pet care information.

We are seeing more sweet, innocent, unwanted or abandoned kittens arriving and it is a good time to consider spaying or neutering your pet. The next spay day at the shelter will be Tuesday, July 16. Our office number is 781-925-3121and you can call to make an appointment or leave a detailed message including your name, number, pet's name, age and gender if you do not reach the Shelter Manager directly. Your call will be returned with necessary information to prepare your cat for his or her procedure. We are thankful for the services of the Animal Rescue League Spay Waggin veterinarians and vet techs who make these procedures safe, convenient and affordable.

To all of our supporters, we hope that you are enjoying a safe and happy Independence Day weekend. Our bottle and can bins are filling up and we are grateful to all of you from Hull and surrounding communities for helping us to cover some of our expenses with your generous donations.

Thank you to all who have been coming to the shelter with supplies and donations for our kittens and cats. You are the best!

OUR VIEW

Never a dull moment

If there here is one thing that all of Cohasset — including our deeply divided Board of Selectmen — can agree on, it is that Cohasset is never boring!

Some town governments more or less roll up during the summer months and figuratively go to sleep – but not here. For us in the newspaper business that is good news as we should have plenty to write about all summer long!

There are several interesting issues/activities/non-searches afoot right now.

One is ensuring that amendments to the Town Manager Act move quickly through the legislative process. The Governance Committee communicated again with state Rep. Garrett Bradley to ask for his help in seeking speedy approval of the Home Rule Petition and said, in their view, the changes constitute an emergency.

Why is this important? For one thing, Town Meeting has approved the changes, which would also permit the Acting Town Manager to apply for the permanent post. While selectmen have stated they would not rule him out and would honor the vote of Town Meeting regardless of whether the amended TMA is yet law – it would be nice if the current prohibition of people who have held previous office applying for the job was removed — making for a clearer search process.

Another issue is the search for a permanent police chief. We have to agree with Selectman Diane Kennedy and Selectman Steven Gaumer that the search should not have been halted again — this time until a new town manager is on board. The town manager is the appointing authority; selectmen have veto power. The on-again, off-again search puts the town in an awkward position and undermines, in our view, the police department – which has been running smoothly under the Acting Chief. We hope that selectmen will treat the current Acting Chief and the police officers with respect during this drawn-out process.

Selectmen admitted to an Open Meeting Law violation last week. However, was "half a loaf" in our view in that some of the board – that voted with the majority — do not think the law was violated, and if it was, it was unintentional, they said. The current board has a wealth of government experience, so there is no excuse for an unintentional violation.

Transparency has been the hallmark of many a selectman's campaign. There should have been a healthy discussion on something as important as electing a new leader for the board. Coming in with the votes already decided makes us wonder what else is happening out of the public view.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Setting the record straight

The following letter was sent to selectmen:

I'm sincerely concerned with untrue statements one of the Selectmen made in open session on June 27, 2013.

This selectman suggested that I was rewarding retired Chief of Police Brian Noonan, who was appointed to the police chief search committee by the Town Manager, with lucrative police traffic details, and that I hired Noonan's son-in-law onto the police department – implying in a very public way, some type of underhanded quid pro quo.

To set the record straight, Chief Noonan has been off the police payroll for two-years, and he does not have a son-in-law. Unfortunately, it is impossible to "un-ring the bell" – the damage has been done, as evident by the multitude of calls and messages I received following that meeting.

In moving forward I hope that information such as this is verified before becoming part of the discussion or the record. To say that I am upset and disappointed by this would be an understatement.

Most respectfully,

William Quigley, Acting Chief of Police

COMMENTARY

'Thank you for refusing to sit on the sidelines'

CRAIG COFFEY

An open letter to Gabriel Gomez.

Thank you running for the United States Senate. Thank you for courageously raising your hand to serve your country with noble intentions, as you have done before. Thank you for your prior service at the Naval Academy, as an aircraft carrier pilot, and as a Navy SEAL. Thank you for stepping away for your private, quiet life and repeating what another Navy man did in Massachusetts 60 years ago — creating a groundswell of excitement and enthusiasm for a candidate with energy, strength and new ideas.

Thank you for proving that honest leadership has value. Beginning as a virtual unknown candidate in February, you inspired thousands to follow your leadership. Thank you for campaigning 7 days a week. Thank you for standing up and accepting every media request. Thank you for running road races every weekend, and for running the Boston Marathon April 15th as a qualifier. Thank you for taking action on your faith in our country. Thank you for straight answers, and respectfully requesting the same of your four opponents.

Thank you for upholding the pride and honor of Cohasset as you relentlessly crisscrossed the cities and towns of Massachusetts. Thank you for giving us the opportunity to pridefully display yard signs and bumper stickers supporting our friend. Thank you for getting us involved in your effort. Thank you for getting Governor William F. Weld to personally and publicly endorse you in a crowded primary field. Thank you for getting American hero and Senator John McCain to come to Massachusetts, and for getting him to see in you what we all see in you. Thank you for a dignified, gracious and inspiring campaign and for showing us what it really means to commit to something.

Thank you for reminding us that our country is better than its politics, and for trying to personally do something about it. Thank you for refusing to sit on the sidelines. Thank you for proving that by shear force of will, someone can campaign with such relentless energy and enthusiasm that it causes the sitting United States President, the sitting United States Vice President and a former United States President — all from the opposing party — to have to come to Massachusetts to campaign against you. Thank you.

Thank you for winning the three-person primary in April with a convincing 51 percent of the statewide vote. Thank you hosting an April 30th Victory Party at the Red Lion that few will forget. Thank you for representing Cohasset with honor, vitality and guts. Thank you for earning over 500,000 votes in the general election, and making it an honest, tough election for a 37-year Washington insider. Thank you for winning Cohasset in overwhelming fashion, where your friends and neighbors know you best. And, thank you for leaving the door open for another campaign.

Craig Coffey, 78 Elm St., served as a top advisor for the Gomez campaign.

CHS alum directing movie, filming locally

One Cohasset High School alum is now a Hollywood heavyweight, and is directing a movie that will film locally this summer.

Matthew Santoro, who graduated from the Rhode Island School of Design after graduating from CHS, is directing "Higher Power," produced by film veteran Lorenzo di Bonaventura ["G.I. Joe: Retaliation"]. Santoro previously did visual effects on the films "300" and "X-Men Origins: Wolverine." He also recently completed his first comic book, "Breath of Bones," which hit stores in June.

"High Power" will be filmed in Quincy and possibly Cohasset. Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

SENIOR SCENE

Great talk for bird lovers

The orioles are especially fond of orange slices and grape jelly. I don't very often see an oriole but recognize their beautiful song.

LOUISE SMULLEN

Are you a bird watcher? Do you feed the birds? Do you listen for their songs in early spring signifying that the season is on the way? If you do, you would have enjoyed the presentation given to the senior lunch bunch by Pam and Steve French, owners of Wild Bird Unlimited in Hanover. Their program was centered on orioles and hummingbirds. It seems that both birds are unique in their behavior and habitats. Accompanied by colorful slides show on the screen, they talked about nesting, feeding, and migration of these birds and also how to attract them to your backyard. All it takes for hummingbirds is sugar and water in correct proportions. My feeder is right outside the kitchen window where I get a close-up view.

The orioles are especially fond of orange slices and grape jelly. I don't very often see an oriole but recognize their beautiful song. At the close of the program a video was shown, accompanied by music. It was of a tiny hummingbird nest holding two eggs from which the chicks emerged. It showed the parents feeding them until they were old enough to flap their wings and fly.

One of the seminars in June was presented by Patrick McDermott, Registrar of Probate. He talked about topics relating to estate and guardianships. It is so important to create effective estate plans. If this is not done, loved ones are required to administer the estate through the courts.

On June 12, a large crowd came to the Center in celebration of Fathers Day. They enjoyed a visit from Mark Twain, portrayed by actor Richard Clark. He was so entertaining and kept us in laughter. After lunch, bouquets were given to those who found a star on the bottom of their drinking cup.

Another fourth-grade class joined us for lunch in June. They were an active group and not a bit shy about entertaining. There were musicians, some playing guitar, a group with trumpets, sax, flute and trombone and a few piano solos. There were also singers and acrobats.

Leanna Hamill, elder law attorney was one of our June speakers. She stressed the importance of knowing where insurance policies, savings bonds, money, and other important papers are kept. Your heirs should have this information.

Don't forget, to make reservations for the following July events. On July 10 there will be a noon barbeque at Allerton House in Hingham. The following day, July 11, from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. the seniors have been invited to a chocolate brunch at Fairing Way, a new senior community under construction at the former Weymouth Naval Air Base.

The monthly Brown Bag Lunch and Movie is at noon July 15, at the center. Bring your lunch and enjoy popcorn and soft drinks provided by the staff. This month's movie is "Lincoln."

The Glastonbury Abbey is having its annual cookout at noon July 24.

On July 30, at 12:30 p.m. there will be a barbeque at Golden Living Cohasset.

The next date for a 15-minute massage will be July 25 by appointment at Three North Main Street. There is an $8 charge.

Well, sounds like a very busy month. Call the center to make reservations. We're sure you will have a good time.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Red, white, blue & green

At this point in the season, the farmers are cutting off the firm, wiry part of the plant that has emerged from the stem, known as the garlic scape.

JON BELBER

The tomatoes are not quite yet red, as there is barely evidence that they are even on the vine. Plenty of white daisies from the Paddock Garden adorn the appealing bouquets, and tops of the Ailsa Craig white onions are emerging and showing their shoulders from the wet, muddy ground.

The flowers for the blue potatoes are just showing and soon we can dig underground for the harvest of these colorful, tasty blue-flesh treats, in anticipation of home fries and blue mashed potatoes.

The green, however, is ready for your holiday gathering or a tribute to the United States' increasing commitment to green energy, growing and living. The scapes are off the plant!

Every autumn, children and farmers everywhere heel in garlic bulbs, settled before a long winter's nap and a late winter sprouting in February. Since then, as the days have grown longer (and now even a tad shorter), the garlic bulb has indeed sent a tall, multi-leafed, sturdy plant up out of the ground. It stands straight, alongside other happy garlics, firmly rooted in the ground.

At this point in the season, the farmers are cutting off the firm, wiry part of the plant that has emerged from the stem, known as the garlic scape. As the scape emerges (yes, it is as if it is escaping the plant), it curls and squiggles, with the small hint of a seedpod near its tip. If left on the plant, the scape would continue to wriggle and curl and the seedpod would keep growing and eventually form a flower and seedpod. These seeds would be too small to start a new garlic. So off with the scapes and into the frying pan or bouquet arrangement.

Garlic scapes make a great base for a scape pesto, perfect for dipping, while waiting for other July 4th fare to cook. There is a terrific garlic scape soup, which is nice when the rain is falling and the plants are struggling. The soup also asks for a few green garlics, which means pulling out a few heads of garlic. All this garlic talk keeps one healthy and away from the overly traveled grocery store variety.

And a dear teacher and maker of lasting wreaths wrought the scapes into a woven array of circular design. So add a little green into the holiday celebration, help the garlic bulbs size up for a mid-July harvest and know the garlic scapes were grown from the ground, by the farmers and for the people.

FOR THE RECORD

In the name of security

If you're a fan of novelist David Baldacci, as I am, these concepts are nothing new. Spy grids and international espionage make for action-packed stories that help you escape from reality.

GREGORY MATHIS

It turns out surveillance cameras at stop signs, traffic lights and on school buses are the least of our worries.

Soon after writing a column at the end of May titled, "Smile, you could be on camera," two separate news stories broke revealing a bigger concern regarding privacy issues.

First reported by the website of the Guardian, a U.K.-based newspaper, the U.S. government obtained a secret court order requiring Verizon to turn over millions of telephone records as part of a National Security Agency initiative.

Right around that time we first heard the name Edward Snowden. Snowden, who was a National Security Agency contractor, dropped a verbal bomb when he detailed confidential information regarding the surveillance practices of the United States that some would argue is spying.

If you're a fan of novelist David Baldacci, as I am, these concepts are nothing new. Spy grids and international espionage make for action-packed stories that help you escape from reality. But these recent revelations take those theories from fiction to non-fiction.

As I said back in May, we are living in trying times with terrorism on our doorstep, threatening not only our national security, but also our personal security. We understand certain surveillance measures, like those used to identify the Boston Marathon bombing suspects, are designed to protect us. But we cringe at the thought of George Orwell's "Big Brother" looking over our shoulder, breathing down our neck, and listening to our phone calls.

The May column, though, elicited some thoughtful reader response about security and privacy.

One reader sent me an article from the Tampa Bay Times in which Hernando County commissioners were discussing a ballot referendum for the 2014 general election to seek residents' opinions on "red-cameras" in the city of Brooksville. The controversy wavered between them being an inconvenience (and bad for tourism) to privacy concerns.

Another reader said he was "reluctantly in favor of such cameras only because driving has become such a safety concern. Many people are totally irresponsible when it comes to traffic safety and apparently either the police cannot enforce traffic laws or just plain don't care... I see people speeding, tailgating, changing lanes without signaling and driving with no safety or courtesy in mind just as you mentioned in your article. If more people were taken to task and ticketed for such actions it may help to reduce these idiotic acts on our streets and roads. We may just have to sacrifice our privacy for the sake of our safety. With the Internet, we are already on our way to losing privacy anyway."

With the revelations in the Guardian article about Verizon and the U.S. government, and Edward Snowden's chilling "confession," it's safe to say we're no longer "on our way to losing privacy," but have most certainly lost it.

Thanks to the many readers who sent an email following my Father's Day column reflecting on my dad's recent passing. It's always a roll of the dice putting something so personal out there, especially in a column designed to talk about the media business, but it made me happy to hear it made others think of the special relationship they had with their father.

Cultural Council Community Input Meeting

The Cohasset Cultural Council will host a Community Input Meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday, July 11, at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. The purpose is to solicit feedback from residents on how best to allocate public dollars for programs and activities in the arts, humanities and interpretive sciences.

The meeting will feature a special "sneak preview" performance by the 19-member cast of Zombie Prom, presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club. This is just one of the many organizations the Cohasset Cultural Council supports as part of its mission to provide high-quality arts and culture programming to local residents.

The Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. Cohasset's all-volunteer, municipally appointed council receives an annual allocation of approximately $4,000 to fund projects by individuals, organizations and schools that serve a broad range of interests and needs. The Council receives many more proposals than it is able to fund. Last year, for example, it received $12,796 in requests but could afford to support only $4,183.

Because it distributes public dollars, the Cultural Council must periodically gather local public opinion and learn more about what the community needs. This helps to develop useful criteria and funding priorities to guide its grant-making decisions.

Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and, when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining, in the mean time, exposed to all the dangers of invasions from without and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas, to be tried for pretended offenses;

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies;

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments;

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burned our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation, and tyranny already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrection among us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in our attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity; and we have conjured them, by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on one roll call and local senators on four roll calls from the week of June 24-28.

HIKE IN GAS TAX, CIGARETTE TAX AND OTHERS (H 3535)

House 105-47, Senate 34-6, approved a transportation package that proponents say will raise $500 million through tax hikes. Some opponents of the measure dispute the proponents' projections and argue that the total in tax hikes will be dramatically more than $500 million.

Provisions include a 3-cent-per-gallon hike in the state's current 21-cent-per-gallon gas tax, which, beginning in 2015, would also be indexed to inflation. Other provisions include a $1 hike in the current $2.51-per-package cigarette tax, an increase in the tax on cigars and smokeless tobacco, a change in the way utilities are classified for tax purposes, and the reinstatement of tolls at exits 1 through 6 on the Massachusetts Turnpike in Western Massachusetts. The legislation also imposes a new 6.25 percent sales tax on computer system design services as well as services to modify prewritten software.

Supporters said the bill is a reasonable package that will provide $805 million in revenue by 2018 to begin to solve many of the structural and financial problems that plague the state's transportation system.

Opponents said the proposed tax hikes will hurt already overburdened taxpayers and businesses and urged the Commonwealth to live within its means.

The vote margins in both branches are sufficient to override a possible veto by Gov. Deval Patrick.

In a statement released shortly after the vote, Patrick said, "While I appreciate the efforts the conferees have made, the conference report would not provide the reported $805 million in new revenue for transportation. Therefore, I cannot support this bill in its current form. I expect to return this bill with an amendment and look forward to working with the Legislature to enact it."

OBAMACARE (S 1812)

Senate 38-1, approved a bill making many changes to state health care laws to bring Massachusetts into compliance with the new federal health care law, also known as Obamacare.

Supporters said the changes are necessary to comply with federal law. They argued that these changes will expand health care coverage and bring in an estimated $205 million in revenue and savings.

The lone opponent said the bill does not do enough to protect small businesses, which are facing extreme health insurance premium rate increases.

STUDY MEDICAL DEVICE TAX (S 1812)

Senate 14-25, rejected an amendment that would require Gov. Deval Patrick's administration and local medical device manufacturers to conduct a study and evaluation of the impact of the federal medical device tax on the state's medical device manufacturers and the economy. The 2.3 percent tax went into effect in January and is designed to help pay for the cost of implementing Obamacare.

Amendment supporters said the tax is estimated to cost Massachusetts medical device makers more than $400 million per year and will result in job losses and the cost of the tax being passed along to consumers. They said while the state can't repeal this federal law, it can conduct a study to show the dire consequences of the tax in order to give more ammunition to the movement to repeal the tax.

Amendment opponents said the state cannot repeal federal laws and argued the study would be a waste of time and state resources. Some said the IRS, slated to play a major part in implementing the health care law, would be better positioned to assess the impact of the tax.

MASSHEALTH USERS MUST BE VERIFIED (S 1812)

Senate 5-32, rejected an amendment that would use a computerized eligibility system to verify income, assets and identity of current recipients and new applicants for MassHealth, the state's Medicaid program that provides health care for qualified low-income and disabled persons.

Amendment supporters said this cutting-edge system would ensure that only people truly eligible for MassHealth will receive it. They argued it would save the state millions of dollars and help eliminate fraud and duplication of benefits.

Amendment opponents said the system would create a number of problems. They also noted that the Legislature previously approved similar but more workable amendments.

BAN DISCRIMINATION BASED ON HEIGHT AND WEIGHT (H 1758) - The Labor and Workforce Development Committee heard testimony in favor of legislation that would prohibit discrimination on the basis of a person's height or weight. Supporters testified that overweight people are often not hired or not promoted because of their weight and noted this type of discrimination is on the rise and is more acceptable and pervasive than race, gender or sexual orientation discrimination. They argued that often people are unaware they are being discriminated against until after they shed pounds and are suddenly promoted. Dr. Scott Butsch, a gastroenterologist at MGH, said he believes weight discrimination stems from the myth that obesity is a character flaw.

OTHER WORK-RELATED LEGISLATION - Another bill on the Labor Committee's hearing agenda would make workplace bullying and harassment illegal (H 1766). Supporters testified that between 37 and 59 percent of employees in America directly experience health-endangering workplace bullying, abuse and harassment.

Other measures included requiring employers with more than 50 employees to allow workers who are victims of domestic violence, stalking or sexual assault to take up to an annual 15-day leave of absence to address issues arising from the incident (S 853); prohibiting employers from discriminating against veterans (S 853); and requiring all rooms at public schools to be "properly cooled" from May 15 through Oct. 15. The rules and regulations would be established and the term "properly cooled" would be defined by the attorney general (S 881).

FLU VACCINE - The Public Safety Committee held a hearing on measures that aim to maximize the number of adults and children who get a flu vaccine and also lower the costs. One proposal would allow local communities to give the vaccine to students in a school building (H 2108). Others would allow qualified pharmacy interns to administer the flu vaccine under the direction of a pharmacist (S 995) and medical assistants to do so under the direction of a doctor (S 1021).

TAX ROLLING PAPERS (H 2570) - A bill before the Revenue Committee would impose a new $5 per package tax on rolling papers used to roll tobacco and marijuana. Supporters say this would raise revenue from citizens who use rolling papers primarily to roll marijuana. Some opponents say the proposed $5 per pack tax is a ridiculous one that exceeds the cost of the rolling paper itself. Others note that many smokers now buy the papers to roll their own tobacco because of the increased tax on packaged cigarettes.

CELL PHONE RESTRICTIONS -The Transportation Committee held a hearing on several pieces of legislation regulating or banning cell phone use. Legislation includes banning the use of all cell phones in vehicles (H 3124); allowing the use of only "hands-free" cell phones in vehicles (S 1647); and prohibiting the use of cell phones in school zones (H 3123).

members and citizens alike not to unnecessarily prolong the process."

The selectmen initially voted to approve Milanoski's search process – forming a committee to review the resumes, which were to be collected by July 1 – and then select finalists to undergo the assessment center, finally bringing the top candidate to the selectmen for their approval. Per Cohasset's Town Manager Act, chief and department head appointments fall under the town manager's purview. The selectmen have veto power, however, with 15 days to accept or reject the appointments.

Milanoski reappointed Fire Chief Robert Silvia last month, asking the selectmen to waive their right to the 15 days. The selectmen voted unanimously to do so.

The police chief finalists were to be chosen by a committee comprised of three members, including retired chief Brian Noonan. Selectman Karen Quigley said that she had a problem with this committee, questioning its objectivity. She alleged Acting Chief William Quigley had provided Noonan with police details and that the acting chief had hired Noonan's son-in-law – neither of which is the case, said Acting Chief Quigley (see letter, page 8).

A majority of the selectmen wants to wait on finding a new police chief until a permanent town manager has been hired.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby asked the board to revote on the police chief search process because she said when she originally voted in favor of it, the selectmen had not yet voted to start the search for a permanent town manager. Only a board member who voted in the majority can ask for a revote, according to Robert's Rules of order.

"For us to get involved in a personnel matter is an affront to the process... I believe that this is because we want to control the outcome."

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said that he was happy to revote because he didn't get what he wanted the first time they voted on the search — he wanted to hire the consultants to conduct the entire search, rather than just the assessment center.

The original motion was a vote to support Milanoski's police chief process; it passed 3-2. The new vote was against the process and was 2-3, with selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy and selectman Steve Gaumer voting in favor of sticking with the current police chief search.

This revote stopped the search altogether. Kennedy wondered if the board would then give guidance to Milanoski on how to tell the 30 or so applicants that their resumes are being returned, once again.

Kennedy was also vocal on her distaste for the revote, making an impassioned argument against it. "We've had at least six public session votes on the police chief," adding that the appointment is the town manager's to make. "For us to get involved in a personnel matter is an affront to the process... I believe that this is because we want to control the outcome."

The vice-chair pointed out that Gjesteby, who asked for the revote, was originally a proponent of launching the job search. Kennedy said she was tired of the board having so many "fits and starts" when it came to decision-making. "This is ridiculous," the vice-chair said, also explaining that Town Meeting had already approved the Fiscal Year 2014 budget (which began on July 1) that includes the police chief and second-in-command positions; the selectmen voted months ago to eliminate a patrolman position in order to fund these other two positions, Kennedy explained.

Going back on their original vote "sends a signal we're on a loopy rollercoaster," said Kennedy.

Cohasset P.D.'s acting chief said that he plans to roll with it.

"I was fortunate enough to be afforded the opportunity to lead such a great group of officers for the past 14 months," said Acting Chief Quigley, an applicant for the permanent post. "Although I had hoped to have resolution much sooner, I will roll with the punches as I always have."

Lopes said on behalf of the police union that the department has enjoyed stability over the past year under Quigley's command.

"We believe that Acting Chief Quigley over the past year has brought stability, confidence, and leadership to the department," said Lopes, "and the membership feels the current period of indecisiveness on how and when to conduct a search is not conducive to maintaining the positive and stable atmosphere Acting Chief Quigley has created."

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's

The 89th annual Summer Recital Series will begin Sunday June 30, at 6 p.m., and will continue each Sunday until Aug. 18.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of 23 bells, President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

July 7 – Margaret Angelini, Wellesley College.

July 14 – Richard Watson, Georgetown, Ohio.

July 21 – Helen Hawley, Hudsonville, Mich.

After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

July 28 – Gerard de-Waardt, Rotterdam, Netherlands.

Aug. 4 – Gordon Slater, Nepean, Ontario, Canada.

Aug. 11 – Philippe Beullens, Leuven, Belgium.

Aug. 18 – Lee Leach, Norwood.

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Tim Reynolds of Hull in loving memory of his brother, Richard Tyler Reynolds; and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

FIELD HOCKEY

Summer Clinic

The Cohasset Field Hockey Boosters will host two summer clinics for players in grades 4-9 in July on the turf at Alumni Field.

There will be two sessions, one for beginners/inexperienced players, and another for intermediate/advanced players. All sessions are from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The clinics are open to youngsters from all towns and will be taught by Cohasset High School graduates and current college players Sage Stebbins (Siena College Field Hockey Division I) and Camryn Caron (Assumption College Field Hockey Division II).

Beginners/inexperienced players

July 8, 9, 10 and 11

Intermediate/advanced players

July 29, 30, 31 and August 1.

The cost is $75.00 per session

These clinics are offered to all rising 4th-9th graders who are interested in learning to field hockey and to improve their skills/overall knowledge of the game.

For more information, contact Sage Stebbins: sm07steb@siena.edu or 617-750-7243 or Camryn Caron: camryn.caron@assumption.edu or 339-236-0365

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Young Athlete Program

The South Shore YMCA's Emilson Branch in Hanover will host the Special Olympics Young Athletes Program this August 7-9 and 14-16 for children ages 2 to 8.

Young Athletes is an early introduction to sports and to the world of Special Olympics for children with delayed development. The children enjoy games and activities that develop motor skills and hand-eye coordination.

Each Young Athletes session will focus on a new motor skill in a different area of the SSYMCA Emilson Branch. This Ability program is inclusion based and participants are encouraged to include their siblings in the program.

The South Shore YMCA is seeking Young Athletes participants, volunteers aged 14 and up and volunteer coaches for the inaugural session of this exciting new program.

If you would like to a participate or volunteer, please contact, Pamela Holland, Youth & Family Assistant Director, at pholland@ssymca.org. Space is limited.

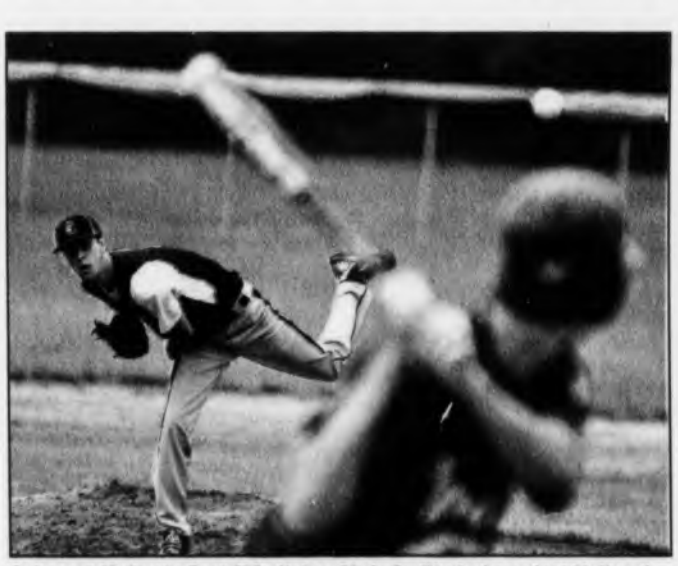
AMERICAN LEGION BASEBALL

Looking for the offense

Post 118 struggling with run production

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent



The only wish for the Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Baseball team for the month of July is a little bit of offensive luck.

Cohasset general manager Scott Arnold feels that his team can make things happen for themselves in the final month of the regular season if their offense can come through for them.

"We are hitting the ball," said Arnold. "but we have been hitting the ball right at people. We are doing a lot of things right. We are not throwing the ball around, but we are hitting the ball right at people. We feel that we will make a run and can get the fifth playoff position."

Over the past few years, Post 118 has been a team that has finished the Silver Blades skaters bring home hardware

Local club wins 23 medals at Natick competition

Members of local skating club 'Silver Blades Skating School' brought home trophies and smiles from the final ice skating competition of the season during the 23rd ISI District 1 Championships this past weekend in Natick. The skating club, formed just last summer, brought home a total of 23 medals, including four Gold, nine Silver and two Bronze, as well as the 2013 Coach of the Year Award, to Leslie Ryan of Scituate, a coach for Silver Blades and Skating Club of Hingham.

Liz Shaughnessy, Skating Director for Silver Blades says, "the competitions are a great way for the skaters to learn to support and encourage each other....and to participate as a team, not just as an individual." Her daughter, Grace, just 6 years old, has been competing since age 2. "She just wants to skate with the "big" girls and try to copy everything they do! As long as she is having fun, that's what counts".

For the 15 members of the team who competed, ranging in age from 5 to 18 years old, this competition was a chance to earn the title of "District Champion" in addition to earning points towards a team trophy. Last month the team earned it's first Team Trophy, placing fifth out of 17 teams in Concord.

When asked if they get nervous, the skaters replied, "well, a little while you're waiting to skate, but it's fun because we get to skate on the ice by ourselves and everyone is clapping and cheering!" For a few members, this was only their second competition, but wanted to know when they could compete again!

Local skaters included Emily Argiro (Norwell), Kate and Sarah Burke (Hingham), Jada Coward (Brockton), Andrew DeLuca (Rockland), Faith Do (Randolph), Sabrina, Ta-

TALKIN' GOLF

A lesson to be learned

Instead of a new driver or putter, have a pro look at your game

PAUL HARBER

Here's the best tip you'll ever get to improve your golf game.

Instead of maxing out your credit card buying the latest and greatest high-tech driver, invest a few dollars in lessons.

Sure, at first it won't impress your foursome as a Callaway Razr fit xtreme driver might.

But in a matter of time, your improved game will get you deeper into their wallets.

You can't buy a game.

All this came back to me the last few weeks when my chips, for some unknown reason, squirted right (I don't want to say shank, but that's what it was. Ugh).

Thanks to Joe Keefe, the head pro at South Shore Country Club in Hingham, all that's in the past.

I've been more fortunate than most. I've had plenty of great teachers.

My first was a fellow editor named Brent. When I was just out of college, working the lobster shift at a Boston newspaper, we'd finish up at 6 a.m., and head to Presidents Golf Course in Quincy.

He taught me to play fast. Miss them quick. It was fun. He was a scratch player and he'd give me a stroke a hole and a few mulligans. We'd finish before 10 a.m., and sit down for a beer at the 19th hole. Morning golfers thought we were crazy having a beer so early in the morning. But it was our nightcap before going to bed. Years later Brent and I played again at D.W. Field in Brockton, and for the first time, I beat him. It was probably my most satisfying victory ever.

The absolutely best lesson I received was many years ago at the Golf Learning Center of New England in Norton. I spent an hour one morning with Bob Toski and he helped my game tremendously.

Toski is 86 now and lives in South Florida where he still gives lessons.

In his day, he could play. In 1953 he won the Greater Hartford Open and in 1954 he was the PGA leading money winner. But when he turned 30 he quit the Tour and concentrated on teaching. And as good a player as he was, he is a much better teacher. In fact, he was inducted into the PGA Hall of Fame in Port Saint Lucie, Fla., this spring.

His lessons are surreal. He believes in the Socratic method of teaching, which means you have to be attentive because he is constantly peppering you with questions on your previous swings.

Unlike many teachers, Toski emphasizes "discovery golf." He believes confidence and awareness are the keys to a better game. And I still remember his guiding – and colorful – principles such as: "An ounce of touch is worth a ton of brawn;" "Control distance and direction to achieve perfection;" and "Feel the force, don't force the feel."

I don't know if it qualifies as a lesson, but a breakfast interview with Dr. Bob Rotella in Danvers in 1995 certainly helped my golf game. He had just come out with his book, "Golf is Not a Game of Perfect," and was on a promotional tour.

We talked about the mental aspects of the game and how demanding we are of ourselves and how much that gets in the way of playing better and enjoying the game more.

That afternoon, with all those thoughts and more lingering in my head, I fashioned my best round of the season. You could understand why so many touring pros had Dr. Bob on their speed dial.

If you ever had a golf lesson from Bob Toski, and he has given more than 100,000, you would be a better golfer. PHOTO COURTESY OF THE PGA

Another practice session I will never forget took place at the Harmon Club in Rockland.

For those who don't know, the Harmons are a world famous family of golf instructors.

The father, Claude, won the 1948 Masters and for many years was a respected teacher at Winged Foot outside New York City and Seminole in Florida. His sons, Butch, Craig and Bill are all ranked in Top 100 golf instructor polls and another son, Dick who died of pneumonia in 2006, was also ranked high in all those polls as well.

One Monday we were invited to their Rockland club for free golf lessons. It began about 9 in the morning and all the Harmon brothers were there, stationed at one area or another. We were separated into groups of four and for one hour you would work on your putting with one brother and then the next hour you meet another brother and worked on your chipping and sand game.

Besides the four hours you spent with the Harmon brothers, there was another session with Tom Cavicchi, one of New England's top professionals, for a high-tech evaluation of your golf swing.

It was a terrific idea and I'm grateful I had to opportunity to enjoy the experience.

But when it was over, my hands were swollen and my body ached. I had hit too many balls. It took a couple of days before I was physically healthy enough to return to the golf course.

I guess, too much of a good thing isn't always that good.

GOLF NOTES

Can region keep streak alive at State Amateur?

Six of last seven champions live in southeastern Massachusetts

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

Twenty-eight local golfers – including defending champion Mike Calef – will travel to Longmeadow Country Club in western Massachusetts next Monday to compete in the 105th Massachusetts State Amateur Championship.

The State Amateur has been won basically by residents of Southeastern Massachusetts, beginning in 2006 when Norwell native Ben Spitz won at Worcester CC.

After Burgess Houston of Wellesley took the title in 2008 at Concord CC, it has been won exclusively by local golfers.

Thorny Lea's John Hadges won at The Kittansett Club in 2009 and the following year Easton resident Bill Drohen captured the title at The Country Club in Brookline.

Hadges re-captured the championship in 2010 at Myopia Hunt Club in South Hamilton and Easton neighbor Ryan Riley followed up with a victory at Wyantenuck in 2011.

Now Calef, who won last summer at Tedesco CC in Marblehead, will try to defend his title at Longmeadow, one of Donald Ross' finest creations.

There are several other local golfers who could wrestle the title away from Calef.

Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich is having a terrific year on the local scene with second place finishes at the Norfolk Country Classic and the Hornblower Memorial at Plymouth CC. He was also second low amateur at the State Open at Woodland GC.

Herbie Aikens of Kingston, who last week qualified for the US Public Links Championship later this month in Virginia, is a threat to win.

Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea, a former New England Amateur champion and 2009 MGA Player of the Year, is in the field.

He is one of five members from Thorny Lea GC in the field, tops among local clubs.

They all will enjoy this historic track, but will need a solid, well-round golf game to win.

Longmeadow Country Club was organized in 1922 and hired Donald Ross to create a course that called for "judicious use of both power and finesse." For many years the immortal Robert Tyre "Bobby" Jones held the course record with a 64 he fashioned in 1935.

This was five years after Jones won the Grand Slam and retired from competitive golf. He was in the area to test new clubs for the A.G. Spalding sporting goods company. Longmeadow's first professional, J. Victor East, a world renowned club maker was working secretly with Spalding and Jones and Longmeadow member Milton Reach to produce the country's first matched set of flanged soled irons with steel shafts. Jones used Longmeadow as a proving ground for the company's equipment.

During the 1930s many professionals, such as Byron Nelson, Jimmy Thomson, Horton Smith, Harry Cooper, Leo Diegel, Lawson Little, Paul Runyan and Tommy Armour went to Longmeadow to test Spalding clubs.

Among other local golfers, who will be vying for the State Amateur crown are Thomas Grant of Foxborough CC, Paul Mitchell of George Wright GC, Connor Hayes of MGA Links, Jack Weeks of Wollaston GC, Patrick Frodigh and John Gratton of Dedham C&PC, Peter Gordon, Tommy Parker and Steven Burak of Thorny Lea GC, Barry Higham of the Back Nine Club, Matt Miller of Plymouth CC, Eric Daniel and Phuong Do of Presidents GC, Matt Montt and Brendan Ridge of Harmon GC, Jeffrey Durkin of Hatherly CC, Rob McMenimon of Black Rock CC, Joseph Frew and Joe Harney of Granite Links GC, Brian Nutting of Spring Valley CC, and Joe Fitzsimmons and Jonathan Stoddard of Marshfield CC.

My pick to win? Doug Clapp.

My pick to win the State Amateur? How about Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich in Plymouth. He has been a bridesmaid enough this season. Here he is with last year's champion, Mike Calef. Clapp caddied for Calef in the final match. DAVID COLT PHOTOGRAPHY COURTESY OF THE MASSACHUSETTS GOLF ASSOCIATION

Marshfield's Mel and Beth O'Kelly won it four times in the 1980s. Scituate's Fordie Pitts and daughter Karen also won the title four times. Fordie also won twice with another daughter, Mary Lou. This year's Father & Daughter championship will be held at Golf Club of Cape Cod in East Falmouth . . . The American Junior Golf Association will return to Massachusetts when 96 of the nation's top junior golfers compete in the July 15-18 AJGA Junior at Tedesco CC in Marblehead. The AJGA previously conducted an event at Tedesco Country Club in 2007. There will be several Bay Staters in the field that include many who have the talent to play on the pro tours in a few years, Sophia Morrill of Hanover, John Larzor of Westwood, Joseph Lynch of Foxboro and John Beadle of North Attleboro are among the Bay Staters entered in the field. Morrill, a sophomore who plays on the boys' golf team at Hanover High, was impressive at the South Sectional meet, finishing second with a round of 74 at South Shore CC in Hingham. She placed 21st at the State Individual meet a week later while helping her team to a fourth-place finish. A two-year member of the varsity team, Morrill received the school's Sportsmanship Award. As good as she is on the links, she is even better in the classroom, posting a 4.0 average.

Women's NE Am on the horizon

Six local women will be competing in the New England Women's Golf Association's Championship July 9-11 at the Renaissance Golf Club in Haverhill.

Mary Mulcahy of Hatherly GC has to be considered one of the favorites. The former Scituate High School standout won the Massachusetts Women's Open last week at Mount Pleasant Country Club in Boylston.

Mulcahy fashioned a 2-under par 72 in the final round to win the 23rd State Women's Open.

A two-time high school state individual champ and sophomore-to-be on the University of Central Florida women's team, Mulcahy bested Laura Johnson by a stroke with a two-day total of 148.

Johnson led after Wednesday's first round with her 1-under 73, but shot a 76 in the final round while Mulcahy bounced back from her first-round 76 that left her in fourth place.

Other local women in the field include Aimee Dubois of Black Rock CC, Emily Gordon and Emily Hess of Blue Hill CC, Linda Goulet of Presidents GC, and Isabel Southard of Sharon and the Harmon Club

Mulcahys near historic feat

As a side note, Mary Mulcahy and her father, John, are the reigning champions of the Massachusetts Golf Association Father & Daughter Championship. They have been reigning champions for quite a while. They first won in 2010 and have yet to relinquish the title. If they defend their title this year and win, they will tie the record for most victories – sort of.

One final note

Last week when I could have been on the links, I was stuck in Boston, a city I dislike more, every time I visit it. Looking for somewhere to waste a few hours, I dropped in the Brattle Street Book Store. It's a curiosity shop for old books. The shelves are littered with all sorts of subjects, published anywhere from 10 years to 200 years ago. You never know what you are going to find and I found a gem, Herbert Warren Wind's "The Story of American Golf." I was fortunate to know Herbert – one of my most memorable afternoons was spent not too long before he died in 2005 in his Weston backyard, sipping iced tea while he gave an impromptu dissertation on the State of Golf. During that phase of my life I didn't have time to sit down and enjoy reading as I do now. I only scanned his writings, usually just to fact-check something I was writing at the time. But when I opened up his book last week, I had one of the most enjoyable afternoons in a long time. If you are a student of the game and interested in its past, you owe it to yourself to head down to the nearest library and pick up this history.

THIS WEEK'S SIGNATURE HOLE

The 15th Hole at Atlantic Country Club Plymouth, MA

Atlantic Country Club

PAR 4 15 HCP 12 — YDS 373 • 350 ○ 330 ● 250

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

season strong. A year ago their strong finish netted them the fifth and final playoff spot in Zone 6 East.

They have games coming up with against Braintree (Friday), Milton (Sunday), Stoughton (Monday) and Weymouth (Tuesday) after the Fourth of July Holiday.

Cohasset got its first point of the season with a 2-2 tie with Stoughton in their first meeting with them this year.

They got their first win of the season by a forfeit in a makeup game against Hyde Park.

"Chris Smith pitched a great game for us," said Arnold of the Stoughton game. "He kept them off balance and he was able to hit spots."

Mickey Barry drove in both of the Cohasset runs in the game.

Post 118 was coming off a 7-6, 11-0 doubleheader loss to Milton, but Arnold saw some good things in the twinbill.

"We did not get the pitching in the doubleheader," said Arnold. "I felt that we started to hit the ball well in those two games."

Cohasset felt that they hit the ball in the game against Weymouth that was delayed for 30 minutes because of lightning.

They were able to get people on base, but they could not bring them in as they fell to Weymouth 6-3.

Connor Gibbons lined a two-out single in the second inning for Cohasset's first run of the game to bring Post 118 to within two, 3-1.

They fell behind 5-2, but Post 118 came up with a run in both the sixth and seventh innings.

Richie Roach drove in Brendan O'Connell in the sixth inning, while in the seventh inning Tim Kensinger smashed a triple and scored on Barry's single.

Kensinger finished the game with two hits for Cohasset.

Cohasset's first game of the season with Morrissette was postponed due to the weather.

WINDOW REPLACEMENT an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Call before July 13th!

Rotary Club announces new officers and directors

Rotary Club of Cohasset announced its 2013-2014 officers and directors who were installed Monday evening, July 1, at the Lightkeepers Cottage by the Rotary Club District Governor Dietrick Bilger and joined by Assistant District Governor George Prebola. Bilger thanked Past-President Lisa Hewitt Dick for her years of service leading the club and welcomed President Ken Roth, President-elect Peter Pearce, Secretary Diane DeScenza Herth and Treasurer Rich Fitzpatrick

"The Rotary Club of Cohasset is small but mighty with many hands making light work," said Hewitt Dick. The Rotary has a very active club membership who support our community, from its youngest students to our senior citizens. Rotary Club of Cohasset brings Christmas to families who might not be able to celebrate it otherwise, it funds school grants, new playgrounds, the Historical Society, Elder Affairs, Food Pantry and high school senior's college scholarships, which this year brought the total to just under $1 million over the last 50 years. The Rotary Club encourages development of youth leadership through support of Eagle Scout projects and by sponsoring two sophomore/junior high school students with full scholarships to the three-day Rotary Youth Leadership Association training held on Cape Cod each spring, which teaches leadership skills and nurtures an outward sense of service.

Internationally, the Rotary Club of Cohasset is involved in peace missions and outreach in many underdeveloped countries from health care to bringing water filtration to families and technology to the classroom.

"As I was attending the Rotary International meeting in Lisbon last month, the Rotary Club of Cohasset stood out amongst the international community due to their involvement in the Forum for Cities in Transition, which is a peace building mission," said Bilger. The Cohasset club works in conjunction with the University of Massachusetts. The Forum for Cities in transition is an international network of political officials, business people and representatives of the voluntary community sector. The Forum works on the principle that cities that are in conflict are in the best position to help other cities in the same situation. For 25 years the Rotary Club of Cohasset has supported Rotary International in its goal of eradication of the tenacious disease polio. The world is now 99 percent polio-free, and Rotary and its partners will not stop until every child is safe.

The motto for Rotary is "Service before Self." Every member takes an oath to work for Peace through Service. This year's goal is to Engage Members and Change Lives. Join Rotary in helping to change lives. The largest fundraisers are the Cohasset Rotary Club phone book and the Road Race-by-the-Sea. "We greatly appreciate our advertisers and donors each and every year. If it were not for them we would not be able to support the hundreds of people we personally assist every year," said Herth.

Rotary Club of Cohasset meets every Monday from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Cottage. Meetings include a dinner followed by a speaker each week. Everyone is welcome to join members and see what Rotary Club is all about. There is no charge for guests. Register by Sunday to dianeherth@me.com or leave a message at: facebook.com/CohassetRotaryClub. Check out the Facebook page for future speakers and photos from past meetings and activities.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Arlene H. Tuohey

COHASSET – Arlene H. (Queary) Touhey, a Cohasset resident, formerly of Hull, passed away on Wednesday, June 26, 2013 at the age of 75.

She was born in Copenhagen Village, NY, and was raised in Carthage, NY.

A past president for several years of Harborview Senior Housing in Cohasset, Mrs. Tuohey attained her Associates degree from Quincy Junior College.

She enjoyed traveling the world and spent years working as a corporate travel agent for American Express at Government Center in Boston. Mrs. Tuohey's lifelong interests also included reading, cooking, and arts and crafts, which she frequently had on display at local fairs.

An avid photographer, Mrs. Tuohey earned several awards from the South Shore Camera Club for her work. Like her varied talents, Mrs Tuohey's devotion to her family and friends knew no bounds.

She was loving mother of Kathryn M. Brown and her husband Don of Hull, Kimberly A. Boyle and her husband Michael of Hingham, Stephen M. Tuohey and his wife Christine of Braintree, and Jennifer H. Dalpe and her husband Eric of Barkhamsted, Connecticut. Sister of Darwin Queary and his wife Sue of Brewster, and Donald Queary and his wife Belva of Croghan, New York. She was loving grandmother to Jessica, Chris, Andrew, Alex, Caitlin, Nicholas, Jayden, Alicia, Nolan, Francis, and Brendan, and adoring great grandmother to Elijah and Ava.

Visiting hours were at the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, 21 Pond St., Hingham on Sunday, June 30, from 4 - 6 p.m. The funeral services and interment are to be private.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Mrs. Tuohey's memory may be given to the American Cancer Society, 30 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Stella M. MacDonald

COHASSET – Stella Mary MacDonald, age 97, of Cohasset, passed away peacefully at Golden Living of Cohasset on June 14, 2013.

Daughter of the late Charles and Anna (Baskovitch) Kovalowski. Beloved wife of the late Alexander MacDonald. Devoted mother of Elizabeth "Betty Ann" Migliaccio and her husband Paul of Cohasset. Grandmother of Steven Migliaccio of Cohasset and Michelle Libby of Abington. Great-grandmother of Ryan and Adam Libby of Abington. Sister of the late Charles Jr. and Andrew Kovalowski.

Stella loved her "kids", baking, the Patriots, her vegetable garden, and reading. She was a retired baker for the Cohasset Schools, and a member of Cohasset's 60 plus.

A Memorial Mass was held on June 29, 2013 At 10 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, 10 Summer Street, Cohasset. Visiting hours omitted. Burial will be private.

Donations in Stella's memory may be made to a charity of ones choice.

James E. Carroll

James E. Carroll

SCITUATE – James E. Carroll, 83, longtime resident of Scituate and Cohasset, born and raised in South Boston, passed away after a brief illness Friday, June 28, 2013, at Linden Ponds in Hingham surrounded by loved ones.

"Jimmy" was the son of the late Fred Carroll and Catherine Brodie of South Boston. He is survived by six children, Jacqui Scott of Cohasset, Jennifer Farwell of Scituate, James "Ted" Carroll Jr. of Cohasset, Joe Carroll of Palm Desert, Calif., Stephen Carroll of Hanover, Katie Lazarus of London; and was the former husband of Kathleen Carroll (Reilly) of Scituate. He was the beloved father-in-law of Elaine Carroll of Hanover and Paul Lazarus of London; and the adored "Puppy Carroll" to Madison and Brodie Carroll of Hanover.

Jim served honorably in the U.S. Navy during the Korean War, serving on the USS Edisto and the USS Pittsburgh and achieved the rank of Lieutenant-JG. After returning from service, he was an aide to former Mass. Governor/Mayor of Boston James Michael Curley and later pursued successful sales careers in the beverage, real estate, and advertising industries. He retired in 2003 after a brief time with the MBTA in their Real Estate and Safety Departments.

An eloquent and passionate public speaker, his skills were recognized in an award from President Harry S. Truman in 1955 for being one of America's best college orators while he attended Northeastern University.

Jim was a close friend of the late Hall of Fame baseball player Ted Williams. He worked on John F. Kennedy's 1960 presidential campaign and was retained by the White House after JFK's assassination to handle all sensitive correspondence after his death.

He was involved in various civic and fundraising activities for the Knights of Columbus and other local charities. After retirement, he devoted countless hours helping friends in need who were dealing with health issues, driving them to treatments and doctor appointments.

Special thanks to all of the staff at Linden Ponds Renaissance Gardens in Hingham for their invaluable care and support, allowing the man we loved to move peacefully onto eternal life with dignity.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated at St. Anthony's Church, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, Saturday, July 6, 2013, at 10 a.m. Visiting hours at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset, Friday, July 5, 2013, from 4-8 p.m. Interment in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the Scituate Fire Department Local 1464, 149 First Parish Road, Scituate, MA 02066.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 15, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your persistence pays off as the information you demanded starts to come through. The pace is slow at first, but it begins to speed up as the week draws to a close.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unwelcome bit of news jolts the Bovine, who would prefer that things proceed smoothly. But it's at most a momentary setback. A Leo brings more welcome tidings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You need to pay close attention to the details before making a commitment. Don't accept anything that seems questionable, unless you get an answer that can be backed up.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations on getting that project up and running. But as exciting as it is, don't let it carry you away. Make sure you set aside time to spend with family and friends.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be sure you're part of the discussion involving your suggestions. Your presence ensures that you can defend your work, if necessary. It also helps gain your colleagues' support.

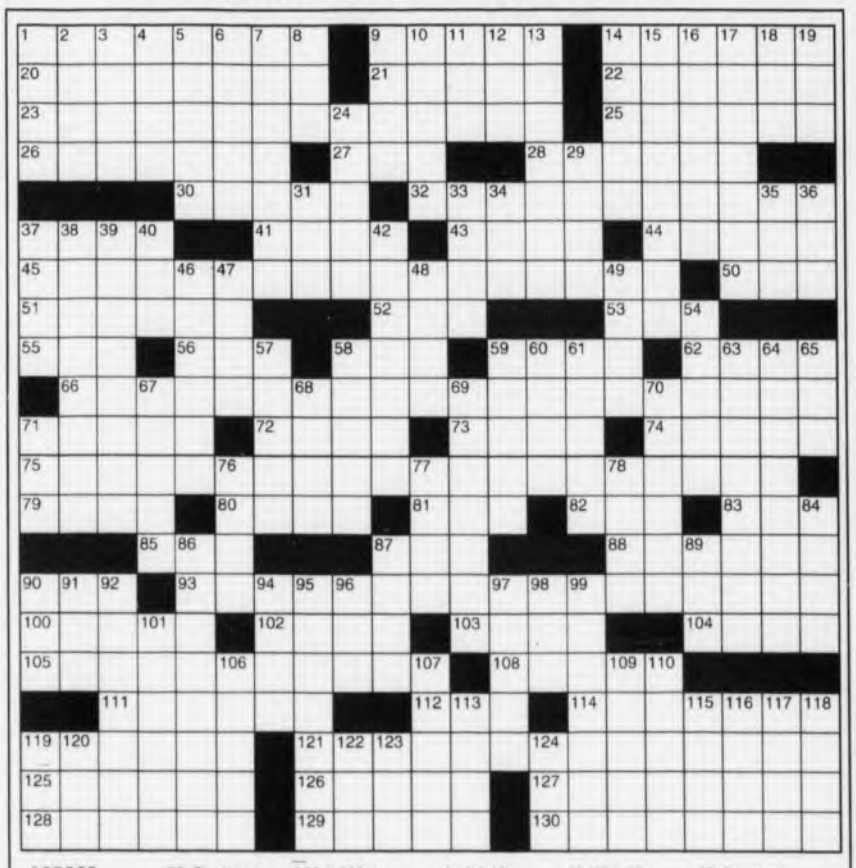
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding needs to be dealt with, or it can grow and cause more problems later on. Be the bigger person and take the first step to clear the air.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Set some strict guidelines for yourself so your heavier-than-usual work schedule doesn't overwhelm the time you need to spend relaxing with loved ones.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel a little uncomfortable being among people you hardly know. But remember that today's strangers can become tomorrow's valuable contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Reward yourself for all that you've accomplished despite some annoying situations that got in your way. Enjoy a well-earned getaway with someone special.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Realizing that someone else is taking credit for what you did is bound to get anyone's goat, but especially yours. Be patient. The truth soon comes out.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Forget about opposites attracting. What you need is to find someone who thinks like you and will support your ideas, even if others say they're too radical.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Workplace problems can affect your financial plans. Be prudent and avoid running up bills or making commitments until things begin to ease up by the 26th.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9×9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

TM Act saga drags on

AdCom approves town manager search monies

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Setting the stage in Cohasset to hire a permanent town manager has had more twists and turns than a roller coaster.

While plans are in place to hire a consulting firm to conduct the search for a new town manager – it is still unclear whether that search will take place under the old or revised Town Manager Act.

It is also unclear whether the revised Town Manager Act (TMA) will make its way through the legislature in a timely fashion. While the original 1997 act went through the legislative process quickly and without a hitch, politics and process could hold the revisions up.

The Act recently secured a hearing date at the State House – July 23 – but even that was hard fought. The Governance Committee wrote a letter to State Rep. Garrett Bradley asking him to prioritize the bill, stating that it was a matter of emergency. Officials this week debated whether the bill constitutes an emergency.

Three of the five selectmen – chair Fred Koed, Martha Gjesteby and Karen Quigley — all stated that they did not consider the bill to be an emergency. Others argued that in a governmental sense, it was. Conservation Committee chair Jack Creighton, who was in the audience, said that "urgency" is the correct term.

The bottom line? Despite debating the minutiae, the consensus among various officials seems to be "move forward" with the bill – and the hiring of a permanent town manager – as soon as possible.

On Tuesday the Advisory Committee approved the Board of Selectmen inking a contract with the UMass Collins Center to conduct the search for a new

Buttonwood owner retiring after 24 years

"We've had a lot of wonderful customers, people who have been friends through the years. We've seen babies grow up and have their own kids."

"Books make everything better," it is written on the Buttonwood Books website.

The same can be said for those who share books – and the love of reading – with their communities.

Betsey Detwiler has been doing that on the South Shore for nearly 25 years. She opened Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset in 1989 and the "kids-only" branch in Hingham five years later. The Hingham store would close its doors after 10 years, but Buttonwood is still going strong — despite the fact that Detwiler has decided to retire from the book biz.

Although it's taking the 79-year-old a while to walk away. Detwiler still works at the Cohasset shop, located in the Shaw's Plaza along Chief Justice Cushing Highway, on occasion and said that she plans to stay on as a consultant.

It's understandable why Detwiler can't seem to stay away. She's been running a successful independent bookstore in a day and age where brick and mortar stores are dwindling— with the advent of tablets and e-readers and discount e-commerce sites, bookstores are especially hurting.

"The internet has changed things a lot," Detwiler said. "It's not just on-

Police chief search mea culpa

Selectman Quigley issues apology

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectman Karen Quigley apologized for remarks made during the June 27 Board of Selectmen meeting that turned out to be erroneous, admitting that she was mistaken. The affected party accepted the apology.

The comments concerned former Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan, who was slated to be part of a selection committee for the new police chief. The committee was scrapped, along with the search itself, following a board vote to stop the process during the June 27 meeting. Cohasset has been without a permanent police chief since former chief Mark DeLuca was suspended in May 2012; his contract with the town was not renewed when it expired in January 2013.

Cohasset's police department will continue to operate with Acting Police Chief William Quigley (no relation to selectman Quigley) at the helm, but a search for a permanent chief will not commence until the Board of Selectmen hire a permanent Town Manager. The board would like the new town manager to hire a police chief; the chief and other department head appointments are the town manager's to make, per Cohasset's Town Manager Act.

The selectmen recently revoted the police chief search process that Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski had started; the position had been advertised publicly in

Brush at DPW

Residential brush will be accepted at the DPW parking area from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, July 27. No trees more than 10 inches in diameter, no stumps, firewood, briars or weeds will be accepted. Also, no contractors.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the right (by the candy display) after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Bicyclist arraigned on assault charge

A bicyclist accused of punching an older driver in the face in Cohasset was arraigned in Quincy District Court on Monday and released on his promise to return to court.

James D. Clifford, Jr., 52, 215 Bowker St., Norwell, was arraigned on charges of assault and battery on person over 60, and vandalism or property (sunglasses).

Police said on Saturday (July 6) at 10:15 a.m., they received an emergency cellular telephone call from a 72-year-old Cohasset resident stating that he was just assaulted by a man on bicycle after nearly colliding with him on Route 3A.

The caller told dispatch that he would follow his alleged attacker until police could intercept them. Minutes later on Border Street, a police officer stopped both men.

The Cohasset man told officers that he was pulling out of Cohasset Plaza in his SUV and nearly crashed into the bicyclist who reportedly was entering Route 3A from upper King Street without hand-signaling. As a result of that near crash, the Cohasset man pulled over on the side of Route 3A. When he did, the Cohasset man alleges that the bicyclist approached him and "two handed" him in the chest and chin, breaking his sunglasses and knocking him backwards. A pair of broken sunglasses were recovered from the side of the road on Route 3A.

Clifford denied making physical contact with the older driver.

FIRESIDE

Mutual aid for Scituate fire

On Thursday (July 4) at approximately 12:50 p.m. Cohasset Engine 1 (Lt. Protulis and FF/Medic Pergola) was initially dispatched to the Town of Scituate to cover their fire headquarters.

While Engine 1 was en route to Scituate Fire Headquarters a second alarm was transmitted for the building fire on Torrey's Lane and Engine 1 was then diverted to the scene. Cohasset Engine 1 crew assisted the Scituate Fire Unit already on scene in overhauling and salvage operation once the fire was knocked downed.

Chief Silvia also responded and assisted personnel on the scene.

Garage fire

On Friday (July 5) at 11 a.m. Cohasset Engine 2 (Captain Trask and FF/Medic Boudreau), Engine 1 (Lt./Medic Forde), Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic Cunningham) and C-1 (Chief Silvia) were dispatched to 467 Beechwood St. for a reported shed fire.

While units were responding to the scene the dispatch center paged out a box alarm response for off-duty members to respond back for station coverage. On arrival of the scene members had smoke coming from a 30-foot by 40-foot metal frame garage in the rear of 467 Beechwood St. The garage owner had knocked down the fire prior to fire department's arrival with a small hose.

Members then stretched a 200 foot 1-3/4 in. hose line to the garage and began overhaul operations inside the garage. National Grid Electric Division was requested to the scene to disconnect the power the garage. Wiring Inspector Steven Wigmore was also requested to the scene.

Once the overhaul operations were complete and the power to the building was disconnected all units were placed back in service and the all out on the box alarm was ordered. Lt. Durette responded back for station coverage, while Call FFs Maguire and Mckay assisted members on scene.

Teen avoids deer, hits utility pole

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a single-car accident on lower King Street at 10:22 p.m. on Thursday (July 4). Police said a 19-year-old Cohasset man in a 2009 Toyota Venza told them he swerved to avoid a deer and hit a utility pole. Police said the pole was hit with enough force to snap it in half. The Toyota also flipped onto the driver's side. The operator was not injured but the vehicle was totaled. He was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes. There was no sign of the deer, police said.

Lower King Street had to be closed for about two hours while crews removed the broken pole.

Minor

A 20-year-old Cohasset man was arrested for being a minor in possession of alcohol after police approached a group walking on Forest Avenue toward North Main Street at 10:15 p.m. on Thursday (July 4). The 20-year-old, who was arrested, was carrying a 30-pack of beer and was also intoxicated, police said. When the officer approached the group, several other people ran into the woods.

Junior operator

A 17-year-old Cohasset boy, who had a junior operator's license, was cited after the 2011 Chevrolet Tahoe he was driving swerved to avoid a cyclist and hit a wall near 475 Jerusalem Road at 12:50 p.m. on Saturday (July 6). The Tahoe ended up resting on a Verizon utility box. The cyclist had gone around the curve and did not see the accident, police said.

The teen had a 16-year-old passenger who was transported to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries. The driver was cited for violating his junior operator license and for failure to stay in marked lanes.

Protective custody

A 66-year-old Scituate woman was taken into protective custody on Friday (July 6) around 9 p.m. after police responded to a call about her erratic operation. They found her inside CVS in Tedeschi Plaza but did not see operation of the Mercedes that she had apparently been driving so she was not arrested for drunken driving. She was held overnight at the station.

Pot smoking

Police responded to a complaint from the staff at the Golden Living Center off Route 3A that one of the residents had been smoking marijuana in his room. Police responded and seized a small amount of the drug. The 52-year-old man was issued a $100 civil citation for possession of one ounce or less of marijuana. He claimed to have a prescription for medical marijuana but could not produce it. Police said there are no prescriptions yet for the drug in Massachusetts as the Department of Public Health is still developing the regulations.

Lost wallet

A lost wallet was dropped off at the police station on Wednesday (July 3) and the owner, whose ID was inside, was contacted. When the 27-year-old Scituate woman picked it up, she discovered some contents of her wallet were missing. She will file a report with Scituate police because the wallet was lost and found in that town, police said.

Protective custody

Police took two 22-year-old Milton men (who are twins) into protective custody at 11:18 p.m. on Wednesday (July 3) after responding to a report of a disturbance on Bassing Beach in the harbor. The group had made its way back to the Government Island where police found the highly intoxicated brothers, who had apparently been partying all day long. They were held overnight at the station.

MVA

There was a two-car accident at about 5:50 p.m. on Thursday (July 4) on Norman Todd Road. Police said a 2004 Jeep that was traveling west toward Route 3A was struck on the driver's side by a 2003 Hyundai sedan that was traveling east and was attempting to make a left onto Beechwood Street. The driver of the Jeep was a 44-year-old Cohasset woman and the operator of the Hyundai was a 52-year-old Marshfield man. No one was injured and neither vehicle had to be towed, police said.

Moped

Hingham police heard a radio call from Cohasset police about a stolen moped from Jerusalem Road on July 4 and arrested a 24-year-old Quincy man with the moped at the Rotary that evening.

Cohasset police said the owner of the moped, a 71-year-old Cohasset man, reported it stolen. The Quincy man is facing Hingham charges of receiving stolen property over $250, disorderly conduct, using a motor vehicle without authority and possessing MV with a defaced Vehicle Identification Number (VIN). Hingham police said the VIN had been partially scraped off but the first two letters were visible. The Quincy man became very unruly while being detained in Hingham. Cohasset police are charging him with using a motor vehicle without authority.

Tote taken

A 39-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Sunday (July 7) that her brown suede tote bag had been taken from her 2006 Toyota Highlander while she was parked at Sandy Beach between 3 and 4:45 p.m. that day. Inside the tote bag were her purse, driver's license, health card, credit cards and debit cards. The missing cards were reported to her credit card companies and to the credit card bureau. The incident is under investigation. The vehicle was left unlocked, police said.

Suspended license

Police stopped a scooter that was speeding in the 35 m.p.h. zone on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) after it made a right from 3A onto Beechwood Street on Sunday (July 7) around 11 p.m. Police said a check through the Registry of Motor Vehicles revealed the 33-year-old Hingham man operating the scooter had a suspended license. He was arrested and charged with operating after license suspension, speeding and failure to signal when turning.

Dog loose

Police were dispatched to the area of Black Rock Road and Jerusalem Road around 5:20 p.m. on Monday (July 1) on a report that a dog had attacked another dog. Police said a 54-year-old Cohasset woman was walking her 10-year-old poodle when a large hound dog ran through an electric fence at its home, attacked her dog and then jumped on her back. The poodle had minor cuts and scratches.

The dog's owner, a 52-year-old Cohasset woman, said her dog was excited by the shock from the electric fence. Both dogs were up-to-date on their shots. The Animal Control Officer filed a report on the incident, police said.

Pool filter

The apparent thefts of a large pool filter and pump from the back of a pickup truck at a pool supply business off Route 3A is under investigation. The owner of the business left at 8 p.m. on Sunday (June 30) and when he arrived at 8 a.m. the next day the items valued at $1200 several outlets, including a statewide law enforcement database and the Boston Globe.

Quigley said at the time that she had a problem with the search process, naming the search committee among her concerns. She questioned the committee's objectivity, wondering if the odds were stacked in favor of the internal candidate, Acting Chief William Quigley.

The selectman alleged Acting Chief Quigley was providing Noonan with police details and that the acting chief had hired Noonan's son-in-law — neither of which is the case. Noonan does not have a son-in-law in the department; his stepson, Garrett Hunt, is an officer but was not hired by Acting Chief Quigley.

Selectman Quigley apologized for the misstatements.

"We are all imperfect and make mistakes," she said, explaining that she did not intend to impugn Noonan publicly. "It was a lapse in judgment to name anyone," Quigley said of her statement on the search committee. "I did not intend to target [Noonan] or single you out."

Noonan came to Tuesday's selectmen meeting to clear things up, saying that he found the remarks to be slanderous and a "slap in the face."

Noonan said that he has never worked a detail for Acting Chief Quigley and wondered where the falsehoods had come from. Selectman Quigley said that she would be happy to discuss the matter with Noonan offline.

The former chief further said that he accepted selectman Quigley's apology.

"People make mistakes," he said.

Tana Carlson, Old Coach Road, read a statement during the public comment period in support of Noonan (see letter, page 10). Carlson said that he would have been an ideal member of the police chief selection committee, as he understands the town's culture, people, and police department "up close and personal."

"As a lifelong resident of Cohasset who spent his entire lifelong and distinguished career in Cohasset as a patrolman, all the way up the ranks to serving as our chief for several years, he knows the community as a native, a policeman, and as a full time resident," said Carlson. "I ask you who better than he could perform the search committee duties thoroughly, intelligently, carefully and discreetly? I suggest no one."

Carlson, whose husband Paul served as selectman chair last year and opted not to run for reelection this year, asked when the board will trade "the fabrications and ill will" for "the civility espoused by this board."

Carlson finally implored the board to "leave their personal agendas and biases at the door before they enter and move on to do the productive work required of the office they hold."

AWARD

Cohasset's health agent honored in D.C.

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Board of Health Administrator/Agent Felix Zemel was inducted as a diplomate in the American Academy of Sanitarians in Washington, D.C. this week. The induction ceremony was held on Tuesday, July 9.

Zemel said that the requirements for this honor include holding a Bachelor of Science, seven years in the sanitarian field, published work, and letters of reference. According to Zemel there is currently only one other diplomate in the Commonwealth. He was also one of four selected from around the country this year.

The American Academy of Sanitarians is an organization that elevates the standards, improves the practice, advances the professional proficiency and promotes the highest level of ethical conduct among professional sanitarians in the environmental health field. This award is a prestigious recognition for environmental health professionals.

Zemel was recognized as a new member of the National Environmental Health Association Annual Education Conference in D.C. this week with a display in the event's exhibit hall and an award reception.

The Health Agent said that this is a difficult distinction to achieve and that he was honored.

"I'm honestly excited and humbled," he said in a phone call from D.C., "and I really look forward to working with the Academy to bring the environmental health profession further into the future and reaching more people."

Zemel was recognized as a new member of the National Environmental Health Association Annual Education Conference in D.C. this week with a display in the event's exhibit hall and an award reception.

Zemel is also a technical advisor for the National Environmental Health Association and spent his week in D.C. moderating sessions and attending lectures on everything from electro magnetic fields to housing and school safety.

Zemel recently received another honor; in April, he was inducted as a Fellow of the Local Public Health Institute of Massachusetts. Fellows are selected from health departments across the country and are honored for their demonstrated mastery of public health practice, commitment to their own professional development, and willingness and ability to share their expertise with the next generation of public health practitioners across the state and the country.

The mission of the Local Public Health Institute is to provide and ensure a competent workforce by strengthening and sustaining the capacity of local boards of health to prepare for and respond to public health issues and emergencies and to promote the health of residents of the Commonwealth.

This honor recognizes Zemel as a teacher and mentor to other public health practitioners throughout Massachusetts. On a daily basis, Zemel demonstrates superior abilities in public health on behalf of Cohasset citizens.

Zemel wrote a state grant for tobacco control compliance checks and vendor education and recently published an article in the Journal of Environmental Health on medical marijuana dispensaries.

At 29, Zemel is among the younger health professionals to receive this prestigious award.

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's

The 89th annual Summer Recital Series continues at 6 p.m. each Sunday until Aug. 18.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of 23 bells, President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

July 14 – Richard Watson, Georgetown, Ohio.

July 21 – Helen Hawley, Hudsonville, Mich.

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Tim Reynolds of Hull in loving memory of his brother, Richard Tyler Reynolds; and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Town Counsel reappointed to Local Govt. Advisory Commission

For the latest news visit us online at www.wickedlocalcohasset.com

Paul DeRensis has been reappointed by Governor Deval Patrick to a fifth term as a member of the Massachusetts Local Government Advisory Commission. Lieutenant Governor Timothy Murray administered the oath of office on Tuesday, Feb. 12 in the Governor's Executive Offices in the State House, Boston. DeRensis serves as Cohasset Town Counsel

According to state law, responsibilities of Commissioners include:

- to review and analyze proposed legislation and regulatory changes from the point of view of municipal government and present such point of view to the governor, his executive secretaries and to the general court;
- to act as an independent advocate for the interests of local governments in their relations with state and federal governments;
- to advise officials of the commonwealth and the federal government on the needs of local governments, assist in mobilizing state and federal resources to deal with problems of local governments, provide coordinating support to agencies responsible for administering federal, state and local programs, and promote legislative and administrative proposals reflecting the interests of local governments;
- to establish, from time to time, study committees or task forces to consider issues pertaining to local government in detail and to present the results of those considerations to the governor, the secretaries of his executive offices and to the general court;
- to meet monthly with the governor and at such other times...;
- to meet quarterly with the legislative leadership, and at such other times as may be necessary...

"I am honored by this opportunity for public service, and will do my best to offer ideas and input to the Governor and his team that will help all of the communities of Massachusetts," said DeRensis.

were missing from the pickup truck parked next to the building. It appears the items were stolen overnight, police said.

Coyote

Police responded to a call from a Forest Avenue resident on Monday (July 1) around 12:56 p.m. about a mangy-looking coyote in the back yard near the pool. The coyote fled into the woods and the gate to the pool was closed. There have not been any other reports of coyote sightings lately, police said.

Revelers

A group of July 4th revelers who had a small campfire on Black Rock Beach and were consuming alcohol were sent on their way at 9:50 p.m. on Thursday (July 4).

Summer

Hi there Cohasset! It is so nice to be enjoying the summer, I just wish somehow, we had a "slow down" button to push. Make sure to slow down yourselves whenever you can end and take some photos to capture all those special moments big, and small.

Movie Day

Join the Cohasset Elder Affairs in July 15 for Brown Bag Lunch and Movie Day. This month, they are showing then award winning movie "Lincoln." Showtime is at 12 p.m. Bring your lunch. CEA will provide soft drinks and popcorn. For more information or transportation, call 781-383-9112.

BB&N

Congratulations go out to Cohasset resident Matt Troy, who graduated from Buckingham Browne & Nichols in Cambridge. Matt will be attending Boston College in the School of Arts and Sciences. Way to go Matt!

Harvard

Another great congratulations goes to Christian Ronald, who graduated magna cum laude from Harvard in May, winning a coveted Hoopes Prize for his senior thesis. Christian will be resuming his studies at Harvard pursuing a master's at the American Repertory Theatre. Christian is the son of Dr. James and Susan Ronald of Cohasset, and your family and friends are psyched for you, way to go!

St. Lawrence

Natalie G. Dignam of Cohasset has been selected for inclusion on the dean's list for academic achievement during the spring semester at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. To be eligible for the dean's list at St. Lawrence University, a student must have completed at least four semester units and have an academic average of 3.6 (based on a perfect 4.0 scale) for the semester.

Natalie is a member of the class of 2015 and majors in English. She graduated from Cohasset High School.

Union College

Aisling Kearns, of Cohasset, graduated cum laude from Union College on Sunday, June 16 during the college's 219th Commencement exercises. Kearns, an anthropology major, received a bachelor of arts degree.

URI

At the University of Rhode Island's 127th Commencement on May 18 and 19, more than 3,200 undergraduate and 770 graduate students became the university's newest alumni. The following Cohasset residents were among the students who received their undergraduate degrees: Patrick Bertovich received a bachelor of arts degree in film media. Torey O. Hart received a bachelor of science degree in Marine Affairs. Congratulations!

FUN AT THE REC!

Summer Xtreme 2013 is heating up! This Cohasset Recreation Department Program is designed specifically for middle school students. There are still a few spots left in Week Six (July 29th to Aug. 1), which includes RockOn & Paw Sox and Week Eight (Aug. 8 to 16th) which includes a trip to Nantasket Beach and Paintball. At just $113 per week it's a very affordable way to have fun and meet new friends. At Summer Xtreme, groups are kept small so that counselors can get to know your student and ensure a once in a lifetime experience. Visit cohassetrec.com to register. COURTESY PHOTO/LINDA FECHTER

UConn

The University of Connecticut recently announced that Eloise Catherine Lucas of Cohasset attained the dean's list for the spring 2013 semester. To make the dean's list, students must be taking at least 12 credits, finish the semester with a grade point average that is among the top 25 percent of students enrolled in their school or college, and have no grade below a "C."

Great work!

Wake Forest

Ryan Daly from Cohasset, was named to the spring 2013 dean's list at Wake Forest University.

Students who achieve a 3.4 and no grade below a C were named to the list.

Congratulations, Ryan!

Beach yoga

Just wanted to let everyone know of a series of Yoga classes being offering this summer at Sandy Beach from Balance. Classes are on a donation basis of only $10 and a percentage goes back to helping the Sandy Beach Association.

Join Balance Studio at Sandy Beach in Cohasset for our continuing series of Beach Yoga offerings.

Come enjoy a yoga class as you drink in the salty sea air while you flow through your practice. Enjoy Yoga as it was meant to be...in Nature!

Come one and ALL – Bring your towel/Mat – water and your peaceful warrior!'

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Historical Society celebrates birthday

From the Cohasset Historical Society:

An antique postcard from the Cohasset Historical Society's collection.

On July 16, the Cohasset Historical Society turns 85. The Society was established in 1928 by a group of citizens who shared a love of local history. Through the decades, the Society has worked to preserve and present Cohasset's rich past in a myriad of ways.

To celebrate our birthday, please join us on Sunday, July 28, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., for an old-fashioned Ice Cream Social. Everyone is invited to the party, and there is no charge. A special exhibit highlighting the Society's first 85 years will be on view.

Many community groups use our archives as a resource. This spring, for example, 45 Cohasset High School students used visited the Pratt Building for their term paper research. Students chose from 32 topics that included Cohasset's contribution to the Olympic Games, Cohasset's earliest industries, the history of the South Shore Music Circus and how Cohasset earned its name. The resources that are available at the Society are endless.

We are grateful to the Community Preservation Committee and the citizens of Cohasset for their generous support of our requests for historic preservation funding. The restoration of the original birch flooring at the Pratt Building is spectacular. It highlights the building's magnificent architecture and the MacIver Reddie murals. Be sure to come by during our hours of operation, Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., or especially, Sunday, July 28 during our birthday celebration. For more information visit: cohassethistoricalsociety.org or call: 781-383-1434.

GIMME SHELTER

Baby brothers deserve loving home

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Our babies come in many colors, with many personalities. Confident, sassy, shy, reserved, rambunctious, affectionate, athletic, zany, the possibilities are endless! That's what makes kittens so much fun to watch and work with. No two alike, and each one precious. Two adorable brothers, Ted and Barney are this week's feature kittens. They were in a litter of five, born on April 5th, and their three siblings are now spoken for. Like every shelter cat they have their own story, and happily, they found their way to us for safe keeping until a wonderful forever home comes along.

Ted and Barney need a gentle and patient touch and time to get to know their new family and surroundings.

Ted is a handsome little boy with grey and white markings and a sweet pink nose and cute little grin. His brother Barney is a dark brown and beige tiger with the same pattern of white fur at the face, forehead, chest and paws that his brother has. He also has distinct, almond shaped eyes. Having had a pretty scary start, and moving to a totally new place, these little ones are somewhat shy but my oh my, when you sit and pet them, the big purrs come right out. They are anxious for, and need, attention and love. Being brothers, they are quite bonded and protective with one another. It is sweet to watch them interact, and they certainly deserve to be happy in a loving forever home.

Ted and Barney need a gentle and patient touch and time to get to know their new family and surroundings. Playing will be a great gift for them as they are intrigued by everything that moves and want to be a part of it! In their condo, they are testing out all of the toys. It will be great for them to be able to play freely and show off their kitten antics in a comfy space.

These brothers were rescued by the Mass. Humane Society, arrived at the shelter and were quickly taken in by one of our wonderful foster families. Fostering is a way to help our shelter. Opening your home to kittens and cats that have special needs, or are too young to stay in the shelter is a true commitment, but so rewarding. There are many opportunities to assist with the care of our feline residents and volunteers are always needed. If you are able to help, please call our office at 781-925-3121 for details.

To learn more about Ted and Barney please call Judy at 781-534-4902. Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045.

One of our most recent arrivals is a very special rescue kitten and a true example of what Gimme Shelter is all about. Little Petunia is missing an eye and she developed secondary infections, leaving her with limited vision and in need of 24-hour care. Everyone involved in meeting her immediate need for specialized care has been awesome. From the Animal Health Inspector in Brockton, to our shelter in Hull, and then Crazy Paws in Cohasset, who is helping us with the continuing care for this kitten, and also, Animal Pharm in Scituate, who have offered to help with her medications, it has been very hectic and a show of support. Petunia's case is truly a group effort and coming together of so many individuals and groups who are dedicated to the welfare of needy animals.

And yes, with a lot of love, attention, work and patience, a cat who is blind or who has limited vision can adapt in a very special home. It is a process, but so wonderful when progress is made. You can see Petunia on Hull Seaside Animal Rescue's Facebook page. We are all pulling for her and there are many people who have chosen to get involved and have already sent donations through Paypal to help with her care.

Huge thanks and appreciation go out to everyone who has found a place in their heart for Petunia. If you would like to assist with this effort, please contact our shelter manager, Casey, for more information. Hull Seaside Animal Rescue has a medical fund up and running for cases like this and every little bit helps. All donations are tax deductible and we are happy to provide receipts.

To all of our volunteers, thank you for all of your hard work during this heat wave! It was a tough week. And to those who donated their bottles and cans following family Fourth of July parties, we are so grateful! The bins have been overflowing and it helps us to provide the care and services that our residents need.

OUR VIEW

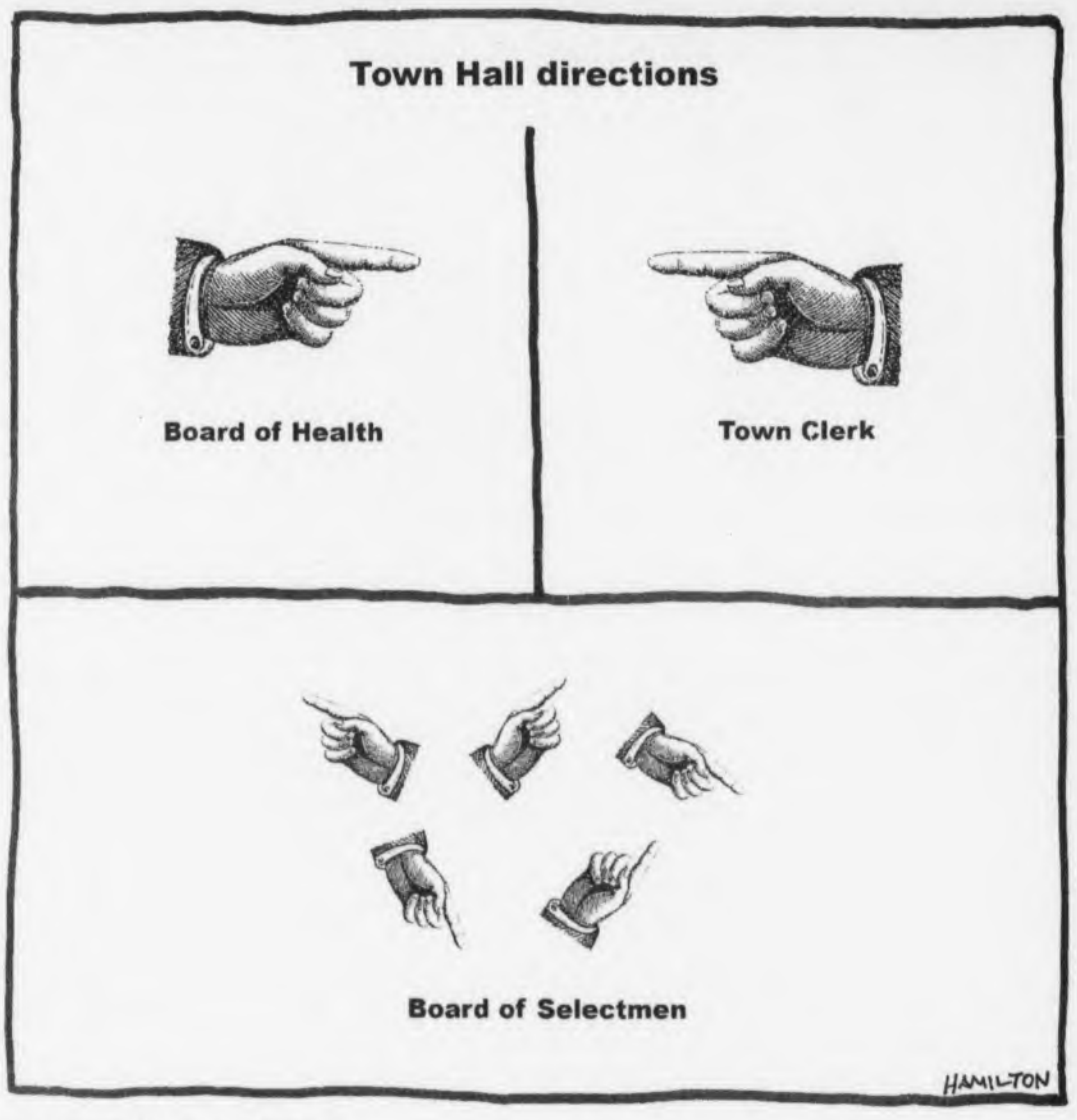
Speedy passage

It is time for the amended Town Manager Act to make its way through the legislative process and become law. Simply put, we need to put this chapter behind us and move forward.

Here is some ancient history: At the 1997 Town Meeting, a Citizens Petition set the stage for the change to a professional town manager to operate the day-to-day operations of the town. Cohasset had been run by the selectmen with a "weak" town administrator. "Weak" meaning the TA had little authority or accountability. At the time, many had lost confidence in the then Board of Selectmen whose members were so bogged down in minutiae that it had become increasingly difficult for them to keep it all straight. They simply could not handle the job before them without professional help.

In 1997 Town Manager Act passed Town Meeting with a majority vote of 71-65 over the objections of a "supermajority" of the then Board of Selectmen.

The amendment to the Town Manager Act was approved by the April 2013 Town Meeting with a majority vote of 223 to 141. The amendment repeals a prohibition against town employees or volunteer officials from becoming Town Manager. It also imposes a 15-month moratorium on selectmen being eligible for the job. The revised TMA also clarifies the roles of the selectmen and town manager, including reaffirming the role of selectmen as the town's goal-setting, policy-directing board, providing directives to the Town Manager.



It was our view in 1997 and that continues today, that the Town Manager Act is good for Cohasset.

Cohasset is also governed by open Town Meeting, meaning that any registered voter in town can attend and vote – therefore, no one should complain about the number of votes when a warrant article passes or fails. In regards to the TMA, Town Meeting has spoken, so let's get on with it.

We are happy to learn this week that Selectmen Fred Koed, Diane Kennedy and Steve Gaumer will attend the July 23 hearing at the State House in support of the revised TMA.

A quick note: the revised TMA should be a step forward, not a step back. In our view, selectmen need to regroup and refocus on their roles as policy-setters and should not be embroiled in micro-managing the Town Manager, public safety officials, employees or town boards, whether appointed or elected. Interfering and second-guessing their efforts will only get in the way of productivity. It can undermine creativity, hard work, initiative, and loyalty.

No one is asking Selectmen to be "potted plants" – but they need to find the middle ground in exercising leadership while allowing others to do their jobs without undue interference.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Leave personal agendas at the door

At the last Selectmen's meeting Selectman Quigley directed erroneous and uncalled for aspersions against our former Police Chief, Brian Noonan.

I would like to comment about specific qualifications of a person who volunteered his time and service to our town as Chief Noonan agreed to do when asked to serve on a police search committee.

As a lifelong resident of Cohasset who spent his entire lifelong and distinguished career in Cohasset as a patrolman, all the way up the ranks to serving as our chief for several years, he knows the community as a native, a policeman, and as a full time resident. He knows the culture, the people, the police department and it's composition up close and personal. He knows what is needed from and can be expected of our force and of the community at large. He knows specifics for the work and performance goals. I ask you who better than he could perform the search committee duties thoroughly, intelligently, carefully and discreetly? I suggest NO ONE.

I ask further, when will the insults, fabrications and ill will cease? When will the civility espoused by this Board begin? I implore the selectmen to leave their personal agendas and biases at the door before they enter and move on to do the productive work required of the office they hold.

Thank you.

Road to Recovery appreciates support

The annual South Shore American Cancer Society Road to Recovery volunteer luncheon was held on Wednesday, June 5, at the Lightkeepers Residence in Cohasset. These volunteer drivers give generously of their time and resources to bring local cancer patients to the life saving treatments they need when they have no other means of transportation. Once a year we gather to recognize the generosity of these volunteers who make such a difference in the lives of cancer patients.

We wish to thank the following establishments who made generous donations to the luncheon: Fruit Center Marketplace, Fresh Market, Tosca's, Stop & Shop, Shaw's, Mill Wharf Restaurant, Bed Bath & Beyond, Tedeschi, Itzaparty, Neet Nails in Norwell, Patriot Cinema, Redeye Roasters, Trader Joe's and Stars Restaurant. We appreciate their willingness to help us honor our volunteers drivers.

New hires at Town Hall, Senior Center

There are some new faces around Cohasset Town Hall and the Senior Center this summer. Elder Affairs recently hired Elizabeth Salerno as the full-time EA Service Coordinator. She will be working alongside longtime EA employee Carol Barrett, who has worked part-time in the department for years. Barrett will provide assistance on a part-time basis until the position is up and running.

The EA office is located in the South Shore Community Center, 3 N. Main St. The department is also in the process of interviewing for the positions of Assistant Director and Administrative Assistant.

A new face in the Building and Inspections office in Town Hall is clerk Angela Geso, who will assist the Building, Planning and Health departments. Geso will be "the central focus of anyone going in for permits," said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. She was interviewed and selected by Building Inspector Bob Egan, Planning Board administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak and Health Administrator/Board of Health Agent Felix Zemel.

Both new hires started their positions in July.

COHASSET GARDEN CLUB

'Bee A Pollinator Pal' comes alive

SANDRA DURANT

There is an often quoted saying from the Nigerian Igbo culture and proverb "Ora na azu nwa" which means it takes the community/village to raise a child. Appreciating the value of partnership within a community and wanting to introduce Cohasset school children to the importance of Pollinators in the Environment, Cohasset Garden Club's Conservation Committee spent two years forging relationships and creatively developing a proposal, named by a second grade student, "Bee a Pollinator Pal Week," which targeted all six classes of second graders at Osgood Elementary School. The goal was just one week of daily pollinator education, taught in a variety of approaches.

With a considerable amount of planning and collaboration, the week of June 3-7 was developed to maximize the second graders' learning experience and make it fun for them.

First, the task was to convince the school and enlist teaching resources. Osgood's principal Bob LeCount, being an avid gardener, was immediately "on board" and the teachers were excited. Best of all, Vanessa Day, currently serving as a Cohasset Garden Club Board member and a member of its Conservation Committee, was Osgood's PSO Curriculum Enrichment Coordinator. Without a doubt, Vanessa's planning and meticulous follow through were instrumental through this critical early phase and throughout the program. Though all early indicators pointed to success for this project, at this point it was still over a year in development.

With a considerable amount of planning and collaboration, the week of June 3-7 was developed to maximize the second graders' learning experience and make it fun for them. In late May the students began to observe the metamorphosis of caterpillars into butterflies. "Decorate a Pollinator" artwork was sent home a week in advance with the idea that the returned masterpieces would be displayed on the school's main bulletin board, which had been specifically decorated for the week by volunteer parents. Monday, June 3rd, the program began with a naturalist from the South Shore Natural Science Center speaking and demonstrating to a full-grade assembly the importance of pollinators in the environment. Tuesday, the students came to school dressed as their favorite pollinator and viewed an amazing video of pollination in progress titled "The Beauty of Pollination." Day 3 the students took action as they planted in the school's new garden a wide range of flowering perennials attractive to a variety of pollinators. Teachers "sat back" while garden club members taught each class why the plants attract pollinators, the important role a pollinator plays and how to properly plant a garden. Even the services of Jay Landscaping, who prepared the garden, and club member and Landscape Designer Martha Gangemi, who designed the garden layout, were utilized. Thursday, at snack time, the students were taught the role that pollination plays in what they eat. Later that day all classes shared the joy of releasing newly emerged butterflies. Some called goodbye to each one by name. Friday, the final day of the program, the students were sent home with pollinator-friendly marigold seeds donated by Holly Hill Farm in hopes that they would "put into practice " what they had learned over the past week.

To the satisfaction of everyone, "Bee a Pollinator Pal Week" at Osgood School held multiple benefits: Cohasset Garden Club partnered with a number of enthusiastic community resources; the second grade teachers were delighted with this new rich and varied learning program for their classes; the students were thoroughly engrossed; South Shore Natural Science Center and Holly Hill Farm fulfilled their very important community outreach efforts; and best of all, the members of Cohasset Garden Club know that they made a difference to the children at Osgood School.

And if that wasn't reward enough, "Bee a Pollinator Pal Week" won the Marion Thompson Fuller Brown Award at the Garden Club of America's recent annual Zone meeting for "Demonstrating on-going involvement with elementary students". It didn't take quite a village, but every step of the way it took the enthusiasm and determination of a dedicated list of members of the community and the staff at Osgood Elementary School. Thank you to each and everyone — it truly was an amazing educational week.

HEDLUND REPORT

A broken system financing a broken system

SEN. ROBERT HEDLUND

Passing a perpetual annual tax increase now allows legislators to avoid any accountability when these tax hikes go into effect.

For the second time in just over two months I have led debate and voted against the latest misguided attempt at transportation financing in the Massachusetts Senate.

The first time was in a rare Saturday Senate session in mid-April, when it was apparent to me that many legislators were not fully informed on the consequences of the bill. The bill passed by a 30-5 margin. The second time was June 27, less than 24 hours after the final bill was released from the Conference Committee. Again, the bill easily passed the Senate, by a 34-6 margin.

Both times the Senate pushed through a variety of new taxes, totaling a half billion dollars, which will do nothing more than throw a short-term Band-Aid on the MBTA's debt burdened and aging transportation infrastructure.

Despite the impact on taxpayers, the bill never received a public hearing.

The most odious example of the taxes in this bill is raising the 23.5-cent-a-gallon gas tax by 3 cents a gallon. As part of this increase, the Senate approved a provision that indexes annual gas tax increases to changes in the Consumer Price Index (CPI), a measure of inflation. This means every year the gas tax will likely automatically increase.

Elected legislators should vote and be accountable for any future tax increases. Passing a perpetual annual tax increase now allows legislators to avoid any accountability when these tax hikes go into effect. If these legislators want to see the gas tax increase every year, then they should vote on it every year and be held accountable for those votes.

Over the last 10 years, CPI has increased 28 percent. That would have meant an additional 28 percent increase in the gas tax over a period when the price of gas already nearly tripled. Instead of a one-year, 3-cent increase, this is a perpetual tax increase which lawmakers will not even have to vote on in the future.

Under the mantra of "Reform before Revenue," I was significantly involved in the passage of a meaningful Transportation Reform bill in 2009. At the time the promise was that the Commonwealth would be on track to save $6.5 billion over 20 years, which equates to about $300 million a year in savings. It has since been revealed that we have only recovered about $500M in savings in the three plus years since this reform, and of that, $320M in savings is due to renegotiating a terrible deal involving "swaptions" that the former Turnpike Authority had entered into years before. So, in fact, we have only realized actual savings due to the 2009 reform of about $180 million, well below projections.

We are nowhere near achieving the savings that we promised taxpayers in 2009, yet the Governor and others in the Commonwealth have already made a successful push to burden citizens with increased taxes to finance our transportation system, rather than follow through with the promised reform and savings.

One such reform was a public-private commission that was supposed to be appointed under the 2009 law to oversee and vet proposals from private companies seeking to develop transportation infrastructure. These proposals generally involve a privately financed project that the Commonwealth could not afford to undertake, such as the recently proposed add-a-lane on Route 3 South. Unfortunately, this commission was not appointed until very recently, and only after I contacted the Patrick administration to inquire about the status of the commission.

Another unexplainable cost that will come from this recent bill is the much-debated South Coast Rail, which remains a priority of the Governor and will likely be funded through the new revenues contained in this legislation. As I have said before, the South Coast Rail project is a boondoggle waiting to happen. The cost to build this line will likely be two to three times the Patrick administration's estimate of $2 billion once all is said and done. After it is built, the South Coast Rail will require a massive operating subsidy, likely in the neighborhood of at least $35M-$50M per year. Asking citizens of the Commonwealth to shoulder a larger tax burden to pay for a line that is guaranteed to contribute to the operating deficit of the MBTA for many years to come is negligent at best.

As the Pioneer Institute pointed out in a recent report, The MBTA's $3 billion maintenance backlog can be traced to new transit lines diverting funds from maintenance to expansion. Today, nearly half the MBTA's $8.6 billion debt comes from building, operating, maintaining and paying debt service on expanded/new transit lines.

The Senate Republican Caucus offered an alternate transportation financing plan which would have included no new tax increases and a moratorium on capital projects unless the administration could show how the project would be funded. Unfortunately, this plan was rejected early in debate.

I would like to think that the Commonwealth's transportation system would be on steady financial ground after this latest transportation finance effort. Unfortunately, even proponents of the plan will agree that this is not the case. Unless reforms are embraced and implemented, and wasteful capital projects such as the South Coast Rail are stopped, I am certain that there will be additional calls for tax increases in the near future, further impacting our overburdened taxpayers.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

FOR THE RECORD

Cool pix are hot summer trend

GREGORY MATHIS

Summer vacations have been one of our more popular reader callouts since we started the feature. Last year, we received a wide variety of pictures, including all kinds of pictures from families enjoying the beautiful beaches in the area.

Judging from the traffic backed up traveling east and west along the Mass Pike Sunday evening following the Fourth of July holiday week, as well as the slow-moving line of cars traveling off Cape along routes 495 and 3, vacation season is most certainly in full swing.

The weekend traffic snarls come as no surprise, especially in southeastern Massachusetts with numerous hot spots on the South Shore and Cape Cod being popular vacation destinations.

So as you arrive home from your latest excursion and start downloading all those wonderful memories, don't forget to share those family vacation photos with us.

And if you're still planning your summer getaway, whether locally or jetting off to a tropical destination, keep your camera handy and share your photos.

Even if you're not planning to go far and it's more of a "stay-cation" featuring a backyard barbecue, pool party or day trip to the beach, we'd still like to see how you're celebrating the summer with family and friends.

Summer vacations have been one of our more popular callouts since we started asking readers to share their photographs a few years back. Last year, we received a wide variety of pictures, including all kinds of pictures from families enjoying the beautiful beaches in the area. From sandcastle contests, to kids being buried up to their neck in sand, to people showing off their catch of the day, many families chose to be near the water during their time off.

We also received photos from folks taking a traditional vacation, including a local youngster sitting at a director's chair while visiting Universal Studios in California. And we appreciate the youngster who took his local paper with him on the family vacation to Tuscon, Arizona, and had someone snap his picture holding the paper in front of a giant cactus. Nice touch. We'll always run photos of people holding up their hometown paper.

So let's see what you're up to this summer.

There are a number of ways to send us your summer vacation photos. Log on to your Wicked Local website and look for the link seeking summer vacation photos. There will either be an email to send the photo or a link to upload the photo. If you can't find it or run into difficulty, you can always email the photo and caption to me at gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I'll pass it on to the right person.

Please be sure to include your name and/or the name of the person who took the photograph, as well as the first and last names of the people in the photo (left to right is preferable), where the photo was taken and any other important details about the photo and what town you live in. It's also helpful if you can provide an email address in the event we need to reach you to clarify any information or obtain additional information.

If you take care of that, we'll take care of the rest.

We'll take your submissions right through Labor Day weekend, so snap to it and show us how you're spending your summer.

Planners appoint new associate

The Planning Board has a new associate member. The board met with the Board of Selectmen Tuesday to appoint Brian Frazier to fill an unexpired term.

An associate member can only vote in the event that a full member is absent or unable to vote due to a conflict of interest or similar concern.

Frazier is a landscape architect and has lived in Cohasset for four years.

Each board voted unanimously to appoint Frazier (4-0 planning board, 5-0 selectmen).

Treas.-collector search underway

Cohasset's Treasurer Collector, Jane Lepardo, recently resigned her post, having found a new job closer to her home community. However, she will remain to help the town of Cohasset close out the fiscal year 2013 books, according to Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

By having Lepardo assist for a little longer, "the person responsible for collecting is able to close out the books," Milanoski said.

In the meantime, the position has been posted and resumes have been collected. Milanoski said that two qualified candidates have been identified, and the first round of interviews will take place sometime next week.

If a top candidate is selected, the appointment will be brought to the Board of Selectmen for their approval or rejection. The board has 15 days to accept or reject a department head appointment.

The town is also seeking a deputy treasurer collector, but Milanoski said that qualified candidates have yet to be chosen for interviews.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Budget transfers

The town of Cohasset is closing the books on fiscal year 2013; FY14 began on July 1.

The Advisory Committee held a joint meeting with the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday to approve several year-end line item budget transfers, a total of $88,536. Both boards voted unanimously (5-0) to approve the transfers as a whole.

The transfers cover projected budget deficits and come from available parts of the budget. The transfers are as follows:

- Transfer to (projected budget deficits):
- Town Manager Personnel: $3,578
- Finance expenses: $1,673
- Treasurer-Collector expenses: $2,500
- Legal: $38,535
- Police personnel: $6,314
- Police overtime: $30,067
- Harbormaster: $336
- Streetlights: $1,849
- Facilities: $2,002
- Elder Affairs: $776
- Insurance: $906

Available for transfer/transfer from:

- Health insurance: $35,974
- Fire overtime: $29,703
- Other general government expenses: $7,156
- Workers comp: $5,000
- Total: $88,536

Reserve fund available: $28,816.07.

TM ACT

town manager — an expenditure of $12,500 (the contract's cost is $14,000 but $3,500 was identified in the budget to put toward the expense).

Advisory approved the expenditure with the caveat that before the total amount is spent, the selectmen will vote on which governing document will guide the search — the town's current TMA, which has been law since 1997, or the revised version of the Act that is currently a Home Rule Petition (bill no. 3486) in the hands of the state legislature.

Hearing

The bill is scheduled for a hearing with the Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government at the State House on Tuesday, July 23.

This is also the date of the next scheduled selectmen meeting. At least three of the five selectmen –Koed, vice-chair Diane Kennedy and Steve Gaumer – said that they plan to attend the hearing. The board voted unanimously to have Koed write a letter to the legislature stating that the selectmen support the bill, and to speak at the hearing on the board's behalf.

Advisory board members expressed their concern over the whole process, however, wanting to know — what's the rush?

Advisory member Andrew Willard questioned the wisdom of approving the expenditure for the consultants without first knowing how the legislature is going to vote on the Act.

Some members were under the impression that the selectmen are trying to control the process by limiting the candidate pool for the permanent town manager position, since one of the changes in the revised Act affects who is eligible for the position by removing a prohibition against letting town officials and employees apply.

"Are you purposely try to get the new town manager act on the street?" Willard asked the selectmen. "People are trying to understand."

Koed stated that now is simply the time to hire a town manager, pointing out that it could take until February to hire and appoint a new town manager. By then the town will have been without a permanent one for two years.

Advisory member Bob Benson said that two years without a town manager is not the end of the world. In the meantime the town government has stabilized; Benson said the past year in particular has seen many improvements under Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who was appointed in March 2012 following the removal of former town manager Michael Coughlin (who is suing the town for reinstatement).

Advisory member Tom Reardon proposed that the selectmen instruct the Collins Center to simply conduct the first part of their search process – creating a community profile for the town – before launching the actual town manager search. This way they can wait and see what happens with the TMA in the coming weeks and months.

State Rep. Bradley recently told the town's Governance Committee (GC), the board that revised the Act, that the bill could take several months to go through the legislative process. The worst-case scenario is that it could take until March 2014 to become a state law. Bradley was optimistic that the bill would pass. However, when the TMA was enacted in 1997, it took only three months to become state law.

GC chair Christine Cunning emailed Bradley last week to thank him for meeting with her committee but also to respond to comments he made in the Mariner the previous week, indicating that perhaps the reason the bill passed more quickly in 1997 was because perhaps then-rep Mary Jeanette Murray had labeled the TMA an emergency because the town's government was changing.

Emergency

Cunning said that if that constituted an emergency back then, this could also be considered an emergency. She urged Bradley to give the bill priority, citing a recent example in another community; the town of Sandwich filed a Home Rule Petition with the legislature after Cohasset filed its bill, but had received a hearing date before Cohasset. Cohasset received the July 23 hearing shortly after.

This matter was raised during the discussion with the Advisory board, and again during the public comment period at the end of the meeting. Quigley said she was disturbed that the governance committee wrote to the state legislature calling the TMA matter an emergency without consulting with the selectmen first, since the GC is supposed to answer to the selectmen.

GC member Jack Keniley was in attendance and clarified that Cunning wrote an email to Bradley, not the legislature. Gaumer said that the GC chair did the right thing; without her letter, the bill would not have gotten a hearing date so soon, he said.

"It wasn't scheduled until it was pushed," said Gaumer.

A debate broke out on whether the issue was in fact an emergency. Koed was concerned this might come up during the hearing, and said that he wouldn't call the issue an emergency. However, he did agree to support the will of Town Meeting and ask the legislature to pass the bill.

Other members of the selectmen have similarly said that they wish to honor the spirit of Town Meeting when it comes to hiring a permanent town manager, and would like to wait until the TMA changes have been made before appointing a final candidate, however recognizing that they would like to resolve the matter soon.

Kennedy said that the board waited to launch a search for a new town manager earlier this year because they wanted to wait until Town Meeting had voted on the Act. The April 22 Town Meeting approved the TMA with a 61 percent majority.

Kennedy said that likewise, the selectmen would like to wait to hire a new town manager until the bill becomes law. "We presume it will be passed by the legislature and will become the law of the land," she said. "We will hire from there."

The selectmen will vote by October 1 – which is a Tuesday – to determine under which law the town manager search will be conducted— current or proposed TMA.

While there seems to be a rush to hire a new town manager because the current acting town manager's contract is up in December, Kennedy said that should not be the deciding factor in the hiring process. Milanoski's contract could always be extended, she explained.

In other words, Kennedy said, "That shouldn't drive the bus."

While the selectmen will voice their support for the retooled Act during the State House hearing, Coughlin said this week that he plans to oppose it (see related story). Some officials, including Koed, concern that the opposition – not to mention Coughlin's litigation – will negatively impact the town's ability to attract top candidates to apply for the job.

Gaumer summed up why the selectmen should strongly encourage the bill's passage. "We act as the representatives of Town Meeting [which] voted very clearly" in favor of the TMA, he said, adding that the selectmen should acknowledge that this is the will of Cohasset people and "encourage the legislature to take positive action."

TOWN MANAGER ACT

Coughlin will oppose TMA bill at State House

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's bill to amend the Town Manager Act (TMA) could have some opposition during its upcoming public hearing at the State House.

The bill (H. 3486) is scheduled for a hearing on Tuesday, July 23 at a hearing with the Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government.

Christine Cunning, chair of Cohasset's Governance Committee, the selectmen-appointed board that was charged with revising the TMA and bringing those changes to Town Meeting, is hopeful that the bill's proponents will be well represented at the hearing.

Members of the Board of Selectmen will be there to voice their support for the TMA, on behalf of the townspeople. Selectmen Diane Kennedy and Steve Gaumer both said they planned to attend, as did chairman Fred Koed. The board voted unanimously on Tuesday to have Koed draft a letter to present the legislature stating that the selectmen support the will of Town Meeting and would like to see the bill's passage, and have Koed speak on the board's behalf.

However, former Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who was fired in March 2012 and is suing the town for reinstatement, said this week that he plans to attend the hearing to oppose the bill, and requested the opportunity to testify against it.

The revised TMA would bring the town's governing documents – the TMA and town bylaws – into alignment with one another. Among several changes, which include defining a timeline for the town's budget process, appointing auditors, the process of removing a town manager or dealing with a TM's absence, the retooled Act removes a prohibition that keeps town employees and volunteers from applying for a permanent town manager position.

Cohasset is launching a search for a permanent town manager. The Board of Selectmen voted in late May to begin the search process and voted on June 18 to hire the UMass Collins Center to help facilitate the search. In the meantime, Cohasset's Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's contract is up in December 2013.

Milanoski was appointed as interim TM in March 2012 following the removal of Michael Coughlin. Coughlin spent only six months on the job.

The selectmen have indicated that they intend to honor the spirit of the revised Act with the town manager search underway, meaning that town employees or board members could be eligible. However, according to the town's current act, these folks would be barred from applying.

None of this sits well with Coughlin.

Coughlin wrote in a July 8 email to State Representatives Garrett Bradley and Sarah Peake that he believes the bill is flawed and fails to incorporate suggestions from a recent Dept. of Revenue report and Melanson and Heath audit of the town, among other concerns.

"The bill is the product of a flawed process that raises serious legal, ethical and policy questions," Coughlin wrote in his email to the state reps, adding that the bill "is being considered against the backdrop of multiple litigation by the former police chief, the former public works director and myself."

Former police chief Mark DeLuca is also seeking reinstatement of his position after his contract was allowed to run out in January 2013. DeLuca was suspended with pay in May 2012. The former public works director was town engineer Mark Brennan, who did contract work for the town of Cohasset. Coughlin promoted Brennan to a department head position during his tenure, along with several other employees, who also received raises.

The new contracts Coughlin inked without the selectmen's vetting led to labor disputes with town unions and contributed to Coughlin's removal. The selectmen voted to rescind the contracts, and Brennan's contract with the town was not renewed during a spring 2012 hiring freeze. He was hired by Milanoski to do contract work in Fiscal Year 2013.

Coughlin also alleges a conspiracy with the Governance Committee's involvement in revising the Act, pointing out that the committee is comprised of members of the former town manager search committee, which Milanoski chaired in 2011. The former town manager alleged that the current acting town manager was a candidate for the position then (however Milanoski has stated in the past that he never applied for the job).

Coughlin claims that the governance committee's revisions to the TMA focus on increasing the odds of local officials like Milanoski to become permanent town manager.

Cunning responded that she feels too much attention is being paid to only one change in the Act — the eligibility of town manager candidates. Many other issues, including outlining the town budget process, were identified and worked on by the governance committee.

"There is no attention being paid to the amendment in its entirety," said Cunning. The governance chair further explained how challenging the TMA changes at this point in the process would derail what was approved by Town Meeting.

"It would discredit the democratic process for this issue to be ignored and/or re-vetted at this juncture, after open and thorough 61 percent passage, by secret ballot, no less, at Town Meeting," she said. "This is the final word of the citizens, to have a say in their government."

Volume 38 - Report No. 27 July 1-5, 2013

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives and local senators on two roll calls from the week of July 1-5.

$34 BILLION FISCAL 2014 STATE BUDGET (H 3538)

House 124-29, Senate 36-3, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick an estimated $34 billion state budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2013. The price tag is up $1.5 billion from last year's $32.5 billion package. The budget is depending on a $500 million plus tax package that has been approved by the Legislature but has not yet been signed by the governor.

Supporters said the budget is a fiscally responsible and balanced one that funds important programs to the best of the state's ability during this difficult economy.

Opponents said the budget is excessive and also relies on a $500 million plus tax hike. Some noted that the package does not include sufficient reform of the welfare system to reduce fraud and ensure that electronic benefit transfer (EBT) cards are used only for necessities and by those qualify for them.

(A "Yes" vote is for the budget. A "No" vote is against it.)

$134 MILLION FISCAL 2013 SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 3539)

House 153-0, Senate 39-0, approved a $134 million supplemental budget designed to close out the books on fiscal 2013, which ended on June 30. The measure requires a photo identification on all EBT cards used by welfare recipients.

Other provisions include $55.7 million to cover the remainder of snow and ice costs from last winter; $500,000 to fund Welcome Home bonuses for soldiers; one-time reimbursement reserve for cities and towns facing unanticipated costs related to extreme weather including communities impacted by Hurricane Irene; $200,000 to establish a reserve fund to provide for home modifications for victims of the Boston Marathon bombings and funding to ensure the family of slain MIT police officer Sean Collier is eligible for Line of Duty benefits.

Supporters said the package is fiscally responsible and that it funds necessary programs including several which are running out of money.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

GOVERNOR AND LEGISLATIVE LEADERS CLASH ON TAXES - Gov. Patrick returned the transportation financing bill, including its $500 million plus tax hikes, to the Legislature with an amendment. The bill includes a 3-cent-per-gallon increase in the state's current 21-cent-per-gallon gas tax, which, beginning in 2015, would also be indexed to inflation; a $1 hike in the current $2.51-per-package cigarette tax; an increase in the tax on cigars and smokeless tobacco; a change in the way utilities are classified for tax purposes; a new 6.25 percent sales tax on computer system design services as well as services to modify prewritten software; and reinstatement of tolls at exits 1 through 6 on the Massachusetts Turnpike in Western Massachusetts.

Patrick's amendment would impose an additional gas tax hike, estimated at between 3 or 4 cents per gallon, in 2017 if the tolls from Newton to the New York border come down as planned, eliminating $135 million in tax revenue. Senate President Therese Murray and House Speaker Robert DeLeo both oppose the additional hike, which basically means it is "dead on arrival."

MORE HEARINGS SCHEDULED - Here are some upcoming hearings at the Statehouse at which the public may weigh in on proposed laws.

SENIOR CITIZENS SAFETY ZONE (S 77) - Room A-2 on July 18 at 10 a.m. The Committee on Community Development and Small Businesses. Allows cities and towns to double speeding fines in areas adjacent to nursing homes, assisted living facilities, hospitals and senior housing and community centers.

BAN SEXUAL ORIENTATION CONVERSION THERAPY (H 154) - Room B-1 on July 16 at 1 p.m. The Committee on Children, Families and Persons with Disabilities. Prohibits psychiatrists and other mental health professionals from providing conversion therapy to lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender minors under 18 designed to change their sexual orientation or gender identity. Supporters of the ban say there is evidence this type of therapy can pose significant risks of self-destructive behavior and argued there is no sound evidence that it works.

Other proposals on the committee's agenda include a student loan program providing up to $1,800 per year to direct care human service workers to help pay any of their outstanding college loans (S 22); mandating that a female employee on maternity leave for the adoption of a child be entitled to the same benefits offered by her employer as one on leave for the birth of a child (S 58); and creating a pilot program to provide a one-time $10,000 low-interest loan to 30 individuals to assist them in the payment of expenses directly resulting from their child's terminal illness (H 95).

NO ROBOCALLS TO CELL PHONES (S 131) - Room A-1 on July 16 at 1 p.m. Committee on Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure. Prohibits robocalls to cell phones and other mobile electronic devices. The measure exempts messages from school districts to students, parents or employees; from companies advising employees of work schedules; from correctional facilities advising victims of parules and furloughs of offenders; and from municipalities and state government. It also would fine companies up to $10,000 if they make a prohibited robocall and allow individuals who are called to sue a company for $10,000 in damages. Last year the House approved a similar bill but it died in the Senate.

Other measures on the committee's agenda include making all faxes and e-mails confidential without the requirement of a confidentiality statement (S 108); requiring all pre-recorded telephone telemarketing calls to residents and businesses to include an option allowing the person or business to be removed from any future call list (H 251); and allowing the sale of alcohol at continuing care communities, retirement communities and assisted living facilities (H 253).

STUDENTS MUST ATTEND NUTRITION CLASS (S 242) - Room A-1 on September 12 at 10 a.m. The Committee on Children, Families and Persons with Disabilities. Requires all public school students in grades 1 to 9 to attend a weekly class dedicated to nutrition education and physical fitness guidelines. The class would include instruction on fat content awareness, cholesterol and carbohydrate counts, organic foods awareness, kosher food benefits, the benefits of dietary fiber, general nutritional health guidelines and the dangers of fast food establishments.

Other proposals subject to the hearing require all school coaches to complete a course in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) from the American Heart Association, American Red Cross or other state-approved agency (S 231); provide 50 percent matching grants to cities and towns for the purchase of automated external defibrillators for use in schools, senior centers and senior housing complexes (S 251); require all public high school students to take a course in the use of CPR and automatic external defibrillators as a prerequisite for graduation (S 266); encourage but does not require all schools to teach each student the basic facts about skin cancer and the dangers of natural sunburns and tanning devices (S 279); and require schools to allow students with life-threatening allergies to possess and administer epinephrine to themselves. Epinephrine is injected to counteract allergic reactions to food and other sources. The measure also requires schools to maintain a stock supply of epinephrine to be administered in the event of an emergency. Supporters said that epinephrine, available in an easy-to-carry container that looks like a pen, can be used to ease a child's allergic reaction and could save lives if the allergy is life-threatening.

line ordering that's a problem for independent bookstores... It changes what people buy."

For instance, maps, almanacs and similar fare don't sell as well as they used to, since people just go online for directions and resources, Detwiler explained.

Buttonwood has gotten in on the e-book craze, however, partnering with a company called "kobo" which specializes in bringing e-reading to independent bookstores. It's an alternative to big box stores and helps to support local business.

Detwiler said that some book genres remain popular in print form — fiction, biography, history, and, of course, children's literature.

For early readers, said Detwiler, "I don't think there's any substitute for sitting next to a mother, father, grandmother or someone who loves you and turning the pages of a book. I'm not anti e-readers but can't see them having the same emotional impact... but if that's what kids grow up with, I suppose that's what they'll be used to.

"I had a lot of pleasure reading to my kids every night," Detwiler added. "I would love to see that continue."

Detwiler, who has lived in Norwell with her husband for 53 years, also has fond memories of reading as a child, which started before she was even born.

"My mom read to me when she was expecting me," she said. "She read out loud from an anthology of British poetry."

Early on, Detwiler considered books a precious commodity. Growing up in East Bridgewater, the bookstore owner said that her family couldn't afford to buy books. She turned to her local library, right across the street from her school.

"I used to go over there on free periods. I always had access" to books, said Detwiler.

Buttonwood has fittingly partnered with local libraries over the years, hosting author talks in Cohasset and Hingham, among other events.

While reading has always been and will always be a chief hobby – an "addicted reader," Detwiler said she can't fall asleep without reading first – the book business was not her first career choice. She first worked conducting cancer research at Boston's City Hospital and later as a special needs teacher.

Wanting to free up time to travel, Detwiler decided that starting her own business was the way to go.

"I didn't realize if you have your own business, you're lucky if you get to travel at all," Detwiler laughed.

Now it's time to turn to the next chapter in her life. Joking that she's "way past retirement age," Detwiler said it's time to take a break and make more time for other things she enjoys, such as painting with pastels (she takes lessons at the North River Art Society) and singing alongside her husband in their church choir and the Fine Arts Chorale. Their children and grandchildren also live locally—they have three sons in Norwell and two in Scituate.

"It's great to have them all around," said Detwiler.

It turns out that Buttonwood Books is a family affair. Detwiler's daughter-in-law, Kathy, is a co-owner and will continue to help run things.

It helps Detwiler with the "bittersweet" part of retiring from the job she loves, knowing that the store will be well looked after. "I'm leaving it in good hands," she said.

Co-owner Arna Lewis, who teaches fifth grade at Cohasset's Deer Hill School, will also continue working at Buttonwood. "She understands children's books and has a lot of talent she'll bring to the mix," said Detwiler.

However, Buttonwood's founder said that she'll miss being in the store on a regular basis — and will miss her co-workers the most.

"We've gotten to be quite the family," Detwiler said. "We've had a lot of wonderful customers, people who have been friends through the years. We've seen babies grow up and have their own kids."

In a small-town shop over the course of a quarter century, "You really get a slice of life," Detwiler said.

One thing is for certain—whether she's home at night waiting to fall asleep, or just popping into Buttonwood to check on things, Detwiler will remain a book lover for life.

"I can't deal without my books," she said.

The Cohasset Williamsport team wrapped up their tournament on Barnes field as they hosted the Weymouth American team.

Weymouth got out to an early lead putting three on the board with a first inning three-run homer. Cohasset responded by getting back two in the second with hits by Zander Gomez, Conor Joslin, and Cliff Ward.

Charlie Devin tied it up in the top of the third with a solo home run. The Cohasset squad was hitting consistently with power throughout the order.

They are still battling to put things together in the second half of the season.

The Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Baseball team has had some strong performances, but they have yet to put things together this year.

The offense for Post 118 has shown flashes of explosiveness in its 22-3 smashing of Holbrook, while they had tough times in their 3-0 loss to Canton and a 13-4 loss to Braintree.

There was also a big 9-0 win on Monday at Stoughton.

In that game, Brendan O'Connell, a Cohasset junior who primarily played second and shortstop with the Skippers, took the ball in an emergency start and pitched a gem, throwing a one-hit shutout.

"He pitched the game of his life," said Cohasset general manager Scott Arnold. "I completely ran out of pitchers. My starters all had dead arms, or were injured. We were tired. I looked down the bench and he offered to take the ball."

Calef returns to defend State Amateur crown

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

Mike Calef, formerly of West Bridgewater and Brockton CC, is flying up from Texas to defend his State Amateur championship at Longmeadow CC.

Calef moved to Texas after winning the 2011 State Mid-Amateur Championship at Pocasset. That victory qualified him for last year's State Amateur at Tedesco.

He took his family back home to West Bridgewater for vacation last summer and entered the State Amateur and won the darn thing.

An interesting sidelight to the tournament is the battle between Old Sandwich's Doug Clapp and Thorny Lea's John Hadges for the MGA Player of the Year honor.

Hadges, who won the Norfolk County Classic and the Hornblower Memorial earlier this year, had the lead taken away from him by Clapp, who finished second to Hadges at the Norfolk and Hornblower tournaments.

But in recent weeks Clapp overtook Hadges and leads, 388 points to 325.

Clapp has to be considered one of the favorites. But there are several golfers from the region who could dethrone him. Hadges could win his third State Am, putting him just one away from the record.

Kingston's Herbie Aikens is always a threat to win any tournament he enters. Hanover's Matt Montt is a young and talented golfer who could surprise the field. Ryan Riley of Easton could win the title again. He has been playing well. So has Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea.

Other locals in the field include: Thomas Grant of Foxborough CC, Connor Hayes of MGA Links in Norton, Jack Weeks of Wollaston GC, John Gratton and Patrick Frodigh of Dedham Country & Polo Club, Steven Burak and Peter Gordon of Thorny Lea, Barry Higham of the Back Nine Club of Lakeville, Matt Miller of Plymouth CC, Eric Daniel and Phuong Do of Presidents GC, Kevin Gately of Harmon GC, Jeffrey Durkin of Hatherly CC, Rob McMenimon of Black Rock CC, Joseph Frew and Joe Harney of Granite Links GC, Tommy Parker of D.W. Field, Brian Nutting of Spring Valley CC, and Joe Fitzsimmons and Jonathan Stoddard of Marshfield CC

Some of the top local players decided not to travel to the Berkshires to compete in this year's tournament.

Bill Drohen, the 2009 champion, of Easton, 2006 champion Ben Spitz of Norwell, defending Southeastern Amateur champion Mark Purrington of Allendale and Andrew DiRamio of Duxbury are not entered

Ridge is one of young guns

The youngest player in the State Amateur field this week is from the area. Hanover's Brendan Ridge, 15, a member at the Harmon Club and member of BC High's Div. 1 state finalists golf team, is at Longmeadow.

He's the youngest by 63 days. Ridge was born on March 20, 1998 while Steven DiLisio of Salem CC was born on Jan. 15.

Ridge, who will be a sophomore at BC High in the fall, qualified for the State Am at Plymouth CC by carding a 73.

Earlier this summer he had a 36-hole score of 7-over 147 at Thorny Lea GC in Brockton to earn an alternate spot for the US Junior Championship, which will be played in California.

Ridge did qualify for the July 29-31 State Junior Championship, which will be held at Essex County Club. He shot a 1-under 69 at his home course to take medalist honors.

Not bad for a kid who took up the game just two years ago.

Other local players who qualified for the State Juniors are Max Crooks of Sharon CC, Daniel Campbell of Plymouth CC, Jake Horan of Hatherly, Colin Devin of Widow's Walk, Sam Jenkins of South Shore, Etienne Bourgoin, Jake Ratti and John Richard of the Harmon Club and James Shalhoup of Easton CC.

Khang is four-timer

Rockland High's Meghan Khang carded a 1-under-par 70 at the US Girls Junior Qualifier at Thorny Lea last week to earn a berth in the championship, her fourth straight trip. It's in Fort Wayne, Ind. this summer . . . It was good to see Art Ciccone in the area. For many years Ciccone was head golf professional at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy and one of the founders of the highly popular Norfolk County Classic. But as good as he was as a golf professional, he is a nationally recognized photographer of golf landscapes. These days he's in Hobe Sound, Fla., where his business, Golf Shots, Inc., is located but travels around the country shooting various courses. The last couple of weeks he has been in New England and has been spotted shooting South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

Tasho, Parziale are champs

The Thorny Lea team of Steve Tasho and Matt Parziale won their fourth Brockton City Four-Ball Championship last Sunday, fashioning a 19-under 193. The pair combined for an opening round 67 at D.W. Field, carded a 63 at Brockton CC on Saturday and another 63 on Sunday at their home course. Defending champion Rob Bradley and Ryan Riley finished one stroke back. Jason Cook and Don Reycroft were a distance third at 12-under. The father-son team of Steve and Mike Archard captured the field division in dramatic style when Mike Archard chipped in on the final hole for a birdie-3 . . . The State Publinks Championship will be played Aug. 5-6 at Glen Ellen in Millis and there are plenty of local golfers entered. Tommy Lucas and Kevin Carozza of D.W. Field, Tim Bush of Pinehills, Daniel Smith, Matt Czarnecki, Joseph Frew and Neal Corbett of Granite Links GC, Eric Daniels, Brendan Monaghan and Ed Boylan of Presidents, Brian O'Leary of Ponkapoag and Zach Schuster and Carter Fasick of Pine Oaks (75) to name a few.

Post cards from the past

PAUL HARBER

Who remembers Rockland Golf Links at Nantasket Beach?

They give us glimpses of the yesterday's golfing landscape

Golf is more than hitting a ball down a fairway, especially in the northeast, where our season is so short and our passion is so deep.

Those unable to extend their season by migrating south find other ways to feed their addiction. Some brave the frigid temperatures and play winter golf on snowless, yet frozen playgrounds. Others seek out indoor golf, a high-tech digitized contraption where you hit a ball into a screen. The good news is you never lose a ball no matter how far off line or how deep into a water hazard you go.

And then there are the collectors, those who savor golfing artifacts. Some like to restore clubs or collect wooden-shafted niblicks and mashies. Others collect logo golf balls and some others have a huge collection of scorecards of various courses.

One hack I know would vacation with his family and take them on a three-hour detour so he could visit a number of golf courses only to pick up a scorecard.

Today he has plenty of scorecards but he no longer has a wife.

Some golfing zealots collect old postcards of golf courses. In the not-so-bygone-past sending postcards was common practice.

Whenever you went on vacation, you would spend a dollar or two for a dozen cards and send them to friends and family, saying you were having a great time. It was text messaging or tweeting in the pre-iPhone era.

Some collections consist of circa 1900 postcards of courses that no longer exist or have changed their name.

There is Crow Point Golf Club in Hingham, the Rockland Golf Links in Nantasket, Oak Ridge Golf Club in Brockton (now called D.W. Field GC), Stony Brae GC of Wollaston (now called Furnace Brook) and Highland Golf Club of North Attleboro, Golf was thriving in the region in 1900. But it wasn't like golf today.

If you weren't rich, you didn't play. It was as simple as that.

Workers didn't have time or the discretionary income to play the game.

The average laborer worked 54 hours per week and earned between $10 and $15 for his effort.

But there was plenty of golf for the upper class.

Duxbury, for instance, had three golf courses: Myles Standish Golf Club, the Yacht Club and Duxbury Country Club.

Duxbury Country Club was located on Point End. Annual dues were $4 for men, $2 for women and $8 for a family. Visiting golfers in good standing (meaning you belong to another club) could enjoy privileges on the nine-hole links without charge. The president of the club was Reuben Peterson, whose family has lived in Duxbury since the 1600s.

The Duxbury Yacht Club Golf Course, whose course survives today, had annual dues of $5 for men and $2 for women. Visitors could play a round for the princely sum of 25 cents.

Myles Standish Golf Club in South Duxbury was four years old in 1900 and had more than 100 members, mostly Wall Street types who vacationed in the region.

There were courses everywhere. Wollaston Golf Club (on the site of what's now Presidents GC) was the biggest with 300 members, a $25 initiation fee and $25 annual dues and was expanding from nine to 18 holes. Quincy also had Meadow GC and Rock Island CC in 1900.

Bridgewater had a course, Braintree had a six-hole layout. What is now Thorny Lea GC was Brockton Golf Club and what is now Brockton CC was called Campello GC.

And in Rockland, George H. Hunt, a heavy hitter in the Brockton shoe industry, had his own course on his private estate.

It was a very different landscape in 1900.

Courses were rudimentary compared to today. Few holes stretched longer than 300 yards. Many disappeared, only to become housing developments.

And a century from now, what will become of the golf courses we all know and enjoy today?

The clubs may change, but the passion for the game will remain.

THIS WEEK'S SIGNATURE HOLE

The 15th Hole at Atlantic Country Club Plymouth, MA

Atlantic COUNTRY CLUB

PAR 4 15 HCP 12 YDS 373 350 330 250

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

Cohasset's Morse shines at Wisconsin race

Cohasset's Nate Morse, a recent graduate of Cohasset High School won the East Tosa Grand Prix on Sunday and spent last week racing in Wisconsin in the Tour of America's Dairyland, along with the top racers in the U.S.

These races are a run-up to the upcoming National Championships.

Morse races for Hot Tubes Development Cycling Team, the most successful junior-specific road racing team in American cycling history. The team consists of 7 top US riders, representing Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and Idaho.

He will will race for Furman University in Greenville, SC in the fall.

Send us your stuff

Now that we're into the summer, you might notice that there aren't a whole lot of high school sports happening – at least at the high school level.

There is American Legion baseball, as you can easily see here in the Cohasset Mariner just about every week.

There are also club sports and other efforts like the Bay State Games.

To me, the summer is for the little ones.

There's so many youth sports going on, whether baseball, soccer, lacrosse or others I can't think of at the moment.

Here at the Journal, we like to get the kids in the paper, but with so much happening, can use your help.

If your kids are playing, let us know about it. Send us a few photos and short stories telling us what they're doing.

I'd love to know and get the kids their shot to shine.

All I ask is that photos are clear and at least 1mb in size. Include names of players and coaches and a bit about what they did.

Send it to me wwassersug@wickedlocal.com and I'm glad to do it.

If there's real big action, Youth Baseball tournaments, championship games, let us know ahead of time and who knows, we might get out there for some deeper coverage. It's easier when we know where to go.

Feel free to follow me on Twitter @scifisportsguy and send notes that way. Follow for sports, random thoughts about nothing, TV tidbits and lately, Canadian made science fiction – or any science fiction, with emphasis on comic books, like Arrow, Man of Steel, Batman, Continuum. Also get the latest on American Ninja Warrior. That is what I call true athletic competition. Check it out on Mondays.

I also keep up with the Bruins, Red Sox, Patriots and Celtics. Get my instant uninformed kneejerk reactions to the world of professional sports.

Speaking of professional sports, has there been a better couple of weeks in Boston sports?

The Red Sox are in first place and nobody even seems to realize it.

Tyler Seguin, the saviour of Boston hockey already gone. Garnett and Paul Pierce are Brooklyn Nets now.

Aaron Hernandez is an accused murderer. That came out of nowhere, at least to the average fan.

Jerome Iginla, the guy everyone loved to hate this playoff season is now a Bruin, and that will be a good thing. I'm looking at another deep playoff run for the B's next year.

As for the Bruins, I was on a cruise to Canada the week of the Stanley Cup Finals and had a minor temper tantrum when I found out that one of the games wasn't available on TV or any form of radio. Internet was too expensive and no phone service.

I tried to sidle up to the bar and watch the ESPN scores scroll by, and at least four times, the signal was lost just before the Bruins score was set to scroll by.

I did however, win a medal for a sports trivia contest on the ship.

Then I walked around St. John, Canada with my Bruins shirt on and was surprised that the local hockey fans were a little behind the Bruins, although they weren't happy about how the Leafs series ended.

It was a fun day, and I got to try Tim Hortons donuts. Good stuff.

That about says everything I've got, so send your stuff.

asked for a few pointers.

"He asked for some advice and I told him to place his fastball and throw the curve for strikes. He was amazing. He took a no-hitter into the sixth and ended up with a one-hit shutout. He was on his game."

Arnold said consistency was huge.

"He threw 21 first pitch strikes," he said. "He was on his game. He averaged about seven pitches per inning. In my 50 years I've never seen anything like it.

"What a time to step up. We were laboring. The team was exhausted. It was huge. It can set the pace for the rest of the season."

On the whole, Arnold felt the whole team played exceptionally well.

"Everybody did their job," he said. "The hitting spread through the team. The fielders were making plays. There were a lot of ground balls turned into double plays. We were rolling double plays laft and right."

O'Connell walked a few hitters, but had a number of strikeouts.

The one hit O'Connell allowed was clean.

"It dropped about two feet in front of Tim Kensinger," Arnold said. "He's usually right on those. It was just short."

As for the rest of the season, Arnold hopes the couple of big wins will be a springboard.

"The college players we have on the team that did not play during the Spring are now rounding into shape," Arnold said. "We had everyone hit in the game against Holbrook. We had over 20 hits in the game.

"Canton always seems to be a nemesis for us. We always seem to be chasing them for fifth-place. We hit the ball, but we could not get any hits into the gap."

Post 118's offense will try to shift into gear with a busy week of games.

They will face Hyde Park at Catholic Memorial on Friday. Cohasset has a game at Morrissette on Saturday night, then hosts Holbrook in a twinbill starting at 3 p.m. on Sunday and Canton on Monday.

Cohasset stuck with Hyde Park in 10-5 loss at home.

"We had one bad inning in the game," Arnold said. "We stayed right with them. The Braintree game we had one bad inning where we walked five batters and it led to a nine run inning. That was the ball game.

"We had players playing out of position because we were down some players during the Fourth of July weekend. For example, we had a pitcher, who we use just to pitch play in the outfield. We are a good fielding team."

Mickey Barry put Cohasset on top with a home run in the opening inning.

Post 118 fell behind 13-2, but in the seventh inning they got a bases loaded two-run single by Colin Murphy.

Cohasset lost a tough 3-2 decision to Milton this past Sunday.

Nick Simone and George Grech helped power the offense with a couple of doubles and Matt Lund was two-for-two on the day fueling the rallies. Weymouth added another two home runs with six RBIs. A veteran play by right fielder Sean McElhinney stopped the bleeding when he grabbed a fly ball in shallow right to end the fifth inning.

Key defensive plays were what kept the local boys in front of the heavy hitting bats of the opponents. Strong arms from Cohasset catchers Conor Joslin and TJ Crosby-Bell each sent the Weymouth base stealers back to their bench. The pitching effort was excellent in the early innings by Bradley Albanese and Jack Vater. The fielding was very respectable all day with infield and outfield plays executed routinely, aided by Daniel Galvin and Mark Mahoney.

After pitching the fifth Cliff Ward returned to the hill in the bottom of the sixth inning with his team up by two runs.

Weymouth was by no means done and they quickly scored one and had a man on first and second with no outs. The game was looking less secure. Having pitched through some tough hitters and having the gotten the team to within three outs of victory, Cliff handed the ball to Charlie Devin to button it up.

The first pitch was a fastball for a called strike. The next pitch was a grounder up the middle but the just-relieved Cliff at shortstop alertly fielded the ball, stepped on second and threw to Bradley Albanese at first for a double play.

The lead runner advanced to third and the situation was Cohasset 11, Weymouth 10. Man on third. Two outs. The next batter, who had already notched three home runs off Cohasset, and represented the winning run, came to the plate.

Recent experience said he liked fastballs, but he was not going to get what he wanted. Instead, he got changeups which resulted in a sharp grounder to the alert Nick Simone at third who snagged it and fired to Bradley Albanese at first for the season-ending victory.

Congratulations to the Cohasset team on an excellent win and fabulous effort representing the CYBSA in the Williamsport Little League Baseball World Series tournament.

Choosing poor-quality vinyl windows is a mistake.

Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Offer ends August 10th!

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Never put your feet or legs against the dashboard or out the window. In a crash, the passenger-side air bag will deploy from the dashboard at 200 mph, resulting in serious injuries to legs or feet. Typically, the injuries include broken bones. With the warmer weather police see more passengers riding this way. In addition, the passenger blocks the driver's view of the passenger side mirror and creates a blind spot. COURTESY PHOTO

July Programs at Wompatuck State Park

Come to Wompatuck State Park for a fun and educational experience. All programs are free and open to the public. An adult must accompany children. Rain cancels. Reasonable accommodations available upon request. For more information, call the Park Interpreter at (781) 749-7160 or visit: mass.gov/dcr. The Visitor Center is located at 204 Union St.

• Saturday, July 13, 9 am – 10:30am. From Forest Floor to Tree Tops: Have you ever been walking through the woods and wondered "How old is that tree?" or "Where did that mushroom come from?" Join the Park Interpreter for a walk through the woods to find out! Learn how to measure various tree circumferences and use growth rate tree charts to gain an approximate age of the trees. We'll use several fallen trees to do a ring count. We'll talk about the decay of the forest floor, including the role of mushrooms - how they grow so quickly and why. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Saturday, July 13, 1 to 2:00pm. Swamp Tromp!: Use our nets and buckets to discover what lives in the waters of Wompatuck. Please follow park road down to Boundary Pond where we will meet.

• Sunday, July 14, 10 am – 11 am. Nature Journaling: Looking for a way to relax and enjoy nature? Join the Park Interpreter for a program on nature journaling. He'll cover the fundamentals of recording observations, sketching in nature, and writing poetry in your journals. Ideal for beginners; bring a notebook and writing instruments – some will be provided as well. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Wednesday, July 17, 9 to 10 am. Healthy Heart Hike: Trails are the heart of our parks and DCR wants them to be the heart of a healthy lifestyle. The program offers a great way to have fun and get exercise in a low cost way! We welcome you to join us on a guided recreational hike along the Healthy Heart Trail at Wompatuck State Park. The forested trail is about 1.5 miles long. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Friday, July 19, 3 to 4 pm. Jr. Rangers – What Hurts the Park?: The Jr. Ranger program captures the imagination of young people through activities that grow future stewards of the environment. Discuss types of pollution, litter and graffiti we see within the Park and how it affects nature and beauty. We will view places where there is the most litter in the park and discuss what we can do to help stop the littering and graffiti. This free program is for children ages 8-12. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Meet at the Visitor Center. Rain or shine.

• Friday, July 19, 7:30 to 8:30pm. Sunset Hike: Take a hike in Wompatuck as the summer sun is setting and explore this serene time of day. Each week we'll discover something different as we experience dusk in the park. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Saturday, July 20, 9 to 11 am. Rocks in the Park Hike: Explore the glacial rock fields of Wompatuck and old growth forests in a less explored part of the Park as we make our way to Burbank Boulder, Wompatuck Park's largest glacial erratic. This hike covers about 4 miles of moderately difficult trails. Please wear sturdy shoes and bring water. Meet at Visitor Center.

• Sunday, July 21, 10 to 11 am. Animal Detectives: Let's find out what animals are living in the area. We will use our detective skills to observe footprints, nibbled twigs, and scat, as we take a walk through the forest and along a wetland. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Wednesday, July 24, 9 to 10 am. Healthy Heart Hike: Trails are the heart of our parks and DCR wants them to be the heart of a healthy lifestyle. The program offers a great way to have fun and get exercise in a low cost way! We welcome you to join us on a guided recreational hike along the Healthy Heart Trail at Wompatuck State Park. The forested trail is about 1.5 miles long. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Thursday, July 25, 9 to 10:15am. Native American & Colonial Life at Wompatuck: This walk begins with a visit to the 19th Century Triphammer Pond mill site and discussion of the pre-colonial stones wall that still exist today – these are some of the oldest existing stone walls in our country. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Friday, July 26, 3 to 4 pm. Jr. Rangers – Preparing a Safe Campsite & Campfire: The Jr. Ranger program captures the imagination of young people through activities that grow future stewards of the environment. The Junior Rangers will learn to tie the "lifesaving knot" – the bowline; learn to pitch a tent and where. There will also be a step-by-step examination of how to build a safe and effective campfire. This free program is for children ages 8-12. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Meet at the Visitor Center. Rain or shine.

Friday, July 26, 7:30 to 8:30pm. Sunset Hike: Take a hike in Wompatuck as the summer sun is setting and explore this serene time of day. Each week we'll discover something different as we experience dusk in the park. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Wednesday, July 31, 9 to 10 am. Healthy Heart Hike: Trails are the heart of our parks and DCR wants them to be the heart of a healthy lifestyle. The program offers a great way to have fun and get exercise in a low cost way! We welcome you to join us on a guided recreational hike along the Healthy Heart Trail at Wompatuck State Park. The forested trail is about 1.5 miles long. Meet at the Visitor Center.

ST. STEPHEN'S

Sunday morning mass on the beach

St. Stephen's invites everyone who hungers for God and seeks to know Jesus to join them for their informal mass at Sandy Beach on Sundays at 7 a.m. Pets are welcome! For more information call the church at 781-383-1083.

The service starts with a moment of silence in which to listen to the waves whispering in the distance hypnotically. The wind brushes against your face and in the absence of human sound you notice with shared surprise the sudden awareness that this is amazing, this is breathtakingly beautiful, there is something going on here and whatever it is we're all feeling it: God is in this place. God's Spirit is in this gathering. We are about to break bread with Jesus on the beach!

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

George H. Smith Jr.

AUBURN – George H. Smith Jr., age 79, of Auburn, formerly of Cohasset, passed away, with family by his side, July 6, 2013.

Loving husband of the late Frances K. (Condito), he was the devoted father of George J. Smith and wife Joanne of Shrewsbury, and Joseph E. Smith of Abington; grandfather of Justin Smith of Shrewsbury and Amanda Smith of Hingham; great-grandfather of Alana Smith.

George was a member of Local Union 276 Plumbers. He was the youngest person to receive his Master Plumber's License in the State of Massachusetts at the time.

In his retirement, George worked for over ten years at the Home Depot in Avon.

He was a decorated Korean War veteran, serving in the U.S. Army. As a member of the 82nd Airborne, George did over 150 jumps and was a Purple Heart and Bronze Star recipient.

Mr. Smith rarely spoke about his services to his country in Korea, however, when he did, the stories he spoke of were truly remarkable.

George H. Smith Jr.

A funeral was held from the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset, Thursday, July 11, 2013, at 12 p.m., followed by a graveside service with honors at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Connery Ave., Bourne, at 2:30 p.m. Visiting hours were Wednesday, July 10, 2013, from 6-8 p.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 22, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your zeal for challenges usually works well for you. But this week it's best to avoid jumping into new situations without more information. Vital news emerges by the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Once again, the Bovine's patience pays off as that pesky problem works itself out without taking too much of your valuable time. A new task opens interesting possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those suggestions you want to share need to be set aside for a while so you can focus on the job at hand. There'll be time later to put your ideas into a workable format.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be sure about your sources before you use the information in any decision you reach about your new project. Some of the data might be out of date or misinterpreted.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A sudden challenge might rattle you at first. But pump up that strong Lion's heart with a full measure of courage, and face it with the continuing support of family and friends.

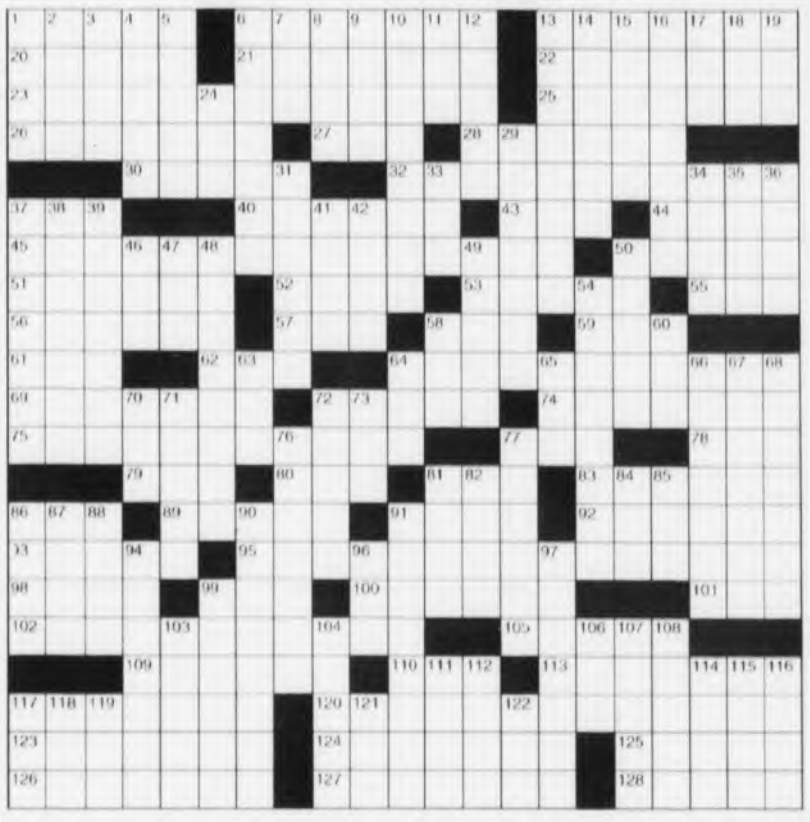
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Watch your expenses this week so you can have a financial cushion to fall back on should things tighten up later this month. Money matters ease by the 31st.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Uncertainty over workplace policy creates anxiety and confusion among your colleagues. Don't be surprised if you're asked, once again, to help work things out.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The workweek keeps you busy tying up loose ends and checking data that needs to be verified. The weekend offers a chance to relax and restore your spent energies.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is not the best time to go to extremes to prove a point. Better to set a sensible goal now and move forward. There'll be time later to take the bolder course.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A step-by-step progression is the better way to move ahead. Taking shortcuts could be risky at this time. Important news arrives on the 31st.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Avoid getting drawn into workplace disputes that should be handled by those directly involved. Instead, spend your energy developing those new ideas.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You still need to be prudent about money matters. But things start to ease by the end of the week. A weekend encounter with an old friend brings welcome news.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You handle challenging situations with boldness when necessary and caution when called for.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off! So sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

MOTORCYCLE ACCIDENT

Former police chief injured

By Mary Ford and Erin Dale
Mariner staff

Due to the severity of the incident, the Massachusetts State Police Accident Reconstruction Team was called to the scene to assist in the investigation of the crash.

Former Cohasset Police Chief Mark M. DeLuca was still in the intensive care unit at Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston as of press time on Thursday.

A hospital official said his condition was "not listed," stressing that he was still in intensive care.

On July 12 at approximately 1:28 p.m. Rockland Police responded to several 911 calls of a motor vehicle crash at the intersection Pond and Hingham streets in Rockland, according to a release from that department.

Callers reported that the crash involved a motorcycle and a Volvo SUV.

The operator of the motorcycle, Deluca, sustained serious injuries as a result of the crash and was transported to South Shore Hospital.

He was subsequently transferred to Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston where he was listed in stable condition. The operator of the Volvo was not injured in the crash.

According to a release from Rockland police, the motorcycle was traveling north on Hingham Street in Rockland and proceeded through the intersection of Hingham and Pond streets, where it collided with the Volvo as the Volvo was traveling south on Hingham Street and making a left hand turn onto Pond Street.

FARM LIVING

The new Cohasset Farmers Market manager, Michael Hubley, who owns his own farm on King Street, stands in his vegetable garden that rests next to a corral and barn. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Summer tradition continues

New face at helm of farmers market

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Hubley has his own farm on King Street in Cohasset and eats fresh, homegrown produce every day. Taking the helm of the farmers market this year was a natural progression.

The Cohasset Farmers Market has a new manager this year, and he's someone who not only preaches living a healthy lifestyle full of whole, organic foods—he lives it.

Hubley has his own farm on King Street in Cohasset and eats fresh, homegrown produce every day. Taking the helm of the farmers market this year was a natural progression.

The farmers market has been a summer tradition in Cohasset for almost two decades. Each year, from June to October, the town common is transformed every Thursday afternoon with vendors, musicians, pony rides, cooking demonstrations, and other events that recall a time before mass-market grocery stores and fast food.

Hubley's farm features a large vegetable garden and fruit trees; he cans and freezes his own produce so his family can enjoy it year-round. He also has beehives and a barn with horses.

"We grow all our own food," Hubley said.

When asked if there is any food he has to buy in the store, he responded, "We only buy in the winter time— just lettuce and bananas."

It may seem like a novelty in the age of convenience, but Hubley said that this is how he was raised.

"I grew up in Novia Scotia on a 100-acre farm," he shared. "For us, it was a way of life. We worked all the time."

Growing up in that hard-working environment, Hubley said he vowed to never work as hard as an adult.

"I was thinking, 'This is crazy,'" he joked.

He obviously changed his mind.

Hubley, who moved to Cohasset with his wife, Michele, and four kids in 1990, built the farm once his four children left for college. While they always had a garden, it wasn't until the farm was built that the Hubley family truly began to live off of their own land.

Hubley said that the expense of owning land and building a farm while still putting kids through college prevented him from doing it sooner.

"It's an economic situation," he said. "The harsh reality is that land is extremely expensive."

But now, there's no looking back, and Hubley is proud of what he has built for his four children and three grandchildren. He loves when his kids and grandkids come to stay on the farm.

"It's the fun part of growing," he said. "Every night we go out and count the leaves on the pumpkins, watch the bees, and eat asparagus or berries right out of the garden."

Hubley not only farms at home— he also became Cohasset's market manager this year and is president of Executive Search Partners, an energy industry recruiting firm.

Anna Abruzzese – one of the market founders – also happens to be Hubley's mother-in-law; she convinced him to become the

TMA hearing July 23

Fired town manager to oppose bill

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's bill to amend the Town Manager Act (TMA) has a public hearing on Tuesday, July 23 at the State House. The hearing, with the Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government, starts at 10 a.m.

The bill (H. 3486), which details several changes to the TMA, was sent to the legislature in May as a Home Rule Petition as approved by the April 2013 Town Meeting. It was voted for with a 61 percent majority.

Board of Selectmen chair Fred Koed will attend the hearing to voice support for the bill on behalf of the selectmen, who wish to honor the will of Town Meeting. Selectman Steve Gaumer prepared a statement for Koed to hand-deliver to the committee on Tuesday. Koed will then make a brief statement, he said.

"I'm sure other citizens will be participating" in the hearing, the selectmen chair added. "Part of the legislative process is to have a hearing and let everyone have their say."

It's clear, so far, that at least some will.

While the town's Governance Committee, the selectmen-appointed board that was charged with revising the TMA and bringing those changes to Town Meeting, spent several months working on the new version of the TMA (originally enacted in Cohasset in 1997), there is some opposition to the bill— particularly from a former Town Manager.

KOMEN WALK

Cancer survivor walking 60 miles in three days

Diane Mascart-McKeon figured her chances of getting cancer were small because her husband had already battled the disease twice and won.

"I thought, 'It can't happen to me; we've already been through it twice with Kevin,'" she said. Then last February, Diane discovered a lump and was shocked to learn that she had breast cancer. Luckily it was caught early and her prognosis was good. Her treatment would include a lumpectomy, radiation, and five years of drug therapy.

Now, Diane is ready to take this experience and turn it into something positive.

On Friday, July 26, she and her team, the "Holy Walkamolies" will be walking 60 miles over three days in support of Susan G. Komen for the Cure.

The Cohasset resident decided to do the walk when her daughter, Ava heard an ad for it on the radio and told her she should do it.

"I thought what a great way to make a difference and spend time with friends," Diane said.

The Holy Walkamolies includes two of her closest friends, Saadia Bryant and Jean Kelley Jarvis.

"We've known each other for over 25 years," Diane said. "Saadia and I graduated Cohasset High together and Jean and I were college roommates. I knew I could count on them to join the team because Jean is a three-day veteran and Saadia is always up for a challenge. Doing the three-day will give us a chance to spend some quality time together."

"Cancer has changed me, but in a positive way. I've learned to appreciate each day and focus on the things that really matter like family and friends."
Diane Mascart-McKeon

Since its inception in 2003, the Susan G. Komen three-day has raised more than $740 million, 75 percent of the net proceeds raised by the walk support Komen's Research and Training Grant Program and large public health outreach programs for women and men facing breast cancer. The remaining 25 percent helps fund local community and affiliate support and outreach programs.

Thanks to events like the Komen three-day, the organization has invested more than $2.2 billion to fulfill its promise, becoming the largest source of nonprofit funds dedicated to the fight against breast cancer in the world.

Diane said that she's chosen to participate in this event for a reason. "

I've done other fundraising events; they're all great, but it's about where you want the money to go and for me, it's about research," she said. "We're making great strides to how we're treating cancer; hopefully we can eradicate it. I'm thinking down the road, if have a recurrence, I'm hopeful we will have something new."

She continued, "Cancer has changed me, but in a positive way. I've learned to appreciate each day and focus on the things that really matter like family and friends."

Breast cancer facts

According to the Komen website, in the U.S., each year, more than 200,000 cases of breast cancer are diagnosed in women and nearly 2,000 cases are diagnosed in men.

One case of breast cancer is diagnosed among women every two minutes in the U.S.

There are nearly 3 million breast cancer survivors in the U.S. today, the largest group of cancer survivors in the U.S.

POLICE BEAT

Crashes, combustion during hot week

Spontaneous combustion

Police had to close a stretch of North Main Street on Sunday, July 14 for approximately two hours while the fire department extinguished a fire in a large construction dumpster in the area of 300 N. Main Street. The dumpster was filled with construction debris, which spontaneously combusted due to the high heat.

Trash trouble

The proprietor of a local bakery in Cohasset Village reported that people are using his dumpster to dispose of trash and old medical equipment. Police took a report of illegal dumping on Friday, July 12 at around 8:20 a.m. The owner of the business showed officers an old walker and wheelchair that were dumped. It was suggested that he start locking the container.

Chain reaction

On Thursday, July 11, at about 12:25 p.m., officers responded to a reported chain reaction crash on Route 3A by Ridge Top Road. When officers arrived, they learned that the male driver of a 2012 Mercedes Benz, who is 70 years old and from Hingham, rear-ended a 2010 Nissan sedan that was in the process of slowing for traffic in the southbound lane. The driver of the Nissan, who is 72 years old and from Hull, then rear-ended the car in front of him, which was a light colored SUV that left the scene. There were no injuries reported and the Hull driver that caused the accident was cited for following too close on a state highway. Both the Mercedes and the Nissan had to be towed from the scene.

Two-car accidents

On Wednesday, July 10, at about 4 p.m., police responded to the area of Stop and Shop Plaza for a report of a two-car motor vehicle crash. When officers arrived, investigation showed that a 53-year-old woman from Scituate, who was operating a 2006 Volvo sedan north on Rte. 3A, rear-ended a 2008 GMC SUV that was being operated by a 51-year-old woman from Pembroke. No tows were necessary and no citations were issued, as the crash was very minor.

A two-car crash at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street on Sunday, July 13 at 5 p.m. sent a 65-year-old Cohasset woman to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth with minor injuries. She was a passenger in a 2011 Volkswagen that was being operated by her husband, age 67. The Volkswagen was traveling east on Beechwood Street with a green light. Witnesses reported that a 2011 Toyota, which was being operated north on Route 3A, went through a red light and struck the VW. The Toyota was driven by a 55-year-old woman from Hull. She was uninjured but did receive a citation for failure to stop for a red light. Both vehicles were damaged and towed.

Missing kayak

A 67-year-old man from Atlantic Avenue reported that sometime between July 6 and July 14, his 13-foot Tarpon Kayak disappeared from his private dock located in his backyard. The kayak is yellow in color and is valued at approximately $800. Police detectives are checking into the matter.

This boat, owned by a Hull resident, got loose from its mooring last Friday, July 12 and washed up on Black Rock Beach. The owner had to wait eight hours for high tide in order to recover his vessel. COURTESY PHOTO

Boat breaks loose

A 24-foot boat broke loose from its mooring on Friday, July 12. Police went to the scene and were able to determine that the boat belonged to a Hull resident and the boat is typically tied up just off of Black Rock Beach. Apparently the rope that was used to tie the boat broke. It is unknown if there was any damage to the boat. The owner had to wait approximately eight hours for high tide to recover the vessel.

LAUGHING WATER DESIGNS

Ogden practices the fine art of yoga

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

At age 11, Deb Ogden had a calling. At that time, she declared herself an artist and then did everything possible to turn her passion into her vocation. In 1997 Ogden, a Cohasset resident, opened Dragonfly Studio on King Street in Jonathan Livingstone Plaza — her company is called Laughing Water Designs. A graduate of the Art Institute of Boston Fine Arts Program, Ogden's work includes everything from drawing and designing wedding dresses and shoes to working in art and antiques, and decorative design and painting. Eclectic to say the least, she also includes marine repair and restoration in her portfolio, as well as her own unique personal artwork.

As a practitioner of yoga and meditation for the past 13 years Ogden's interest in Eastern Philosophy, Sanskrit Mantra, and Native American Spirituality has deepened, and that is reflected throughout her work. Her subject matter is generally centered on nature, symbols, words, and objects that represent the same energy and consciousness that she finds in her yoga practice.

For the past seven years her art has focused on sacred writing and script, specifically the ancient language of Sanskrit. Using paper collage, mixed media, and graphic design, she endeavors to enlighten others through her techniques and favorite styles of art that include Asian, Tibetan, Indian, and Native American. A recent project mounted in the Boston Design Center combined decorative painting with the Sanskrit Language for a series of panels.

Her subject matter is generally centered on nature, symbols, words, and objects that represent the same energy and consciousness that she finds in her yoga practice.

"I like my work to feel serene, healing and meditative," says Ogden. "That was my intent for the Boston Design Center panels and what I strive for in all of my pieces."

Creating art for sacred spaces such as a temple or yoga/meditation space, and healing rooms is a focus for Ogden's one of a kind artwork, everything from painted Buddha's to wall plates with Sanskrit to murals.

At the Yoga Center in Cohasset Ogden crafted and painted two pieces of wall art with the Om Symbol along with the Mantra 'Om Mani Padme Hum' the great Tibetan Prayer of Compassion. In 2010 Ogden and a fellow artist created a Prayer Wheel. The wheel, which was formerly an antique yarn winder, was inspired by traditional Tibetan Prayer Wheels. It's an interactive piece of art. Patrons are asked to write a poem, draw a picture, or pen a quote, then install it on the wheel that is cranked by hand, sending the blessings, prayers, and requests out to the Universe. Her work has also been on display at the 2012 Junior League Show House, Duxbury Art Complex, and the Old Ship Paper Prayers Project, a memorial to 9/11.

Ogden encourages others to find their true self within. Last year she created a half-day workshop called "Heart Mind Words Art" in which participants create a wish or intention and then construct a simple collaged and handwritten book. She then guides participants in how to incorporate their discoveries into daily life using the newly created journal.

Laughing Water Designs is committed to helping other artists and their communities. All materials sold through the studio are unique, hand made artwork that is free trade oriented, with profits going directly to the artisans, or their agencies. Examples include a line of hand scripted Tibetan text on agate by a local Tibetan artist and items from an Ashram in Bangalore which both benefit Temples and Ashrams locally and in Tibet.

Ogden is currently exhibiting and selling art at the Cohasset Yoga Center gift shop and gallery. Her work on display includes note cards, bookmarks, and painted statuary. Laughing Water Designs is located at 130 King St., a space which she shares with her husband, Richard Ogden, the owner of Candlelight Antiques, located in the rear of the building. Email Deb Ogden at oggci@yahoo.com for more information about Dragonfly Studio, Laughing Water Designs and her upcoming fall workshop to be held at Cohasset Yoga Center.

Deb Ogden of Laughing Water Designs holds up just one example of her one of a kind artwork.

Heat wave hits Cohasset

Senior center open for cooling off

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

It's been a hot one in Cohasset – and all over the state – this week.

Temperatures reached 90 in the Boston area by mid-day on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday with even higher temps predicted for the rest of the week. The heat wave is expected to break sometime this weekend.

While some nearby towns like Scituate opened cooling centers for residents to take a breather from the heat, Cohasset has not yet set up an official cool-off location. However, Elder Affairs is offering reprieve in the senior center, which is housed in the South Shore Community Center at 3 North Main St.

Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande said Tuesday, "Although a cooling center has not been opened to date, residents should know they are always welcome to come to Elder Affairs to cool off, recharge, or just enjoy being out of the sun. We always have water, soft drinks and snacks, as well as a large screen TV for people to watch when activities are not in progress.

"Although we are currently observing our normal business hours, we are happy to extend our hours should they be needed. This would be done at the discretion of the Town Manager."

If the need for a cooling center should arise, residents would be notified by emergency management, she said.

Grande added her department has been vigilant about checking on seniors especially during this hot week.

"Elder Affairs has the Cohasset community contact list which includes the most at-risk seniors in our community. This list was updated last week," said Grande. "Currently there are 100 people on this list, who are called by staff and volunteers, periodically, to make sure they are OK."

Locals have also stepped up to care for their elderly during the warmer months. In the past two years, around 25 air conditions have been donated and installed in seniors' homes, Grande said.

Looking after seniors isn't just done when temps soar, but year round, she added.

"We are always concerned about our seniors," said Grande. "This weather seems to target the most vulnerable of our residents, at both ends of our population spectrum. But we have a great team of disciplines working together to provide for the safety and security of our community, both in this heat wave, and beyond."

Town nurse Mary Goodwin said that she has been checking on residents as well.

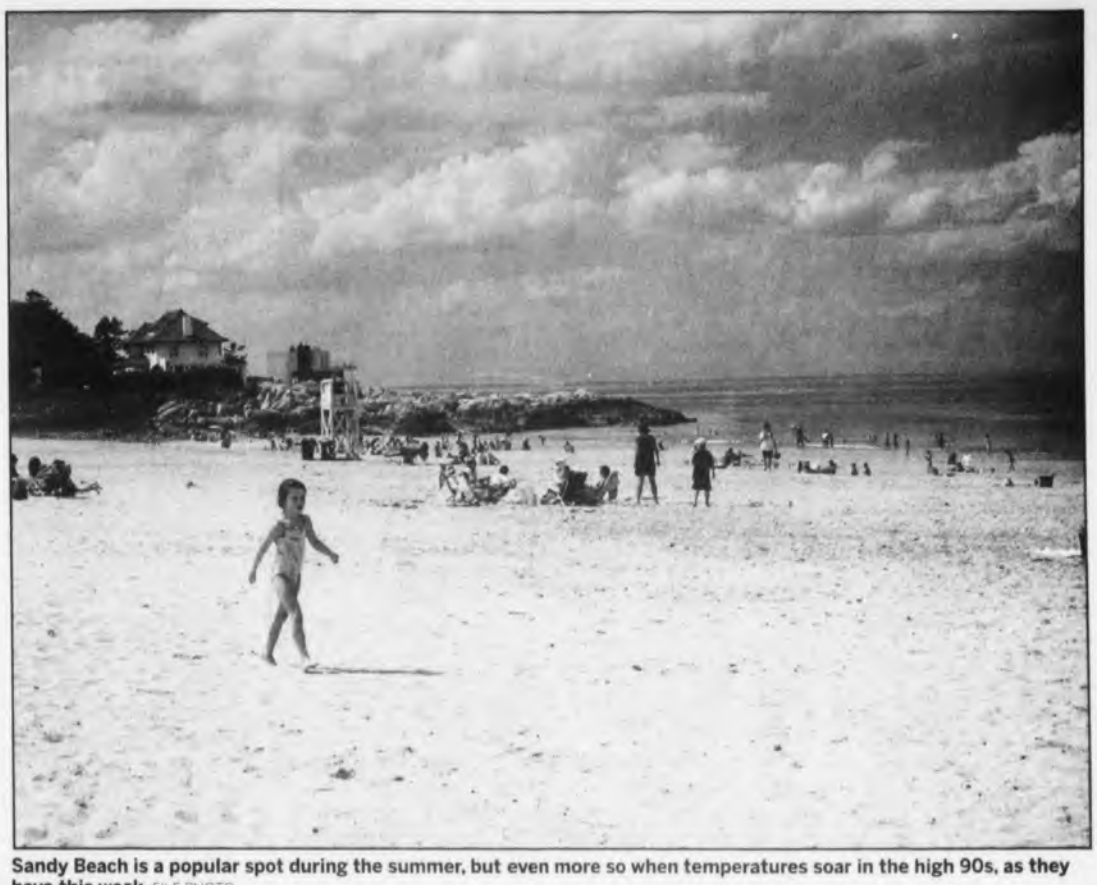
"About 90 percent of the apartments at 60 Elm St. [senior housing] have air conditioners," Goodwin said. "The 10 percent remaining have refused them to date. Also the community room has air conditioning."

The town's group homes, along with the Sunrise Senior Living and Golden Living Center, also have air conditioning, said Goodwin.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley said that despite the hot temps, the department has not yet received any heat-related emergency calls. However, he noted that there has been an increased number of bridge-jumpers.

"The Border Street bridge has become a very popular destination for the entire South Shore," said Quigley. "I have brought in an extra summer officer this week to help deal with that and parking issues at Sandy Beach, Wadleigh Park, Government Island, and Border Street."

Grande noted how seamlessly the town departments, from public safety to health and Elder Affairs, are working together to problem-solve.



"Everybody plays a part, knows what they have to do, respects each other's expertise, and they just do it automatically," said Grande. "We all get along really well, and the community reaps the benefits of this professional atmosphere."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that this cooperative spirit is thanks to the "strong emergency response command structure" that the town has in place.

"All of the public safety and necessary personnel try to prepare ahead of any issue that comes so that we can mobilize better," said Milanoski. "It's a strong core of town department heads that work together and coordinate among themselves so that all these needs can be addressed ahead of time."

He added following last year's hurricane and this winter's blizzard that knocked power out in Cohasset for days, the town is proceeding with plans to obtain more generators "should we have any more natural catastrophes."

For now, the town departments are focused on riding out the heat wave, "trying to address those in need of cooling," Milanoski said.

Sandy Beach is a popular spot during the summer, but even more so when temperatures soar in the high 90s, as they have this week. FILE PHOTO

How to conserve energy in high heat

Extreme heat and humidity have driven electricity use to record-high levels this week, officials stated this week. From a Mass. Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) press release:

With ongoing high temperatures, ISO New England is forecasting New England's electricity usage to reach near record-breaking levels throughout the week. Although power system resources are currently adequate, supplies are likely to become tight. As a precautionary step, ISO New England is requesting voluntary electricity conversation. ISO New England suggests several ways to reduce electricity consumption and advises that these measures be taken consistent with one's health and safety:

- Raise air conditioning thermostats by a few degrees if health permits. A suggested temperature range is between 74°F–78°F
- Turn off unneeded lights and appliances
- Turn off unnecessary office equipment
- Shut off air conditioners when leaving home for extended periods of time
- Defer laundry and other chores requiring electricity until the early morning or late evening hours

GIMME SHELTER

Callie has a beautiful face

Oh my, just look at Callie! What a beautiful face, and she has the sweetest and most loving personality all wrapped up in one fabulous Calico body. This great kitty has known lots of love and attention and she knows how to give both right back. Nose kisses, little head butts await her new loving owner. Callie is very friendly, loves being petted and has the greatest purrs! She is a special girl for sure. Her Calico markings are truly rich and beautiful and stand out against her sparkling white neck and chest. Glowing green eyes stare out at you and honestly, you can't help but fall for her.

Not long ago, she had a family. When she was found and brought to us, her rescuer thought she was a pregnant kitten. Well, we now know that she is six years old, but what a youngster she is! She still has the kitten attitude and is going to be a fabulous partner and companion! It is hard to see such a wonderful cat like Callie losing the home she has known, but we know there is one wonderful person or family out there who will fall in love with this beautiful kitty and give her the loving care and happy home she needs.

Callie is spayed and up to date on all of her shots so she is ready to meet her best match. Here in the shelter, she is spending time with our kittens but that is not what she wants. No, Callie wants her "person" and it would probably be great for her to be an only and be spoiled like crazy. It is easy to get to know her since she is very willing to be close and she will talk to you with a cute little meow, hoping for the petting and love she wants so much. Callie is definitely a "keeper".

To learn more about this gorgeous Calico please call Judy at 781-534-4902. Please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045.

As we are going through yet another heat wave, our volunteers have been wonderful and we are so appreciative of all who come in and work with our residents to ensure their well being. It you have 2 hours to spare each week and would like to help us in our mission to provide the best care possible for the cats and kittens at Hull Seaside, please call our new Volunteer Coordinator, Sue, at 617-733-2986 for more details and information. We are always looking for new members and foster homes as well. There are many other opportunities to assist the shelter. It is so rewarding to see our kittens and cats receiving love, attention and care while they await their forever homes. If you would like to be a part of it all, please call.1

Donations are what keeps us going, and right now we are in need of wet kitten food as we have many kittens in the shelter and in foster homes. These little ones need proper nutrition and it is great when we receive items for them. Clean towels and bedding is also appreciated as the mother cats work very hard to keep their babies clean and changing all their linens daily is essential. Laundry supplies are always welcome! We are grateful for all of the help and support we are receiving.

Keep an eye on our Facebook page for updates on little Petunia. She is lucky to have found all of the support of our shelter, and participating local veterinarians and medical supply businesses and those who have donated to help with the cost of her care. Our hope is that she can have a great life despite her frightening beginnings. Animals are amazing and their ability to adapt is wonderful when they compensate by using their other senses. We are all pulling for her. Also, watch for our next Spay and Neuter date coming up in August!

A well deserved thank you to all of our donators of bottles and cans. The bins continue to be full and we are happy to have the support of so many local families and groups. Our volunteers work tirelessly to sort and bag them for transport. Volunteerism is a true spirit of service to those in need and comes from caring and giving hearts. Our kittens and cats benefit from every act of kindness shown by all of the people involved with Hull Seaside Animal Rescue. Many thanks to all.

Paula J Fatersik is a volunteer and feature writer for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Family high notes

JENNIE MULQUEEN

Jennie Mulqueen is a member of the voice department and director of early childhood programs.

We didn't need the high notes to remember. I asked my aunt to write out the words to an old song my grandmother used to sing, and was shocked to witness that she did so without pause. She remembered every word of her mother's favorite song – clearly etched in her memory in a way that only music can be. Hours later my 71-year-old father and his sister sang "Pennies from Heaven" in tribute to their mother at her memorial service. In all my decades, I had never heard my father and his sister sing along with my grandmother, never mind sing together, but clearly her favorite song had made an impact on both her children, and had a permanent place in their hearts.

People always say I got my voice from my grandma, whose singing was mostly limited to restaurant audiences and family gatherings. "But I can get up there!" she used to say with a satisfied smile, as she belted out the high notes of an old favorite. We were blessed every time she did, as she was giving us a treasure of family songs. In later years when I got my music degree, my grandmother would defer to me at gatherings and say things like, "Oh, but I never really knew how to sing – not like you," or "I don't have those high notes anymore." Ironically, I have spent much of my professional singing life facilitating the family music experience by encouraging people to sing just like my grandma sang.

Last year at South Shore Conservatory's Wacky Wednesdays family concert series, I presented my tribute to Julie Andrews, whose repertoire I cherish because it is part of the "Great American Songbook" and has intergenerational appeal. In preparation for this year's show, I found myself wishing that there was an American Family Songbook. Much to my surprise, my dive into public library stacks turned up a gem published in 1975 by Better Homes and Gardens: "Family Song Book." Hmmm. It is full of tunes families might have sung together up until that point, such as "Yankee Doodle Boy" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." But in this age of iPods, iPads and smart phones, families no longer gather around the piano for sing-alongs.

So, how do we gather as families in 2013, and what do we do when we gather? Life has surely changed a lot since the 40s, 50s, 60s, 70s, 80s, but families do still gather, thank goodness. And we gather around movies!

My July 31 show, aptly titled Jennie Mulqueen presents Family Songs from the Movies, features songs from movies such as "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," "The Muppet Movie," "Wizard of Oz," "Sound of Music," "Grease," "Toy Story." The list goes on and on. Travel in the "way back machine" to the time of ramalama-ding-dong and shoobop shoo-wadda-wadda. I promise you that hit songs from movies can bring out high notes neither you nor your family even knew you had.

For tickets to my Wednesday, July 31, 10 a.m., show at the Jane Carr Amphitheater, One Conservatory Drive, Hingham, please visit http://www.ssc-music.org/wacky_wednesdays.html or call the box office at 781-749-7565, ext. 22. Tickets may also be purchased in person on the day of the show. Children 2 and younger are admitted free.

Vocalist Jennie Mulqueen is a valued member of South Shore Conservatory's voice department and Director of Early Childhood Programs.

AROUND TOWN

College grads, dean's list, honor roll

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Plymouth State

Hats off to Mollie Sinclaire and Andrew Smith, both of Cohasset, on being named to Plymouth State University's President's List.

To be named to the President's List at Plymouth State University in New Hampshire, a student must achieve a grade point average of 3.7 or better for the spring 2013 semester and must have attempted at least 12 credit hours during the semester. These credit hours must be in courses that earn grade points and the student must have completed all such courses attempted.

Bridgewater

More than 500 graduate students received master's degrees and certificates of advanced graduate study at Bridgewater State University's eighth Graduate Commencement Convocation on May 15, 2013. Graduates from Cohasset included: Mareth E. Collins-Wooley, Elizabeth S. Moore and Kate R. Regan. All the best in your future endeavors!

Saint Michael's

The following Cohasset residents graduated from Saint Michael's College during the 106th commencement exercises on the college campus May 12, 2013:

Joseph William Cadigan, son of Joseph Cadigan, graduated with a bachelor of science degree in computer science.

Caitlin Mary Mahoney, daughter of Alexandra and Robert Mahoney, graduated with a bachelor of science degree in business administration.

Congratulations!

WPI

Worcester Polytechnic Institute announced that Sarah Mavilia of Cohasset, a sophomore majoring in civil engineering, was named to the university's dean's list for academic excellence for the 2013 spring semester. Great work, Sarah!

Rochester

Hats off to David Patrick Toomey, a resident of Cohasset, who graduated from the University of Rochester on Sunday, May 19, 2013, at the 163rd commencement with a bachelor of science degree in molecular genetics. He graduated cum laude. He is the son of Mark D. and Sheila Toomey, and a graduate of Cohasset Middle High School.

Loomis Chaffee

Edward Culhane, a senior from Cohasset, was named to the high honor roll at the Loomis Chaffee School. Great work, Edward!

Stonehill College

Cohasset resident Eric Vanderpool graduated from Stonehill College with a bachelor of arts degree. Congratulations, Eric!

Planning Board summer hours

Hey, if you have business with the Planning Board – please make note of this!

Due to staff vacation, the Planning Board office will be closed from Friday, July 19, through Friday, Aug. 2. Regular office hours will resume at 8:30 a.m., on Monday, Aug. 5.

Anyone needing assistance during this time can call Bob Egan or Angela Geso in the Building Department at 781-383-4112, ext. 100.

Upcoming Planning Board meeting will take place Wednesdays, Aug. 14, Aug. 21 and Sept. 11.

Palmer birthdays

Happy 9th birthday to Becca Palmer as she celebrates with her Dad, Lansing and dog Nelson, also having birthdays this week. Enjoy your birthdays Palmers!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

The Mousetrap

The Hat Trick Theater of Plymouth presents, Agatha Christies, "The Mousetrap" and Cohasset resident, Paul Antico will play Giles Ranston. A group of strangers are stranded in a boarding house during a snowstorm, one of whom is a murderer. The suspects include the newly married couple who run the guest house, a spinster with a curious background, an architect who seems better suited to be a chef, a retired Army major, a strange little man who claims his car overturned in a snow drift and a jurist who makes life miserable for everyone. A classic Christie Who Done It. Performances are July 19, 20, 25, 26 & 27 at 8 p.m. and July 21 & 28 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $20 each Cabaret seating and complimentary refreshments. For tickets call 508-747-6856 or 774-454-3575 or by email at hattriq98@aol.com. COURTESY PHOTO

Cohasset Middle High School students receive Scholar Leader Awards

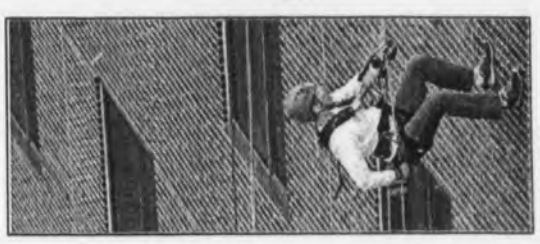
Liliane Astino and Liam O'Connell, grade eight students at Cohasset Middle High School, were honored at the 14th annual Middle Level Scholar Leader Awards Banquet, held at the Best Western Royal Plaza in Marlborough on May 22, 2013.



The Middle Level Scholar Leaders Award is organized annually by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Middle Level Educators (COMMLE) and the New England League of Middle Schools (NELMS), with supporting sponsorship from Lifetouch National School Studios.

Each student was presented with an award recognizing his or her achievements. The criteria for being chosen to receive the Middle level Scholar Leader Award include demonstrating academic initiative and scholarship, providing service to classmates and school, exemplifying positive attitudes, and demonstrating leadership in classroom and school activities.

More than 500 guests, including students, educators, and parents, attended this year's banquet, which celebrated the achievements of middle level students who are representative of the many outstanding young adolescents in middle level schools in Massachusetts. The guests included 150 students from 50 schools all over the state.

Citizen of the Year to go 'Over The Edge!'

Event benefits the Special Olympics

Phil Lehr, Cohasset Citizen of the Year 2013, is going to go Over-The-Edge for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA)! On Saturday July 20, Phil will be rappelling down 22 stories of the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Boston in an event to benefit SOMA!

Although Phil has done some shorter rappelling as Scoutmaster of Troop #28 Cohasset in the past, he says "An opportunity like this has been on my bucket list for years!" He is very excited at the prospect. He'll be going Over the Edge in Honor of Cohasset Special Olympics Athlete Jay Nothnagle (an Eagle Scout Phil mentored), and in memory of Ryan Murphy of Pembroke, a young adult with intellectual disabilities who passed away this spring, whose parents are friends of Phil.

Phil has committed to raise at least $1,000 for Special Olympics, and hopes that many friends and others who also care will support him in his brave venture. Donations for Phil can be made by mailing a check payable to "Special Olympics Massachusetts" (or "SOMA") to him at 306 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025. Alternatively, donations can be made at SOMA's secure on-line site with a credit card at: specialolympics-ma.org (search for Over the Edge).

The money Phil raises will go directly to support over 13,000 Special Olympics athletes in Massachusetts, including over 100 from the South Shore area. They train and compete in 27 sports year-round, with over 130 State level competitions, in addition to the many local competitions leading up to the States, all at no cost to the athletes or their families, thanks to our generous donors. Supporters are welcome to come to the Hyatt Regency on Saturday July 20 to watch Phil and over 150 other brave souls rappel down 22 stories!

GROUND LEVEL

Two coffeehouse events planned in August

Cohasset's Ground Level Coffeehouse is hosting two nights of good music, good community, and really good coffee in August at Beechwood Congregational, 51 Church Street.

Aug. 2: Young Adult Coffeehouse

The first event on Friday, August 2, is the open mic, concert, and jam session for tweens, teens and young adults—open to junior high students through twenty-somethings.

See you in the Beechwood basement from 7 to 10 p.m. for open mic, coffee, art, friendship, and magic (yes, a magician is slated to perform).

The regularly programmed first-Friday coffeehouse will feature Boston's Leo Lydon. Two weeks after the event, Lydon will be hitting the road on a trans-American bike voyage to get his music on the map, where it deserves to be. As always, Ground Level entry, coffee, and snacks are on a suggested-donation basis, but if you can spare an extra dollar, it would help fuel this guy's epic dream!

Interested in open mic? You don't have to sing – you can tell a story or read a poem, you could do a magic trick, you could speed paint, or anything else creative – pitch your idea to ground_level@ymail.com. Email to sign up for the open mic and be prepared to do a sound check at 6:30 the night of the event.

Not ready to take the stage alone? Bring your instrument and stick around till about 9:45 to close out the night with an easy, all-inclusive jam session.

Aug. 9: Ground Level for Grown-Ups

If your driver's license is oriented in the "landscape" rather than the "portrait" direction, then this is the event for you! Slightly more sophisticated and slightly less chaotic than our typical hang/jam/eat sugar teens-and-twenties nights, the evening of August 9 is dedicated to all the parents, friends and neighbors who are jealous of the cool new café their kids are hanging out at these days.

As always, the music, art, and coffee-drinking fun starts at 7 p.m. and winds down at 10.

For more information, call 781-383-0808, email Ground_Level@ymail.com, or "like" Ground Level on Facebook: www.facebook.com/groundlevelcohasset.

DEPENDABLE CLEANERS

Read To Ride Program starts

Dependable Cleaners announces its annual Read to Ride program has begun. The program is designed to encourage student to keep up with their reading during the summer months. Students from ages 6-15 will have the chance to win a bike or an exciting prize for every book they read. Since the program's inception in 1999, more than 61,000 books have been read.

"We created the Read to Ride program 15 years ago to make sure children continue to read outside of school throughout the summer months, said Christa Hagearty, president of Dependable Cleaners. "The program could not be possible without our partners – Country Ski & Sport, Farina's Bike Shop and The Patriot Ledger – as well as local schools, organizations, libraries and stores. I also want to thank the parents who have instilled the importance of reading to their children during the summer months."

Participation in Read to Ride is easy. For every book a child reads, they fill out an entry form and submit it at any of the 16 Dependable Cleaner locations or with Dependable Cleaners' Home Delivery Drivers. Entry forms are available at all Dependable Cleaners locations, delivery routes, Country Ski & Sport locations, Farina's Bike Store in Watertown, local libraries, bookstores and online at DependableCleaners.com/Read-Ride.

One grand prizewinner will be drawn each Monday beginning June 3 until Aug. 12, (except for July 1). The grand prizewinners will receive a new bike and helmet. Two additional winners will receive a runner prize. A full list of Read to Ride partners, terms and conditions, and a printable entry form are accessible at: DependableCleaners.com/Read-Ride.

BUTTONWOOD BOOKS

Find Waldo in Cohasset! July 2013

Where's Waldo? In Cohasset, of course! The famous children's book character in the striped shirt and black-rimmed specs is visiting 25 different Cohasset businesses throughout our community this July. Those who spot him can win prizes, including stickers, book coupons and more. Waldo figures will be well hidden in local business establishments. Find Waldo is a great summer vacation activity. Anyone who wishes to participate can pick up a "Find Waldo Local in Cohasset!" passport at any of the participating businesses, and get their passport stamped or signed for each Waldo they spot. Waldo seekers who get their passport stamped or signed at ten or more sites can bring their passports back to Buttonwood Books & Toys to collect a Waldo sticker, book coupon or other comparable prize. Collecting store stamps or signatures at 20 or more businesses will entitle diligent seekers to also enter into a grand prize drawing on July 31, with the top prize being a six-volume deluxe set of Waldo books.

There is no charge to participate, and the game lasts until July 30, with the grand celebration party taking place on Wednesday, July 31 at Buttonwood Books & Toys.

For more information about hunting for Waldo in Cohasset, call Buttonwood Books & Toys at 781-383-2665.

TMA

Cohasset is launching a search for a permanent town manager. The Board of Selectmen voted in late May to begin the search process and voted on June 18 to hire the UMass Collins Center to help facilitate the search.

Cohasset's town manager for six months, from August 2011 until his suspension in February 2012 and removal in March of that year, has been outspoken on what he claims to be a flawed bill.

Coughlin, an attorney, is also suing the town for reinstatement. He stated in an email to the legislature last week that he plans to attend the hearing to oppose the bill and requested the opportunity to testify against it.

Coughlin sent another email this week to State Representatives Garrett Bradley and Sarah Peake reiterating his plan to oppose the bill and also outlining its "background." His email explains why he is suing for reinstatement – because he was not given detailed notice by the Board of Selectmen but was due per the 1997 TMA – and why he opposes the revised TMA— because among the many changes being made, one "seeks to change the removal standard" and make it so that selectmen do not have to provide detail.

"That very standard is troublesome and raises the question of legislative motive on the part of the town," said Coughlin. "Frankly, it is my contention that this change is directly related to the lawsuit."

The former town manager further alleges that an acting town manager should not be able to fire department heads. Last year Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski suspended former Police Chief Mark DeLuca. Coughlin said that DeLuca planned to challenge whether an interim town manager has the right to take such action. DeLuca is recovering from injuries sustained in a motorcycle accident that occurred last Friday, July 12, and will not be able to testify, Coughlin added.

Coughlin feels that the changes to the TMA were tailor made to keep Milanoski in office. The bill's "principal purpose," he said, "is to remove current prohibitions which would block his permanent appointment as town manager."

The revised TMA would bring the town's governing documents – the TMA and town bylaws – into alignment with one another. Among several changes, which include defining a timeline for the town's budget process, appointing auditors, the process of removing a town manager or dealing with a town manager's absence, the retooled Act removes a prohibition that keeps town employees and volunteers from applying for a permanent town manager position.

Cohasset is launching a search for a permanent town manager. The Board of Selectmen voted in late May to begin the search process and voted on June 18 to hire the UMass Collins Center to help facilitate the search. In the meantime, Cohasset's Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's contract is up in December 2013. Milanoski was appointed as interim town manager in March 2012 following Coughlin's removal.

Governance Committee chair Christine Cunning said last week that she is frustrated that all of the focus on the TMA and its changes have to do with the town manager's eligibility.

"There is no attention being paid to the amendment in its entirety," said Cunning. "It would discredit the democratic process for this issue to be ignored and/or re-vetted at this juncture, after open and thorough 61 percent passage, by secret ballot, no less, at Town Meeting. This is the final word of the citizens, to have a say in their government."

This week, Cunning wished to reiterate her statement, adding that the bill before the legislature is the result of "a long term, well researched, critical, fully considered and collaborative effort. The content has been vetted by the Department of Revenue, the Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development, the Selectmen, input at weekly [Governance] meetings and two public forums, and ultimate passage at town meeting."

Governance member Trish Morse said that she hopes Cohasset citizens would attend the hearing to support the bill— and hopes that politics will not derail the process.

"I hope [the state committee members] are able to see that this is about the legislation and not the politics surrounding it," said Morse. "I think it's irrelevant. It's a really good piece of legislation for our town."

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

DELUCA

Due to the severity of the incident, the Massachusetts State Police Accident Reconstruction Team was called to the scene to assist in the investigation of the crash.

The investigation into the crash remains ongoing at this time.

Deluca's contract as police chief was not renewed when it expired in January 2013; he was placed on paid suspension in May 2012 and said in a letter through his attorney that he would like to seek reinstatement.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said on behalf of the board and the town, "We wish [DeLuca] the best in recovery. We have to separate what other issues are going on from his health. We hope for a speedy recovery for him."

Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed in March 2012 and is also suing for reinstatement, shared the same sentiment for his former colleague.

"I hope all citizens, members of the police department and Cohasset officials put differences aside and stand united in pray that Chief DeLuca make a speedy and full recovery," he said.

CEF grants over $37K to schools

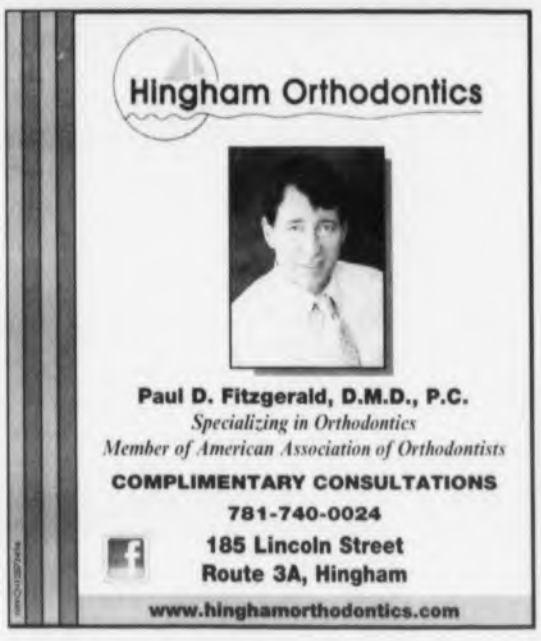
The Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) has given the school district a gift of a large sum of money — however, the gift itself is priceless.

The $37,662 the CEF is funding will help pay for innovative new programs, technology, and overall educational enrichment in the schools.

Cohasset's School Committee voted to accept the grants during their June 19 meeting.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that the gifts are appreciated. "We're always honored that this organization works so hard for us – we have a lot of organizations that work so hard, like the PSO. Our teachers and students are the ones who benefit from this."

The grants will be spent the following ways:



- $20,000 to fund an Apple Mac Lab at the High School to support the Video Production and Technology courses, along with other classroom activities and after-school programs;
- $3,550 to help fund the CSCR Summer SeaPearch exploration program;
- $5,462 to continue the seed funding for the First Lego Robotics program at the Middle School and initiate the US First Lego Tech Challenge at the High School;
- $7,350 to support the Author Visits program;
- $1,300 for the Yoga in the Classrooms program.

The CEF presented a check of $28,212.40 to the district; the remaining $9,449.60 will be re-allocated from unused funds from 2009 grants.

OUR VIEW

A silver lining

Now that summer is fully upon us with its accompanying 90-degree heat and humidity, some may already be hankering for those endless wet, rainy, cold spring days or even winter!

More than a few weary folk climbed the steps to the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square in recent weeks looking a bit overheated and fatigued from the sultry day. They paused to chat a while in our air-conditioned environs before venturing back out into hot downtown Hingham.

One thing we've observed from this extended stretch of unfriendly weather dating back to the recent long winter, which now seems to be a distant memory — is meteorological matters seem to bring us staid New Englanders out of our collective shell.

Noted for being stuffy and rather cold in nature, with little small talk, weather conditions get us interacting with one another at the supermarket, gas station or just about anywhere around town.

Complaining about the weather is in fact a passion that we New Englanders all seem to share. Take a moment and think about how often you've grumbled about damp, dark and depressing days this past spring to anyone that would listen.

There was even some humor in our collective misery. In the depths of last winter, we heard weather reports about how much worse temperatures and snow levels were in International Falls, Minn.; and this June we overheard remarks such as, "If I wanted to live like this, I'd move to Seattle."

Here in New England we have four seasons, although Mother Nature does trick us from time to time and forgets to give us one of them. Until the thermometer rose in the past few weeks, we were worried summer was on her list of omissions this year.

Things could always be worse. There are floods and wild weather in the Midwest and fires in Arizona, a place noted for great weather most of the time. Here, at least, we have variety and never find weather boring.

As Mark Twain said, "There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration-and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on people to see how they will go. But it gets through more business in Spring than in any other season. In the Spring I have counted one hundred and thirty-six different kinds of weather inside of twenty-four hours."

So what's left for us to do? Like good New Englanders, when our weather gets up to its old tricks, we continue to grin and bear it (and moan about it to whomever we can).

What do people talk about in places like San Diego where the weather is practically perfect?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Taking their case to the State House

As this paper reported, I plan to oppose the H 3486 at the hearing at the State House on July 23.

I read with great interest comments and this paper's editorial reasoning that this opposition subverts the will of the people and the vote of Town Meeting. In response, I point out the numerous times in our nation's history where people claiming to represent the will of the people or saying they represent the majority have passed laws which have later turned out to be illegal.

The present Town Manager Act as well as the proposed amendments have never been tested in a court of law but they soon will be. Litigation filed by Mark Brennan, Mark DeLuca and I call into question acts and sections of the present act as well as the propriety of proposed amendments. There lies our opposition at the State House hearing.

Those claiming the majority or will of the people should recognize that no amount of votes whatever the intention can pass an illegal act. Indeed, American history is marked by many instances where a vocal minority has turned to the courts and the Legislature to overturn laws that have been an affront to our democratic principles.

This point we plan to remind our lawmakers of on July 23.

Mike Coughlin, Town Manager (seeking legal reinstatement), 5 Coolidge Ave., Peabody

Keep Sandy Beach clean

For anyone in town that knows me, I am a huge fan of Sandy Beach. I will be there every Friday night that it's nice out over the summer with a picnic dinner or take out to be delivered so that I can enjoy every last minute of summer.

On Friday, July 5, I went for my morning run, which took my by the beach. I was aghast to see the amount of litter in the parking lot. Basically, after the 4th holiday, the trashcans were completely filled, so beachgoers took it upon themselves to pile trash next to the trashcans. Seagulls had ripped open the bags, and litter was strewn everywhere (see attached photo). In addition to the trash left next to the cans, there were a multitude of pizza boxes left on the ground as well. I understand that the pizza boxes do not fit into the trashcans, but really? I beg people, bring your pizza boxes home and recycle them at the dump. If the trashcans are full, don't be lazy and leave the trash on the ground, put it in your car.

I'm honestly shocked that people need to be told this! Sandy Beach is one of the many gifts we are lucky enough to have as residents of Cohasset, let's keep it clean.

Changes at Cohasset Senior Center questioned

I have been a volunteer elder van driver for eight or nine years, part time.

I just found out that Martha Horsefield, Carol Barrett and Trudy Salerno are no longer the caring staff at our Senior Center.

Trudy left for personal reasons and is greatly missed.

Martha Horsefield and Carol Barrett were let go from their positions. Gosh, these ladies were, so called, only part time but in there 17 hours, and the many more they weren't paid for and did a real super job. They were great because they cared in a loving way, in a real concerned way about us seniors.

What happened? What's wrong with our town management?

I guess they want to hire younger full-time strangers – why?

ICE CREAM SOCIAL

Historical Society celebrates 85 years

The Cohasset Historical Society has been holding various events and fundraisers as a yearlong celebration of their 85th anniversary. The society's official birthday is July 16, 1928.

Come celebrate the society's birthday at a party and ice cream social on Sunday, July 28, from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Pratt Building. All ages are welcome and the event is free of charge.

The event also features an exhibit showcasing the Historical Society over its 85-year history. Highlights include vintage clothing from the society's vast textile archive, photographs, newspaper articles and other treasures from yesteryear.

Stop by and get the "scoop" on Cohasset— enjoy the exhibit and free ice cream!

Attendees are encouraged to donate or consider joining the society for as little as $25 per year. Members enjoy reduced admission for programs and events, members-only events, access to the society's library and archives, and more.

All proceeds from the event benefit the historical society, which is a 501c(3) nonprofit.

The Cohasset Historical Society is located at 106 South Main St., Cohasset, MA, 02025. For more information, visit online at cohassethistoricalsociety.org or call 781-383-1434.

EDUCATION MATTERS

Let's talk about boys

RICHARD MCMANUS

Twenty years ago I designed a men's program.

I designed the program for the problems men faced in the workplace. The program's goal was to help participants become stronger, more confident, more skilled and more willing to take risks. Motorola sponsored the program, and it became a staple in their catalog of executive and managerial programs. The program dealt with the ability of men to work on teams, to work cooperatively with others. At that time there was little or no concern about how men were doing in terms of their drive for achievement or power. In fact, if anything there was concern that men were too driven by achievement or power, and consequently were not willing to work well in teams.

Flash forward to today. There is now a wealth of data on the failure of boys in our schools. In my role at the Fluency Factory, as I think about the wonderful students I have known over 11 years, I realize that many of our most driven, most hardworking, most disciplined students have been girls. When I look at the awards for Hingham High graduates, or the honor rolls at each level in the Hingham Schools, it is apparent that boys are simply not competing effectively with girls in our classrooms. The program I designed for leaders in corporations in the 90s would be totally misplaced for the students we are seeing today. Schools have become toxic for boys, and all too often they are not doing well, not working with the level of commitment of their female counterparts.

Why Boys Fail: Saving Our Sons from an Educational System That's Leaving Them Behind was published in 2011. Richard Whitmire, the author, has done extensive research on the issues that have damaged boys' participation in educational programs. When the book was published there was still a great deal of denial of this problem. Now denial has given way to more serious research and planning to try to change the outcomes for boys in our schools.

Early reading issues and failure receive most of the blame for the problem. Far too many boys are struggling with literacy — and this struggle begins early, coloring their school experience, and leading to loss of interest in the educational process. Here is Whitmire; "The education strategy of pushing literacy skills at very young ages to prepare more students for a college-track curriculum in high school sounds wise. But when educators failed to adjust teaching strategies to accommodate boys who don't easily pick up those skills at early ages, they triggered a backlash…frustrated boys assume school is for girls and turn their interest elsewhere."

Whitmire is not alone. There is abundant data now on this failure. Anecdotally I hear stories from parents who have serious worries about their sons — or the sons of their friends. The truth is that boys are "dropping out" emotionally from the educational process at very early ages, and by middle school are often so lacking in motivation that teaching them is extremely challenging. Though the fruits of this issue are most apparent at the college and graduate school level, where girls now dominate almost all statistics, the roots are in early education, where boys learn to be disaffected and disinterested rather than engaged and successful.

Here's my solution. More physical activity in the earliest grades, less reading (and no sight words) in kindergarten, and a use of positive reinforcement and phonics to build academic skill and engagement from the first grade forward. The first step into academic performance is the most critical one, and will set the tone for later success — or failure.

Richard McManus is executive director and founder of Beal Street Academy and The Fluency Factory.

PUSHING THE EDGE

Remembering Brigham's

GLENN MANGURIAN

You may have heard Brigham's is no longer. Next year would have been the 100th anniversary of Edward L. Brigham serving ice cream made in the back room of his store. According to the Wikipedia –

"Brigham's was founded in 1914 by Edward L. Brigham in Newton Highlands. He opened an ice cream shop, where he sold ice cream and candy, which he made in the back of the store. Originally, ice cream was sold for five cents and sundaes for 20 cents. In 1968, Brigham's merged with the Jewel Companies and then purchased Buttrick's, a small chain of colonial-style restaurants in Arlington. This location became Brigham's new home office. At its height, Brigham's had 100 restaurants in the New England area."

I grew up in Arlington and there was nothing like a Brigham's ice cream cone. Brigham's was the first to promote jimmies and did not charge for them. Who didn't love Brigham's ice cream?

I had my first raspberry lime rickey at Brigham's. They were the best. But nothing beat a Brigham's hot fudge sundae with marshmallow. Well, maybe a Bailey's hot fudge sundae with the hot fudge dripping down the side. But that's another story.

More recently, Brigham's was owned by HP Hood (think Hoodsie Cup) - another Boston icon. How can such a strong brand as Brigham's go out of business? I guess it's some form of competition. I'd like to blame the Chinese but that's a stretch. I don't mean to put down the other local ice cream shops. They are excellent. But, my childhood memories belong to Brigham's.

I understand the Hingham Square Brigham's was around for about 60 years. Patricia Halliday was the local owner and steward of the brand. Brigham's is now Patti's Place, and began serving its new ice cream, Giffords. Giffords is a small family operation headquartered in Maine. I wish Patti success.

So, all of you Brigham's lovers, let's raise a cone of vanilla with jimmies and toast to the memories and may the mint chocolate chip rest in peace.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Young farmers take part

JON BELBER

Farming is hard work – at any age. At Holly Hill Farm, there are farmers of all ages, all backgrounds and all levels of interest and experience. Most who come to the farm to manage these old rocky, wet grounds bring plenty of practical field knowledge which they then must quickly apply when the rains come or the perennial rocks crop up to snarl a disc, a tractor implement, or stymie a root's downward trajectory.

The manager possesses a great many resourceful skills as she or he find innovative ways to rotate crops and continuously sow new seed so to weave together a full sown farm stand of attractive, local, healthy produce and products.

Along with a manager or two, there are eager, devoted, youthful interns and apprentices who live, eat, breathe and work the land for six straight days, often repeating the same tasks in a different field, day after day. There are countless volunteers who find the goodness in their heart to come out to gently wash the lettuce, stake the tomatoes or sell the produce at market.

Volunteers are the secret ingredients for successful farming, as their added help makes the heavy work a bit lighter. And I, who used to farm on a more regular basis, have been caught up in the throes of teaching wee farmers (read 3 & 4 year old worm diggers) and trying to reach out to a greater number of schools, teachers, individuals and organizations to teach about the aspects of organic farming. I long to farm more, as it is a terrific way to learn, while I can then turn around to teach about that which I have just learned. My back door way of keeping my hands in farming, literally, is to continue teaching the Young Farmers Program (YFP).

The YFP was the first summer program started by Frank White, if not the first educational program at Holly Hill. Perhaps with the influence of the first farm managerial team of Donna and Martin Gursky, the call was sent out to young teenagers to come to the farm for a week of working alongside the farmers. If the farmers are weeding, then so too are the younger farmers. Same with building a bridge, sowing seeds, transplanting and harvesting.

Now the YFP allows for the kids to harvest produce to bring to the Cohasset Farmers Market on Thursdays at the common, from 2 to 6:30 p.m. At least one day a week, with water bottles nearby in the shade and electronic gadgets further away, the kids and I pull weeds, spread compost and take a ride in the farm truck to a field in need of much work to toil alongside the farmers. There could be a spontaneous outbreak of song, some talk of the Macarena or a more current dance craze or just quiet focus to put the hula hoe in the ground and get the row done.

It does not culminate in a full week's worth of work, and very often, after the young farmers have contributed, we see the manager head out to another field as the evening sun begins its setting.

There is still room in upcoming weeks of the YFP, ages 12-16, with the probability of a little stipend after market, as monetary compensation is a small part of recognizing hard work. The larger part of recognition is knowing that one helped shift the paradigm and provide local, organic produce for the community. We'll always have worms and wee farmers, but it may be the young farmers who will sooner inherit the fields, the responsibility and the earth. Farm on, we will.

Happenings at Holly Hill Farm

Holly Hill Farm will offer the following events at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. Come explore the farm's resources, including the 140 acres of woods, fields, salt marsh and ponds. For more information, call 781-383-6765, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org or email jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com.

Outdoor Film Series — Holly Hill Farm announces its seventh summer Outdoor Film Series with two free films shown on the back of the Tomato Barn. A free showing of "Genetic Roulette" will be shown at 8:30 p.m., on Sunday, July 21. Nona's Ice Cream will arrive for a pre-movie snack at 7:45 p.m. An indoor venue is available, so come rain or shine. "Genetic Roulette" presents evidence that genetically engineered foods are a major contributor to rising disease rates in the United States population, especially among children. Gastrointestinal disorders, allergies, inflammatory diseases and infertility are just some of the problems implicated in humans, pets, livestock and lab animals that eat genetically modified soybeans and corn. This sometimes shocking film may change one's diet, help protect one's family and accelerate the consumer tipping point against genetically modified organisms. Admission is free but donations to support the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center at Holly Hill Farm, will be gladly accepted. More information about "Genetic Roulette" can be found at http://geneticroulette-movie.com.

The second film this summer will be shown in August – date and film to be announced.

Yoga on the Farm

Join yoga instructor and certified holistic health coach Linda Storm for outdoor yoga at Holly Hill Farm Saturday mornings from 8 to 9 a.m. through Aug. 31 (no class on July 6). Bring a mat and enjoy an hour of gentle Vinyasa style yoga, moving with the breath. All levels are welcome. There is an indoor space available if the weather does not permit outdoor yoga. Fee is $12 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $15 for non-members. Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

For more information about the farm and the nonprofit education center, the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

FOR THE RECORD

Changing course with comments

GREGORY MATHIS

Remember when your mother said if you didn't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all?

That kind of summarizes some of the issues we were having with folks who logged on to comment on Wicked Local. There weren't many nice things being said, and in fact a lot of the conversation was inflammatory and hateful. And in many case those spewing the venom were hiding behind fake screen names generated from fake accounts.

But we're trying to change that and get back to some sense of civility as we've recently launched a new commenting platform.

The change was made for a couple of reasons.

First, our new vendor provides a system that features social media and allows for more robust interaction between readers.

In addition to posting comments as you did in the past, you'll also be able to attach photos and video to your comment, "Like" comments made by others, and share your comments to your own Facebook timeline, Twitter feed, or email.

In addition to allowing a richer and deeper online social experience with new ways to interact and share opinions, another goal of the new system is to make the process less anonymous.

We've been tested over the years by posters that can be downright nasty and disrespectful, launching personal attacks, using vulgarity, and perpetuating lies and cruel rumors.

Regardless of whether you've been commenting for years or just post an occasional comment, you will need to sign up for a new account using an existing Facebook or LinkedIn profile. All previous Wicked Local commenting accounts have been disabled.

Comments posted in the past will continue to appear under articles, but you will need to sign up for a new account to comment moving forward.

We expect this change to clear up many of the issues, but we'll continue to monitor accounts and disable Facebook or LinkedIn accounts created with a fake name. We'll also be watching for users who can't keep the conversation clean and civil and will suspend or disable those accounts. And we'll consider disabling the commenting feature on sensitive subjects where the discussion gets off topic and fails to be productive. Readers who see a comment that is objectionable can click the "Flag" link, and a moderator will review the comment and determine if it needs to be removed.

Since launching the new commenting system a few weeks back, online commenting has certainly dropped off from previous levels. We know some will object to the new system, probably those hiding behind made up screen names and bogus accounts.

While those people may choose not to participate moving forward, we hope to bring back those who left our website because of the nastiness of the conversation and possibly draw in a new audience looking to take advantage of the new social media tools.

The goal regarding commenting is very simple: a civil, respectful and lively discussion on matters pertaining to the town and townspeople, with an added bonus of sharing content that online users have become accustomed to through social media channels.

As always, your feedback on this new system is welcome.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South and Cape Cod units. He can be reached by email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

LIBRARY CORNER

Digital Cohasset is coming to library

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Call 781-383-1348 to register or for more information or visit the website at www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of Amanda Coplin's book "The Orchardist" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, July 31. All are welcome.

Movie Matinee – Enjoy a free daytime movie at the library. The film "When Harry Met Sally," starring Billy Crystal and Meg Ryan, will be shown at 11 a.m., on Friday, Aug. 2. Admission is free. Light refreshments will be provided by Shaw's of Cohasset.

E-zines and E-books – Before going on vacation or to the beach, download free reading materials from the library and transfer them to a portable device, such as an iPad or Kindle. Use one's library card to download fiction and non-fiction ebooks from Overdrive and e-magazines from Zinio. Visit the library website for information or call the reference desk for assistance.

Digital Cohasset is coming – Digital Cohasset is the library's newest effort to make unique materials available online. The focus will be to scan annual town reports and the Cohasset Mariner. But the public's help is needed. The library is looking for a copy of the 1918 Annual Town Report for Cohasset. The copy must be in good condition and free of marks and stains. Anyone who has a copy and would like to loan it to the library is asked to call the reference desk at 781-383-1348.

Art Reception – South Shore Art Center will present a quilt exhibit by Virginia Holloway at Paul Pratt Memorial Library through Aug. 31, in the Meeting Room. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesdays and Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Free.

FOR CHILDREN

DIG into Reading – The 2013 summer reading program, is sponsored by The Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Friends of Cohasset Library, Massachusetts Library System, Boston Bruins and the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners. People may register online or in person. The Friends of the Cohasset Library will give a donation to the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation, cohassetworkingdog.org, on behalf of the students that successfully complete their summer reading goal.

Dig into Reading calendar:

Mondays in July, 10:30 a.m., MamaSteph.

Volume 3 - Report No. 28 July 12, 2013

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 313C

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.
RESTORATION OF LOCAL AID CUTS (H 3514) House 13-139, rejected an amendment that would restore more than $17 million in local aid cuts that Gov. Deval Patrick had imposed in December 2012. Funding that would be restored includes $5.25 million for the homeless student transportation account, $1.3 million for veterans' benefits reimbursements and $1 million for charter school reimbursements. Amendment supporters said that at the time of the cuts, the governor said they were necessary because state revenue were below projections. They noted that has changed and the state has taken in over $575 million above projections, some of which should be used to fund local police and firefighters. Some amendment supporters said Gov. Patrick has already restored some of these funds on his own. Others noted the amendment is unconstitutional because it would essentially take away the constitutional power of the governor to unilaterally make these cuts. (A "Yes" vote is for restoring the money. A "No" vote is against restoration.)	*	N
ENSURE THE FEDS PAY FOR OBAMACARE (H 3452) House 34-116, rejected an amendment that would prohibit any state funds, personnel, offices, facilities or any other state assets from being used to implement and operate Obamacare. Amendment supporters said this will ensure that the state does not get stuck with a huge bill for Obamacare, which will be taking precedence over Romneycare that was implemented in 2006 and is working fine. Amendment opponents said this sets a dangerous precedent that might lead the state to refuse to pay for any unfunded federal mandates. They said the state should be willing to spend some money to ensure the availability of health care across the state. (A "Yes" vote is for prohibiting the use of state funds and assets. A "No" vote is against the ban.)	*	N
EMERGENCY MORTGAGE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM (H 3492) House 27-124, rejected an amendment creating an emergency mortgage assistance payment program. The program would provide loans to homeowners who are more than 60 days delinquent on their mortgage and meet other qualifications. Amendment supporters said this program would help homeowners who are in difficult financial situations often because they lost their jobs. They noted it will help prevent many foreclosures. Amendment opponents said the state cannot afford this well-intentioned program. (A "Yes" vote is for the assistance program. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	N
ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL It was a busy week for committees, which held public hearings on hundreds of bills, including these ten proposals. CANNOT CONFISCATE GUNS (S 1156) - Prohibits police and other law enforcement officers from confiscating any lawfully owned firearm, rifle or shotgun during a declared state of emergency. FAKE WEAPONS (S 1159) - Makes an offender who uses a "deceptive weapon" to commit a violent crime subject to the same punishment as if the weapon were real. Deceptive weapons include air guns, toy guns and anything carved or fashioned to resemble a weapon. BULLET-PROOF VESTS (H 2198) - Requires stores to keep a written record of the transaction, including the name, address, phone number and date of birth of any customer who purchases bullet-proof vests or other body armor. BAN HARSH CLEANING PRODUCTS (H 2066) - Prohibits cleaning products from being used in any school unless the product is included on the list of safer cleaning products established by the Department of Public Health. The list would include cleaning products that are "environmentally preferable" and do not contain ingredients that the public health commissioner has determined are asthma-causing agents. Students and school employees who have an adverse reaction to the environmentally preferable products may request that the school switch to yet another product. STUDENT BEHAVIOR (S 631) - Decriminalizes certain non-violent and verbal behavior of students. PROHIBIT TRANSGENDER DISCRIMINATION (H 1589) - Provides transgender people equal access to all public accommodations defined as "a place, whether licensed or unlicensed, which is open to and accepts or solicits the patronage of the general public." The Legislature approved a law in 2011 that outlaws discrimination in employment, education, housing and credit. AGE TO BUY TOBACCO (S 658) - Raises from 18 to 19 the minimum age at which a person can purchase cigarettes or other tobacco products. READ E-MAILS OF DECEASED (S 702) - Allows access by family members and others legally in charge of the estates of individuals to the e-mail accounts of their late loved ones. The bill requires companies like Gmail, Hotmail and AOL to provide access if a probate court order is issued or a certified representative of the late owner of the account presents a notarized written request and a death certificate. The access would supersede any of the e-mail provider's contractual terms and privacy policies but would not take precedent over any instructions in the individual's will. PROHIBIT SPRAY PAINT (S 804) - Prohibits minors under the age of 17 from possessing spray paint if they intend to use it to create graffiti. Violators would be punished by up to two years in prison and/or a $250 fine. The measure also imposes a $500 fine on anyone who sells spray paint to a minor under 17. PIRATE RADIO (H 1679) - Gives the Massachusetts Attorney General the authority to shut down pirate radio stations that are broadcasting illegally and often interfere with existing stations.

new market manager. "She does so much for the community," he said, adding that she is also an amazing cook.

And while he credits his grandparents for instilling the love of farming in him, he said that part of the reason he has fully converted to the whole foods lifestyle is to keep an eye on his health as he ages.

"The older you get, the more you understand the concept of health and how important it is," said Hubley. "It's about the quality of the food you eat. Fast food is more affordable than fruits and vegetables. Our food has been industrialized. It makes food cheap, which is a huge advantage, but has huge repercussions on our health."

As the market manager, Hubley gets to work with local vendors, such as Cohasset's Holly Hill farm, to educate the community while providing healthy, organic food. Hubley called Holly Hill the "cornerstone" of the Cohasset Farmers Market.

"We're very fortunate to have them right here in our community," he added.

In this economy, it's especially important to support farms like Holly Hill, he said.

"Everybody has to make a living," said Hubley. And when he and his wife aren't eating their own homegrown food, "we support the farms here locally."

For Hubley, it's not enough to just talk about good health— he has to walk his talk.

"I'm the kind of person where if I believe in something— you don't talk about it, you do it," he said. "It's a passion I have— we really believe in the concept of farming. Our kids understand where their food comes from and how things are grown."

The Cohasset Farmers Market takes place every Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m. on the town common through Oct. 17, 2013. For more information, visit www.cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

Farewell Good Sir

Local soccer loses a legend

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

For the past 32 years, there had been one constant on the soccer fields at Hanover High School.

The constant – girls coach Garth Nelson, who started the girls team at the school 32 years ago and was the only head coach at the school until Coach Nelson passed away last week at the age of 65.

He left a legacy of success, both on and off the field, compiling more than 300 victories, a couple of State Championships, six second-place finishes and 24 straight playoff appearances.

There were League titles and numerous players followed high school careers with scholarships and a love of the sport for life.

As a writer, I had a good fortune of covering the Hanover girls team and talking to Coach Nelson about his team.

Coach Nelson was always happy to talk, and was the first to deflect the praise to his players, even after he won his

TALKING GOLF

Mike Calef's victory at the State Amateur brings controversy to the MGA. DAVID COLT PHOTOGRAPHY COURTESY OF THE MGA

Eligibility rules

Reporter asks MGA why Calef was allowed to play in State Amateur

PAUL HARBER

One of the joys of golf writing is that you basically cover man's successes, not his failures.

You write about champions, not the guy who shoots a 102.

But you are a reporter and it is your job to ask, not only the hard questions, but also the right questions.

Tom Gorman, a freelance golf writer from Dedham, asked questions that had to be asked last week at the Massachusetts State Amateur and because of it, he has been lambasted on the social media pages.

Gorman wanted the Massachusetts Golf Association to explain why defending champion Mike Calef was eligible to enter the State Amateur.

Calef, you see, is from West Bridgewater and was Brockton Country Club's director of golf. He wasn't a professional, but he ran their tournaments and operated the pro shop. He maintained his amateur standing and two years ago won the State Mid-Amateur Championship at Pocasset.

The victory earned Calef an exemption into last year's State Amateur.

In the meantime, his wife got a great job in Texas and he and is family moved down there.

Come last summer, Calef and his family scheduled a vacation to the area and since he was here for a couple of weeks, he decided to play in the State Amateur.

And wouldn't you know it; he won the darn thing and more exemptions into the State Amateur.

So he left Texas last week and returned to Massachusetts and successfully defended his championship.

Gorman's contention is that Calef is a Texas resident and shouldn't qualify for entry into the tournament and he wanted to know why the MGA allowed him to play.

And he wrote just that in New England Golf Monthly and since then many of Calef's friends and fellow golfers crucified Gorman with ugly Internet posts.

Even Gorman's editor/publisher, Tim Branco, distanced himself, posting:

"The opinions of freelance writers who contribute to New England Golf Monthly are solely independent views expressed and not the opinions of NEGM/New England Publishing Group Inc. Our management staff supports the decisions and policies of both the Massachusetts Golf Association and all golf associations in New England regarding rulings and determinations of player eligibility.

"We support these organizations and their mission to improve and grow the game of golf and provide a fair and competitive platform for all."

First of all, I know Mike Calef and consider him a friend. I've known him since he was a precocious junior. I am happy for him and rooted for his back-to-back State Amateur victories.

He is a good person, an honest person and shouldn't be in the middle of this controversy.

But Gorman has a legitimate question and good for him for having the guts to ask it.

He is being a better reporter that others who covered the tournament who entirely dismissed the situation.

Ironically, Calef wasn't the only golfer in the field who lives out of state.

There is another – and I won't mention his name – who has a membership at a Massachusetts club, but lives in Georgia and has handicap cards at four clubs in the Peach State besides his membership to an MGA course. He is an airline pilot and makes the Boston to Atlanta run and plays golf in both states.

Both Calef and the golfer mentioned above can play in the Massachusetts Amateur because of a clause in the tournament application that reads:

"Entries are open to amateur golfers who hold membership in an MGA member club and have an up-to-date MGA/USGA GHIN Handicap Index not exceeding 4.4 (as determined by the May 1 Handicap Revision), or who have completed their handicap certification as defined on the Entry Form."

Calef's old club, Brockton CC, gave him an honorary membership and he maintains a handicap there, so according to the MGA, he was eligible to play.

Today's tournament application doesn't say anything about where a person lives.

However most state golf associations, in their tournament application, say you must be a legal resident of the state, such as the neighboring New Hampshire Golf Association. It's to keep Massachusetts golfers, who might belong to a Granite State club, from competing in their state championship.

In fact, Texas, where Calef now lives, has that clause in its rules of competition.

The Massachusetts Golf Association should add that to their tournament applications and that would end any future controversies.

It's the right thing to do.

Sprague steps down as executive director

Moves on to US Golf Assn. regional position

MGA executive director Joe Sprague is stepping down after six years at the helm. DAVID COLT PHOTO COURTESY OF THE MGA

Sad news and difficult days ahead for the MGA: Joe Sprague is stepping down after six years as its executive director.

Effective in August, Sprague will serve as the USGA's Director of Regional Affairs for the Northeast Region. In that capacity, Sprague will work directly with the USGA executive team to further the USGA's strategy to deliver value to the state and regional golf associations. He will serve as a liaison with regional and state golf associations from Maine down to Pennsylvania. He will be based out of the USGA's headquarters in Far Hills, N.J.

"Although we will miss Joe here at the MGA, we feel that it is a great fit for Joe and a true honor to be selected by the USGA," said Dr. Paul Burke Jr., the MGA's president. "The MGA has always enjoyed a strong relationship with the USGA and this new development will certainly help to continue to strengthen that partnership."

Since the position opened in 1927, there have only beat six executive directors of the MGA, the sixth largest state golfing organization in the country.

Fred Corcoran was the first to serve (1927-36). His brothers, John (1937-45) and Bill (1946-69), succeeded him as executive director. From 1969-1998, Dick Haskell served the prestigious post before handing over the reigns to Tom Landry, who stepped down in 2007.

Sprague's father, Joe Sr., was the head of the Rhode Island Golf Association.

"It has been a privilege for me to work for the MGA these past six years," said Sprague. "I've said it before and I'll say it again – the MGA has the most dedicated and loyal group of volunteers of any golf association I know. I look forward to continuing my relationships with the many friends and colleagues I have here in the Northeast."

He will be sorely missed.

US Am qualifying

Meanwhile entries have closed and local qualifying begins this week for this year's US Amateur, which will be played at The Country Club in Brookline Aug. 12-18. There are five qualifying tournaments in the area in the next week and just about anybody who is anybody in Southeastern Massachusetts is trying to earn a berth in the national championship. There is one at Weston CC on July 15, and two on July 22, one at Vesper GC in Tyngsboro, and another at Metacomet (R.I.) CC., another July 23 at Crestview CC, and a final one at Cape Cod National on July 30. Eight teeing it up at Weston GC include Andrew Danieli, Braintree; Bob Hamilton, Dedham; Brian Houle, Hingham; Shawn Martin, Westwood; Brian McCarthy, Norwell; Fergal O'Leary and Kevin Shea, Quincy; and Joshua Slieff, Rockland. Five at Vesper CC include Sean Fitzpatrick, Walpole; Hugh Lagrotteria, Scituate; Patrick O'Leary, Milton; Matt Parziale, Brockton; and Ryan Pelletier, Mansfield. Among the 20 at Metacomet CC in Rhode Island include Bill Drohen, Mike Verde and Ryan Riley, Easton; Kevin Shea, Hingham; David Spitz, Benjamin Spitz and Andrew Thiel, Norwell; Brad Cadigan, Weymouth; Keith Duffy, Braintree; Kolby Simmons and Jackson Walsh, North Attleboro; Timothy Grossman, Foxboro; Dave Turgeon, Norton; Jake Ratti and Mark McCormick, Hanover; Donald Reycroft, Norfolk; Lucas Langelier, Canton; Timothy Bush, Duxbury; John Lazor, Westwood; and Matthew Miller, Quincy. The 10 traveling to Crestview CC include Charles Anthony IV, Swansea; Brendan Ridge and Matthew Montt, Hanover; Derek Desantis of Weymouth; Eric Stepanian and Matthew Sawyer, Westwood; Kevin Gately, Pembroke; Andrew Diramio, Quincy; Tom Dwyer, Dedham and Billy Curley, Duxbury. Included in the 12 at Cape Cod National GC in Brewster are Keith Baird, Hanover; Jack McIntosh, Duxbury; Michael Michel, North Attleboro; Doug Clapp, Walpole; Joe Fitzsimmons and Craig Norton, Marshfield; Patrick Frodigh, Westwood; T. J. McNulty, Scituate; Rob McMenimon, Hingham; Joseph Izzo, Bridgewater; Austin Eaton III, Attleboro; Scott Congdon, Foxboro; Michael Willock, Cohasset; Connor Hayes, Mansfield; Brandon Nolan, Attleboro; Herbie Aikens, Kingston; and Jonathan Woods, Duxbury . . . Three of the top young women amateurs will be teeing it up July 16 at Oak Hill CC in Fitchburg, vying for berths in the upcoming US Women's Amateur. Rockland's Megan Khang, Sharon's Isabel Southard and Scituate's Mary Mulcahy are hoping to advance to the US Women's Amateur, which will be played Aug. 5-12 at the Country Club of Charleston in South Carolina.

From the mail bag

Dear Paul, My father John L. Sheehan was the first pro at the Oak Ridge Golf Course – now D.W. Field. He grew up in Brockton and was taught the game by Bill Shields at Thorny Lea. My father was recommended for enrollment in the NEPGA Hall of Fame by Bob Crowley of Pine Brook Country Club. Unfortunately Bob suddenly passed away before his recommendation could be acted upon. And apparently the matter was dropped. My father instituted the New England Junior Championship Tournament in the late 1930s and, for many years, was played at his course, Albemarle Golf Club, in Newton. As you wrote, many courses ended up the victim of development. My father had to end his role when there was not enough land left to field a tournament. I believe Ponkapog picked up the tourney but I have lost track its whereabouts now. My father truly had a vision for golf and fostered some known players, Fordie Pitts, Dick Kinchla, Dick Crosby and many others. There are many tales related to my father, Albemarle, etc. The tourney was co-sponsored by the Waltham News Tribune. I would like to get a hold of some of the old stories and pictures but I understand their archive files were lost in a fire several years ago. The major Boston papers, Globe, Post and Herald gave it heavy coverage: Tom Sheehan

This week it's Vermont

They don't miss a beat in the local season because there are only so many weeks to play and there are so many tournaments to compete it. This week the New England Amateur will be played at Green Mountain National (Vt.) Golf Club and local residents in the field include Sam Toomey of the Bay Club at Mattapoisett; Peter French of Maplegate, Neal Corbett of Granite Links, Chad Stumpo of Blue Hill, Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea, Mike Dunham of Old Sandwich, Andy Mai of The Boston Club, Nicholas Buenaventura of Thorny Lea, Vincent Bucci of Old Sandwich, Henry Arundale of TPC of Boston, John Woodman of Wollaston GC, Chris Scott of MGA Links at Norton, Charlie Anthony of Crestwood, and Michael Willock of Cohasset GC . . . Finally, it's good to see Weymouth native Andy Morse, who gives lessons at McGolf in Dedham, make the cut, finish tied for 50th and earn a check of $8,165.

THIS WEEK'S SIGNATURE HOLE

The 15th Hole at Atlantic Country Club Plymouth, MA

Atlantic COUNTRY CLUB

PAR		YDS

HCP		350
12		330
		250

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

NELSON

300th career game Oct. 25, 2010.

"It took 30 years and a lot of patience," Nelson said after a short ceremony where he presented his players with special 300 pins in honor of the achievement, and the fact that the win was the program's 300th, not just his. "I love the game. I love to coach. Before the girls started I was the JV coach for the boys. A lot of things have happened in 30 years. We have four sectional championships, three Eastern Mass. championships , two state titles and three appearances in the state championship game and 12 League Championships."

To make the day more special was the fact that it happened on Senior Day.

"We have 10 seniors and we started them all," he said. "They all played the whole game. This is a talented class. We have a nice combination."

That same day, he explained what kept the retired chemistry teacher coming back for soccer year after year.

"There's no question about it. I enjoy this," he said after No. 300. "This is one of the great pleasures of my life. It's different from the academic environment. It is great to be involved in a non-academic way, where life lessons are learned. This is an excellent group of kids. It's one of my most enjoyable teams. They're great to work with on a daily basis. They work hard for each other and care for each other."

Coach Nelson also cared for his players.

He respected them as people, and every time I was there, accentuated the positive, even after losses.

I can't remember a negative word from him.

I also remember a gentleman who always made it a point to look my daughters in the eye and say hello whenever they joined me at a game. He always wanted to know how they were doing, and my kids always said how nice he was when we'd be walking back to the parking lot.

That to me said a lot.

The fact that when he hit a milestone like win No. 300, he gave gifts to his players also said a lot.

Coach Nelson was the epitome of class.

As a coach, the championships and playoff appearances were an indicator of his coaching skill and knowledge of the game.

There were times where he would talk about experimenting with moving players into new positions, and it just about always worked, and many times, the players worked so well in the new spots that they stuck with them after high school or with their club teams.

A couple of years ago, Hanover was in a bit of a rebuilding mode, and made the playoffs through the Sullivan Rule, allowing them to join the tournament on the strength of their record against teams in their own division.

That season, Hanover had only played a few games against Div. 3 teams, and were successful. The rest of the games were against upper division teams, including some very tough opponents.

Hanover went into the Div. 3 South Sectionals with a No. 19 seed.

When the tournament ended for Hanover, they had a winning record and made it all the way to the Sectional semifinal, where they were edged 2-1 in penalty kicks by eventual champion Dover-Sherborn.

"It was a very good game," Nelson said in typical fashion. "I'm very proud of them. They're a great crew. They like each other and play hard for each other. I feel for my ten seniors. When you go down in the tournament you go down with a thud, but this team could just have easily been celebrating victory.

"I give the Dover-Sherborn girls credit. They fought to come back."

Coach Nelson, along with his long-time associate coach Dave Newbitt, was a fan of the game as well.

There were a few times I ran into him while covering games from other teams in my zone, and he would be there to enjoy a game. He was also a big fan of having the high school kids work with younger kids in the Youth Program. It was a regular event that was enjoyed by many.

To his family, friends, players and the town of Hanover, my thoughts are with you.

I personally will honor Coach Nelson by remembering his legacy and all the positive energy that left Hanover a better place for his being there.

COLLEGE LACROSSE

Curran honored at Lynchburg

The Virginia Sports Information Directors released its 2013 All-State College Division Men's Lacrosse Team Wednesday afternoon and Cohasset alumnus Vin Curran was named First Team All-State for Lynchburg College.

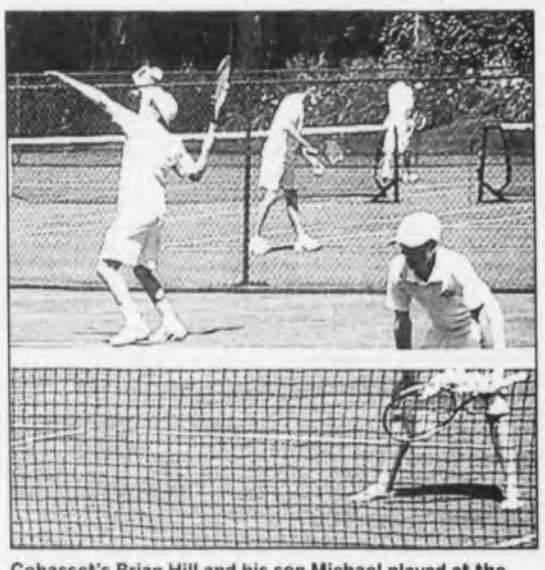
Curran, a senior, helped Lynchburg to the NCAA Round of Eight.

Curran, a midfielder, took over face-off duties this spring while still managing to be one of the team's most potent scorers. He won 54 percent of his face-off opportunities and led the squad with 71 ground balls. Curran was third on the team with 29 goals and finished with 36 points.

Eearlier this year, Curran was selected to play in May's United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association (USILA)/Laxworld Division III Senior North/South Game.



Curran was one of 64 student-athletes selected nationwide to take part. He was also a first-team All-Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC) performer this year.

Cohasset's Brian Hill and his son Michael played at the USTA National Father Son Grass Court Tennis Championships at Longwood Cricket Club. Michael played barefoot on a steamy day.

The USTA National Father Son Grass Court Tennis Championships were held at Longwood Cricket Club this week.

Sixty-four teams from around the country competed on the steamy grass courts in Chestnut Hill, including Cohasset's Owen Landon with Owen Landon III and Brian Hill with son Michael Hill.

The tournament fielded the strongest groups of father son teams in years.

The Landons lost a hard fought three-set match to former Tulane University No.1 Jeff Smith and his 15 year old son Zach from New Orleans, Louisiana, then faced another powerful duo of Lukas and Nick Mansour of Oak Park,Illinois, losing in straight sets.

Brian Hill Sr. and 12 year old son Michael ran into two buzzsaw teams losing in straight sets to 22 year-old Robert Bull and his dad and Kyle from Pleasantville New York in the main draw and 23 year old Grayson Frazier and his son Kevin.

year old Evan Mandeville, who lost his life to a rare, fatal form pediatric brain cancer called Diffuse Intrinsic Pontine Glioma (DIPG), last November.

Evan's parents and the LaBash's longtime friends, Tim and Aimee Mandeville, will also ride as a part of the team.

Evan underwent a series of clinical trials while receiving care a DFCI's Jimmy Fund Clinic. Evan's Crew earmarks the funds raised through the PMC to directly support research for DIPG.

"This is the entire team's first ride, and all have been training for several weeks," said Laura LaBash. "The other team members live in Northern Rhode Island, so training together has been tricky, but the team did a 50 mile ride together in June and feel pretty good about it. Please look out for them riding around town on these last days of training."

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Young Athlete Program

The South Shore YMCA's Emilson Branch in Hanover will host the Special Olympics Young Athletes Program this August 7-9 and 14-16 for children ages 2 to 8.

Young Athletes is an early introduction to sports and to the world of Special Olympics for children with delayed development. The children enjoy games and activities that develop motor skills and hand-eye coordination.

Each Young Athletes session will focus on a new motor skill in a different area of the SSYMCA Emilson Branch. This Ability program is inclusion based and participants are encouraged to include their siblings in the program.

The South Shore YMCA is seeking Young Athletes participants, volunteers aged 14 and up and volunteer coaches for the inaugural session of this exciting new program.

If you would like to a participate or volunteer, please contact, Pamela Holland, Youth & Family Assistant Director, at pholland@ssymca.org. Space is limited.

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week:

Always stop well before the marked stop line at train crossings. If you are struck from behind by another vehicle, this distance will prevent you from being pushed forward onto the tracks or into the train itself. In addition, do not drive forward until all the red lights have stopped flashing AND until the arms are fully up.

Choosing poor-quality vinyl windows is a mistake.

Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Offer ends August 10th!

July Programs at Wompatuck State Park

Come to Wompatuck State Park for a fun and educational experience. All programs are free and open to the public. An adult must accompany children. Rain cancels. Reasonable accommodations available upon request. For more information, call the Park Interpreter at (781) 749-7160 or visit: mass.gov/dcr. The Visitor Center is located at 204 Union St.

• Friday, July 19, 3 to 4 pm. Jr. Rangers – What Hurts the Park?: The Jr. Ranger program captures the imagination of young people through activities that grow future stewards of the environment. Discuss types of pollution, litter and graffiti we see within the Park and how it affects nature and beauty. We will view places where there is the most litter in the park and discuss what we can do to help stop the littering and graffiti. This free program is for children ages 8-12. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Meet at the Visitor Center. Rain or shine.

• Friday, July 19, 7:30 to 8:30pm. Sunset Hike: Take a hike in Wompatuck as the summer sun is setting and explore this serene time of day. Each week we'll discover something different as we experience dusk in the park. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Saturday, July 20, 9 to 11 am. Rocks in the Park Hike. Explore the glacial rock fields of Wompatuck and old growth forests in a less explored part of the Park as we make our way to Burbank Boulder, Wompatuck Park's largest glacial erratic. This hike covers about 4 miles of moderately difficult trails. Please wear sturdy shoes and bring water. Meet at Visitor Center.

• Sunday, July 21, 10 to 11 am. Animal Detectives: Let's find out what animals are living in the area. We will use our detective skills to observe footprints, nibbled twigs, and scat, as we take a walk through the forest and along a wetland. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Wednesday, July 24, 9 to 10 am. Healthy Heart Hike: Trails are the heart of our parks and DCR wants them to be the heart of a healthy lifestyle. The program offers a great way to have fun and get exercise in a low cost way! We welcome you to join us on a guided recreational hike along the Healthy Heart Trail at Wompatuck State Park. The forested trail is about 1.5 miles long. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Thursday, July 25, 9 to 10:15am. Native American & Colonial Life at Wompatuck: This walk begins with a visit to the 19th Century Triphammer Pond mill site and discussion of the pre-colonial stones wall that still exist today – these are some of the oldest existing stone walls in our country. Meet at the Visitor Center.

• Friday, July 26, 3 to 4 pm. Jr. Rangers – Preparing a Safe Campsite & Campfire: The Jr. Ranger program captures the imagination of young people through activities that grow future stewards of the environment. The Junior Rangers will learn to tie the "lifesaving knot" – the bowline; learn to pitch a tent and where. There will also be a step-by-step examination of how to build a safe and effective campfire. This free program is for children ages 8-12. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Meet at the Visitor Center. Rain or shine.

• Friday, July 26, 7:30 to 8:30pm. Sunset Hike: Take a hike in Wompatuck as the summer sun is setting and explore this serene time of day. Each week we'll discover something different as we experience dusk in the park. Meet at the Visitor Center.

FRESH AIR FUND

City kids find a cool way to spend the summer

By Mark Burridge
mburridge@wickedlocal.com

It's that time again.

Each year, a group of city kids gets the chance to spend a few weeks with host families from across the South Shore. Kids can soak in some fresh air and fun and typically the kids return for multiple years.

"It's an opportunity for kids to get out of the city," said Jenny Morgenthau, executive director of the Fresh Air Fund, which is based in New York City.

Morgenthau has been the executive director of the organization for 30 years. Over her time with the Fresh Air Fund, she said, the process has become more complex and the organization as a whole has grown.

"Now we're reaching out to all kinds of people," she said. "Everything has expanded."

Morgenthau said the fund now handles trips for 9,000 kids on a year-round basis. Of that total, 4,000 kids will enjoy their trip this summer.

Although the size and scope of the organization has changed over the years, the basic concept has stayed the same for much longer than Morgenthau has been involved.

"The Fresh Air Fund was created in 1877," she said.

The organization began in New York when kids would take trips to Pennsylvania. The South Shore has been an active participant for more than 50 years.

One problem Morgenthau said the organization doesn't usually have is finding a place for kids to stay. Typically, a family will take the same guest in each year for quite a while.

Morgenthau said new volunteers are always being added to the list as well.

"There tends to be a delay," she said. "People will read about it and then a few years later decide to do it."

On July 10, the South Shore group arrived in Hanover. The kids, ages 6-18, went to host families in Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Hanover, Milton, and Pembroke.

Cohasset's Claudia McKeon and her daughter Katie, 14, welcome back their "Fresh Air Friend" Arianna Bacote for a fourth year.

At the designated bus meeting spot in Hanover, Laurie Barkowsky of Kingston welcomes back Nicole Rivera, 13, of the Bronx, for a return visit through the "Fresh Air Friends" program. Some "Fresh Air Friends" are returning to the same host families for up to a third year.

Hingham's Jackie Nolan with Lexi, 9, greet Luis Ramirez, 9, of the Bronx, for a third year hosting their "Fresh Air Friend."

The Nobile family of Hingham — Amy Nobile, Emily, 9, and Sam, 10 — welcome back "Fresh Air Friend" Laila Clark for her third year of visiting.

Jen Smith of Hingham with daughters Elinor, 7, and Audrey, 5, post a homemade sign on their windshield to welcome their Fresh Air Friend, six-year-old Sydney Harris from the Bronx, as they await the arrival of the bus from New York to the meeting spot in Hanover.

Host families bearing welcome signs patiently wait for the Fresh Air Friends bus to unload in an orderly manner, connecting hosts with their visiting kids from inner-city New York.

The Health Connector.
Affordable. Convenient. And sometimes, life-saving.

"I figured hey, I'm young, if I get a cough or the flu I'll just buy medicine at the drug store. But when I browsed the Health Connector and saw that I could afford a plan, I signed up. Then I went to see the doctor. And learned that the lump I felt was breast cancer. They caught it in time, and treated it... and today, I've got Chase."

250,000 Massachusetts residents buy their health insurance through the Massachusetts Health Connector, the online marketplace where you can shop and compare plans from leading health insurance companies, and choose the right one for you. And check our website to learn about more options, enhanced benefits, and more savings for more people, coming soon.

ENROLL NOW THROUGH AUGUST 15.
If you buy your own health insurance, now's the time to shop for plans.

FOOD

WISE TO THE WORD

Quinoa: A seed that, if not harvested, will sprout a leafy vegetable. While the leaves can be eaten, quinoa is primarily grown for the seeds. Native to the Andes, quinoa is mild and slightly nutty, with a pillowy texture that's a little like couscous. It's a farmer-friendly crop that grows easily in many different climates and at high altitudes. Gluten-free and easy to digest, quinoa is packed with protein and dietary fiber. — Cookthink

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

CREATIVE COMMONS

Get creative with can food

Relying more on canned foods, which come pre-cleaned, chopped, cooked and easily portioned, can help you quickly assemble delicious and nutritious meals like the pros. Think of them as your personal prep kitchen.

Many professional chefs, accomplished home cooks and registered dietitians regularly incorporate canned ingredients into their recipes, so you can feel confident doing so as well. Consider these five key facts about canned foods.

1. Canned food is filled with important nutrients, including fiber, protein and vitamins and minerals essential for a healthy diet.

2. Research shows canned foods offer comparable nutrients often at a lower cost than their fresh or frozen counterparts, particularly when waste and prep time are considered. Additional research demonstrates that recipes prepared with canned ingredients rated the same or better in terms of taste and nutrition compared to those using fresh or frozen ingredients.

3. Canned food contributes less than 1 percent of the sodium in consumers' diets, and there are more no-salt added, low- and reduced-sodium options on grocery shelves than ever before. A quick drain and rinse can further reduce sodium content by 41 percent.

4. Canned foods are considered minimally processed foods. After being cleaned, peeled, chopped and trimmed, as necessary, foods are cooked in the can to lock in nutrients and flavor.

5. Steel cans are strong, tamper-resistant and feature an airtight seal to help guard against foodborne illness and contamination. In addition, steel cans are the most recycled food package.

Food Quiz

Which of these is not a tuna species?
A. Atlantic Bluefin
B. Skipjack
C. Little Tunny
D. Smalleye
Answer at bottom of rail.

Number to Know

40 Food needs to be stored at 40 F or colder to reduce the risk of pathogen growth, so limit the number of times you open the cooler. Never allow food to sit for more than two hours at temperatures below 90, and no more than an hour when temperatures exceed 90. Throw away food that's been sitting out too long.
— Brandpoint

Food Quiz answer

D. Smalleye (The bigeye tuna — not smalleye — looks similar to the yellowfin tuna. According to FishWatch.gov, the Atlantic bigeye is a highly migratory species that is approaching sustainability.)

Old World, new flavors

Charcuterie gets contemporary treatment as diners seek new tastes

By Jody Feinberg
More Content Now

You know the taste of salami and pepperoni, but what about sopressa and salumetto, coppa and capicola, finocchiona and bresaola?

Many people haven't even heard of these varieties of meats, though that is changing as salumi — dry cured meat — and charcuterie — dry cured, smoked and cooked meat — have become one of the latest food trends.

"People are trending to this old artisanal style of food," said Michele Carter, chef de cuisine at The Butcher Shop in Boston, which opened in 2003. "It's delicious, and people like that it's nose-to-tail eating where the whole animal is used."

At some restaurants, salumi and charcuterie can be found among the appetizers.

'More adventurous'

"Salumi is very different from the salami and pepperoni that people know," Carter said. "Many people are becoming more adventurous in what they eat and will try something new that's been recommended."

And the popularity also reflects more and more diners ordering small plates and sharing them.

"It's meant to be shared and to be a way to experience a variety of tastes, just like tapas," said Kevin Handmade sausages.

O'Donnell, executive chef of The Salty Pig, which opened in 2011 in Boston. "You find it in a lot more restaurants, even if it's only a small board with a few items."

These dry cured and smoked meats also are perfect for a summer trip, hike or a picnic because they do not need to be kept cold and are meant to be eaten at room temperature.

The popularity may be new, but they are based on traditional ways of preserving meat when refrigeration was not an option. To eliminate bacteria, the meat was salted to remove the moisture in which bacteria grow. It then was flavored with spices and dried or smoked.

O'Donnell and many other chefs take pride in serving meat from pigs raised humanely without growth hormones or unnecessary antibiotics.

"It makes a difference in the flavor and quality of the meat," O'Donnell said. "It's better for the animal, the environment and our bodies."

The difference

While the terms often are used interchangeably, salumi specifically refers to cured meat, while charcuterie can be cured, smoked or cooked in an oven, such as a pate, terrine or rillette.

Usually served sliced thin or in small pieces on a board, charcuterie and salumi offer diners a way to experience a wide variety of flavors and textures, ranging from soft to chewy, moist to hard, mild to spicy. Five or six types typically are accompanied by cheeses, as well as pickled vegetables and whole grain mustard. Some people place the meat on bread, while others combine the meat with the accoutrements.

"They are combined with foods that have acid in them, like vinegar, because that enhances and brightens the taste," Carter said.

O'Donnell developed his interest in introducing Americans to different types of meats after working in restaurants in Italy and France. He makes about 12 pates, mousses and terrines, including a specialty, porchetta di testa, which translates into pig's head. City of Boston health regulations allow restaurants to make their own cooked charcuterie, but do not allow them to dry or cure meat.

"The head — specifically the cheeks — have some of the most delicious meat," O'Donnell said. "We take the bone out, stuff it with fennel, rosemary, red pepper, salt and garlic, cook it slowly for 16 hours and slice it thin. Surprisingly, it's very popular."

Eat in moderation

Porchetta di testa, like many charcuterie and salumi meats, is both fatty and salty. O'Donnell and Carter said they believe the meat is too tasty to abandon, but should be eaten in moderation.

"Some people definitely shy away from it," Carter aid. "But if you eat very thin slices you're not consuming a huge amount of food."

At The Butcher Shop, some of the popular items are finocchiona, a variety of salami with fennel, duck liver mousse and the country-style pork terrine wrapped in bacon.

When asked, staff provide a bit of oral history.

Petit Jesus, which tastes like a subtle salami, earned its name because it takes nine months to age and weighs about 6 pounds, like a baby. In the story for the creation of finocchiona, a street urchin stole salami from a butcher and hid it in a pile of fennel. When he retrieved it, the fennel had infused the meat.

Connecting dots: System improves food choice

You're at a "fast" food place. The lunch crowd is out the door. The service seems so s-l-o-w.

At the order counter, customers are craning necks at the new menu boards. The chain, being suddenly health (marketing) conscious, has added ingredients and nutritional values to its menus.

"Let's see, is that fat the good fat or the bad fat?"

Pity the poor counter workers suddenly needing dietitian degrees.

Our military recently faced counter jams when they began listing nutritional values at their dining facilities, but they came up with a totally genius scheme that solves the problem.

It's in the dots

Our military has a response for everything.

Instead of nutrition lists, they use colored dot stickers:

Green: Eat all you wish.

Yellow: OK to eat occasionally.

Red: Eat rarely or avoid.

The most-common snack once was chips and a soda. It's peppered with red dots. The new favorite is celery and carrot sticks with green dots. Fresh fruits are green all over at the snack kiosk, cookies are yellow, pork rinds are red.

This system uses a simple glance to satisfy nutrition concerns. The dots lopped 3.81 minutes off the MDP (menu decision process).

Our military has a vested interest in healthy troops. As dietary concerns spread in civilian life, our purveyors have a vested interest in balancing what the market wants to what it needs. The dots fill in the gap between ignorant and smart eating, and you don't need to read anything.

For those of you wondering, the chicken-fried steak smothered in gravy is red dot all the way.

Army Green Dot Lasagna

- 9-12 lasagna noodles
- 2 eggs
- 1 tabespoon olive oil
- 1 cup broccoli, chopped
- 2 cup bell pepper, various colors, sliced
- 2 cup fresh spinach leaves
- 4 cup onion, chopped
- 2 cup fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 3 cloves garlic
- 16 ounces tomato paste
- 1 teaspoon basil
- 1 teaspoon oregano
- 1 cup vegetable broth, canned
- 12 ounces ricotta cheese
- 8 ounces cottage cheese
- Cheddar cheese to taste
- Mozzarella cheese to taste

Boil noodles for half time recommended. Stir fry vegetables lightly in olive oil. Add garlic, tomato paste, broth and basil. Simmer on low for 10 minutes or until thickened. Add more broth if too thick.

Mix ricotta, cottage cheese, eggs and oregano.

Oil a 9-by-13 inch baking pan. Alternate layers of noodles, vegetables and cheese. Sprinkle each later with mozzarella or cheddar cheese, including top. Bake uncovered in oven for 30 to 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Let stand 10 minutes.

Serve with tossed salad and garlic bread. Serves 10.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 29, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With new facts to work with, you should feel more confident in moving ahead. But continue to do so at an unhurried pace so you can spot details you might otherwise miss.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Taking on that new workplace project could be one of your smarter career moves. Expect a surprising show of support from someone who had always been a critic.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel you're too busy to undertake a new responsibility. But check it out before making any decisions. What you learn could persuade you to change your mind.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You feel quite content enjoying all the comforts of home right now. But the urge to travel grows stronger, and by week's end, you could begin packing your bags.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A hectic period begins to ease up, but that doesn't mean the Fine Feline can do much catnapping these days. You need to finish those old tasks and prepare for new ones.

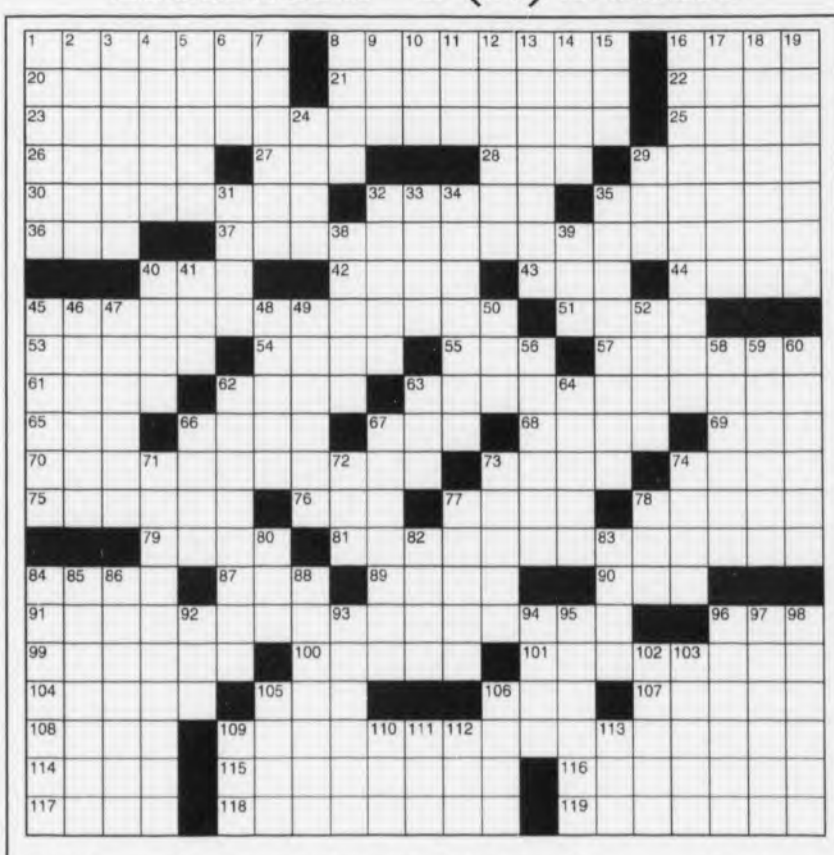
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect to get some good news about your financial situation by week's end. But it could still be too early to rush out with a long shopping list of things to buy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your management skills make an impression on some workplace VIPs who might be looking for someone like you to take on an upcoming project. Good luck.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Meeting a former adversary might be unsettling at first. But time has softened hard feelings, and you could be on the brink of starting a new relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A troubling situation close to home might cause you to change your travel plans. But getting all the facts before you act might cause you to reconsider.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might be quite alone right now in deciding to support a major workplace shift. But others will join you as new information supports your bold move.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A former co-worker returns with news that could persuade you to reassess recently made plans. Be sure to consult with a trusted colleague before you act.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your motives behind a recent decision could be called into question by a rival. But once you present the facts, all doubts will be resolved. Enjoy an arts-rich weekend.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

BOSTON MARATHON BOMBINGS

100 DAYS 100 LIVES

Months later, the attack's impact still ripples across eastern Mass.

By David Riley
driley@wickedlocal.com

The full impact of the Boston Marathon bombing cannot be told in a single story.

The attack killed three people and injured more than 260 others, and it also dealt a blow to hundreds, if not thousands, of other people: Friends and families of victims and survivors, spectators, emergency responders, medical workers, volunteers, runners.

Even more were affected by the manhunt for the suspects or played a part in the outpouring of goodwill and compassion for those hurt or killed in the attack.

To mark the hundredth day since the Boston Marathon bombing – July 24 – and gauge how its impact still is unfolding today, Wicked Local and GateHouse Media newspapers are telling the stories of 100 people in eastern Massachusetts touched in some way by the violence.

Only together do all these stories begin to paint a full picture of how the pair of explosions at the Copley Square finish line affected – and still affect – so many.

"100 Days, 100 Lives" found that for some, the wounds – whether physical, mental or emotional – still are painfully new.

"It will never be completely over, because she's missed so much by all of us," said Lillian Campbell, whose granddaughter, 29-year-old Krystle Campbell of Medford, was killed in the April 15 attack. "It's just a big void in your life."

The Somerville grandmother said her already tight-knit family has grown even closer and takes things one day at a time. She called her granddaughter "one in a million."

"I just want justice done," Campbell said of

Daniel Mahoney

Cohasset

Daniel Mahoney said that he sat down and wrote "A Prayer for the City" in two or three hours that Friday (April 19), then sent it in an email to the Boston University Marsh Chapel Choir Director of music, Dr. Scott Allen Jarrett. After listening to the file on Saturday, Dr. Jarrett decided that the choir could learn the piece in time for the next chapel service — the following morning.
The song created a healing moment in the chapel that morning, Dr. Jarrett added. "It was a deeply moving moment for all of us. In the absence of kindness, the gift of creativity seemed all the more necessary, and I think we all responded to that."

Citizens speak at State House hearing

Town Manager Act takes center stage

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A contingent of Cohasset citizens descended on the State House on Tuesday, July 23 for a hearing on the town's bill to amend Cohasset's Town Manager Act. The hearing was with the joint House and Senate Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government, chaired by state Rep. Sarah Peake, D-Provincetown.

A who's who of Cohasset officials and citizens turned out to either voice support for or testify against the bill (H.3486), which was submitted to the state legislature in May as a Home Rule Petition as approved by Town Meeting on April 22, 2013.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley also attended the hearing and gave testimony in support of the bill, asking the committee to move as quickly as possible on it.

"There was a significant amount of people testifying," Bradley said in a phone call Wednesday. "Now, it's in the hands of the committee."

Senator Robert Hedlund was also in attendance.

Several members of the Governance Committee, the selectmen-appointed board that spent months revising the Town Manager Act (TMA), which was enacted in 1997, spoke in support of the bill. Selectmen Fred Koed, Karen Quigley and Steve Gaumer also attended. Koed and Gaumer spoke in favor of passage. Gaumer reported on the hearing to his fellow selectmen during their Tuesday night meeting, noting that a "sizeable representation" of Cohasset turned out.

"There was a significant amount of people testifying. Now, it's in the hands of the committee."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham

Quigley, speaking as a private citizen, said an elected charter commission to explore Cohasset governance was a better process that would provide the opportunity for a town-wide ballot vote, according to Agnes McCann, Doane Street, who also spoke against the bill at the hearing.

McCann said at the hearing that the bill the legislature was considering came out of committee that the town had "no reason to have," because the committee was born out of the former town manager search committee. McCann would like the TMA to stay as is.

McCann said after the hearing, which took place from 10 a.m. to noon, that it was "very well run. The committee takes its job seriously and does a good job." She also complimented the chairwoman, Peake, calling her "smart and efficient."

Ted Carr, a former selectman and current chair of the town's Economic Development Committee, said he attended and enjoyed watching "how the sausage is made" in the legislative process.

"I thought it was a great session," Carr said, adding that Cohasset's bill was "one of many agenda items."

Carr also noted that many in Cohasset – from both sides of the issue – spoke on the bill, and the commentaries flowed quickly during the two-hour hearing that also had bills from other towns on the docket.

"People were passionate but concise," said Carr.

Governance Committee chair Christine Cunning said that everyone speaking "had a different point" to make and that the state committee "was good about listening to everyone."

Former selectman Paul Carlson, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, and Cunning, Sam

PICTURE THIS

Matt Dorn

The Mariner caught up with Matt Dorn, pastor of Beechwood Church. If you see Matt around town, be sure to mention that you saw him in Picture This! PHOTO/ERIN DALE

Name: Matt Dorn.

Occupation: Christian Ministry, currently serving as Pastor of Beechwood Church.

Best day of your life: My 31st birthday, because that was the day I discovered that Jesus Christ was really who he said he was, and not just an imaginary character like Santa Claus or the Easter Bunny.

Best vacation: One week cruise from Boston to Bermuda with my wife and my son a few years ago.

Favorite season: Whichever one is next ... I love change.

Favorite holiday: Christmas, because it is so rich in spiritual meaning, and such a sweet time of joyful togetherness with family and friends.

Favorite junk food, meal or dessert: Steak tip sandwich from Previte's Market in East Weymouth.

Best book: The gospel of John in the Bible, because it is a book that makes you feel like you are on a walk with a good friend, and that friend is Jesus.

Best movie or actor: "Mr. Holland's Opus" (Richard Dreyfuss) reminds me that investing humbly in the lives of others is a long-term thing that takes time to sprout, often not bearing its fruit until our season of involvement is long past.

Best TV show: "Shark Tank" is fun to watch. I love seeing the passion (and fear) of people who are pitching their business ideas to venture capitalists – hoping for their big break, while cringing at the possibility of outright rejection.

Best music, group or artist: Fernando Ortega's music stirs my soul.

Pet peeve: Questions about my most embarrassing moments.

Most embarrassing moment or fun fact about yourself: See previous question. Also, fun fact is that I have a degree in aeronautical engineering from MIT which, given my current occupation, basically makes me very qualified whenever I may say, "That isn't rocket science."

Person you would most like to meet: Benjamin Franklin, whose inventive spirit inspires me. (Actually, Jesus would be my first choice, but the Bible assures me that I actually will get to meet him one day, so figured I would use my wish for someone I'm less likely to meet otherwise).

Goal: To help Beechwood Church grow by fostering an environment of grace and truth where people who feel lost or broken or curious can find their way back to God.

Biggest worry: That people will discover that I grew up in New York (although curiously I was never a Yankees fan, but rather my favorite team was, of course, the Cincinnati Reds).

Best part of Cohasset: The Ground Level Café (51 Church Street in Beechwood), where new and old friends gather in our newly renovated ground floor to hear live music by local artists (presently open on the first and second Friday nights of each month).

Three rescued from elevator

On Sunday July 22 at 4:07 p.m., Engine 2 (FF/Medic Hernan and FF/Medic Donovan) and Ambulance 1 (FF/Medic Pergola and FF/Medic Collins) were dispatched to 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway for three individuals trapped in an elevator.

Once on scene members discovered that the elevator was stuck between the first and second floors. FF/Medic Hernan took command of the scene, members then shut off the power to the elevator hoist way, leaving the power still on in the elevator for the individuals still inside of the unit. Members then used a hydraulic spreader to open the doors of the elevator at the second floor landing.

Once the doors were open members then had actual visual contact of the individuals still inside of the elevator. A pencil ladder was then inserted in the elevator car through a roof hatch from the second floor opening. All three individuals were then safely removed from the elevator. Command also requested the electrical inspector to the scene and property management to the scene. Box 3 was paged out for station coverage while units were tied at the scene, Captain Bilodeau responded back for station coverage.

Command was terminated and all units cleared the scene once all individuals were removed from the elevator and the electrical inspector completed his inspection of the electricity to the elevator.

POLICE BEAT

Rash of break-ins to unlocked vehicles

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

There was a rash of car break-ins last week in town. Police said sometime overnight from Monday (July 15) to Tuesday (July 16), two cars on Stanton Road and a car on Black Horse Lane were entered.

The first incident was reported by the 50-year-old owner of a Honda Accord that was unlocked in the driveway on Stanton Road. Missing were a Garmen GPS unit, cell phone charger and personal papers. The 70-year-old owner of a 1999 Jeep Cherokee, also on Stanton Road, reported that his unlocked vehicle was entered; missing were prescription sunglasses and loose change. Both car owners reported hearing a car alarm going off in the neighborhood that evening but did not notify police.

The 52-year-old owner of a 2009 Nissan pickup truck on Black Horse Lane also reported his unlocked truck was entered during the same timeframe as the other break-ins. Stolen were an assortment of hand tools and the keys which were on the driver's side floor.

In another incident, a 35-year-old Cohasset man had parked at the end of Beechwood Street on Saturday (July 20) to go fishing at the reservoir. When he returned to his unlocked 2010 Mazda sedan, his iPod nano, Oakley sunglasses, and two cell phone chargers were missing.

House break-in

Police said the 46-year-old owner of a home which is on Route 3A reported a break-in on Tuesday (July 17). It appeared that someone entered the home through a back window. Missing were multiple credit cards, a computer, jewelry (including earrings, a gold pendant, gold necklace, bracelet, and blood stone set), several gift cards, and a small sculpture with a total value of nearly $20,000.

Detectives processed the scene and the crime is under investigation. The break-in occurred sometime between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. on July 17.

Road rage

On Monday (July 15), police had a call from a husband who was calling on his wife's behalf explaining that after she had pulled out of the Greenbush parking lot onto North Main Street to head toward Hingham, a 2011 Dodge pickup truck that had been traveling at a high rate of speed began tailgating her. When she reached the intersection of East and Hull streets, the truck pulled up next to her and the driver yelled at her for driving too slowly, police said. She was able to get the license plate number that came back to a 44-year-old Weymouth man. Police contacted him and told him to knock it off. The alleged victim did not want to pursue the matter any further, police said.

Plow blade

Police said the owner of a snow plow blade that apparently had fallen off a truck and was pushed to the side of the road after landing near the intersection at North Main Street and Forest Avenue on Monday (July 15) causing a traffic hazard was picked up by the owner, a 29-year-old Braintree man.

Credit card

Norwell police are handling the investigation of a credit card that was lost in their town. Someone attempted to use the card, which had been cancelled, at a local Cohasset business last week, police said. The owner of the business notified Cohasset police and Norwell is following up.

Solicitors

Five solicitors for WGBH public television obtained permits from the police department on Monday (July 15) after a Beach Street resident notified police about the sales activity. Police said the solicitors were being paid and therefore, under the town bylaw, must register even though they were working for a nonprofit. Police conducted a background check on each applicant; and each paid $25 for their permit.

Key dispute

A 25-year-old Cohasset man who works as a property manager for a residential building ended up being punched in the nose by a 59-year-old tenant during a dispute over the key to the utility room. Police said the property manager went to the unit around 7 p.m. on Monday (July 16) to obtain the key to the utility room, which is in a common area. The 59-year-old, who refused to give him the key, is being summonsed to court on the charge of assault and battery, police said.

Marijuana

Police were called again to the Golden Living Center off Route 3A on a report of a 52-year-old resident with marijuana. The same man, who was issued a $100 civil citation a few weeks ago for possession of the drug, had a plastic bag with marijuana. He claims to have a medical prescription for the drug but no medical prescriptions have yet been issued in Massachusetts, because the Department of Public Health is still working on the regulations for medical marijuana, police said.

Police seized the marijuana and the resident was issued another $100 civil citation for possession of one ounce or less of the drug.

Car scam

Police said a Cohasset resident, who purchased a 1967 Corvette from Grafton, Mass. for about $6,700 discovered the car he purchased was stolen when he went to register it and the Vehicle Identification Number (VIN) showed the sports car as stolen out of Grafton.

During the investigation Grafton and Cohasset police talked with the resident about who he purchased the car from. Grafton is following up, police said.

Deed scam

A 77-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police that she had recently placed her property in a trust. She received a notice from a processing company out of Wilmington, Delaware that she needed to send them $83 to obtain a copy of her deed, which she already had. Police investigated and found several complaints with the Better Business Bureau about the processing company that apparently targets the elderly to send money for something they can get for free.

Attaching plates

Police responded to a report of suspicious activity on Jerusalem Road last Thursday (July 18). Investigation revealed an unregistered, uninsured 1997 Mazda pickup truck with the wrong plates parked at a residence. The 58-year-old vehicle owner is being summonsed to court for attaching plates and not having insurance on the truck.

Rear-ended

A 30-year-old Weymouth woman in a 2010 Honda Element heading south at around 7 p.m. on Saturday (July 20) had slowed to allow someone to take a left out of JJ's on Route 3A when she was rear-ended by a 1998 Ford Escort, operated by a 22-year-old Hingham woman. Neither car was towed and there were no reported injuries. The Hingham woman was cited for following too closely, police said.

Outcropping

Police responded to a single-car accident around 11:50 p.m. on Saturday (July 20) on Beach Street. A 19-year-old Braintree man in a 2010 Honda Accordside-swiped a large rock outcropping on the passenger side of the Honda. The Honda had to be towed but he was not injured. Police said the motorist was unfamiliar with the area.

Dog dispute

A 53-year-old Cohasset man reported to police on Saturday that his neighbor had threatened to club his dog if it jumped over the fence. Police spoke to the 67-year-old neighbor who agreed not to make any more threats and there have been no further reports, police said.

14-year-olds

Police said three 14-year-olds arrived in the lobby of the Hull Police Department on Sunday (July 21) around 11:30 p.m. to report that they were threatened by the operator of a 2007 Cadillac Escalade on the Cohasset side of West Corner. One of the boys alleged the driver pointed a gun at them. Police issued a BOLO (Be on the Lookout) to area towns and the car was stopped on Nantasket Avenue. Cohasset responded and identified the driver and his female passenger who denied making threats and having a gun.

The vehicle was searched and no gun was found. The 14-year-old also changed his story, police said.

BEECHWOOD SIDEWALKS

Neighbors ask town to build 'missing link'

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said that regardless of where the money comes from, the sidewalk must be built. "Let's find the money and put in the missing link — it's no big deal," he said. "I think the town has a responsibility to step up and build this."

The Board of Selectmen have an obligation to address a missing sidewalk off Beechwood Street, concerned neighbors said during Tuesday's selectmen meeting.

Rich Fitzpatrick, Hammond Avenue, and Jane Norton, Norman Todd Road, attended the meeting to ask the board to intervene with a housing development project on the former "Cedarmere" construction site that will build a sidewalk connecting two abutting streets, however leaving out a 500-foot stretch between Hammond and Locust.

Fitzpatrick is concerned about the increased traffic volume that will occur once the project is finished and wants to see the sidewalk completed. He also told the board that the Toll Bros. construction company agreed to give the town $75,000 in mitigation to build new sidewalks as part of a special permit issued by the Planning Board.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said that regardless of where the money comes from, the sidewalk must be built. "Let's find the money and put in the missing link — it's no big deal," he said. "I think the town has a responsibility to step up and build this."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that he wanted to postpone further discussion on the matter until he could invite the Supt. of Public Works Carl Sestito to take part in the conversation. Koed said that the issue should be a "full agenda item" (it was mistakenly listed under the selectmen comment period on Tuesday's agenda). The chair said he wanted to see the sidewalk issue on the agenda for the August 20 meeting.

Under the current (1997) TMA, Milanoski and other town employees or board members are barred from applying for the permanent position. The revised TMA removes that prohibition.

Wakeman, Trish Morse and Kevin McCarthy of the governance committee also spoke in favor of the bill.

Former Town Manager Coughlin, who said in recent weeks that he planned to attend the hearing to oppose the bill, made good on his promise. He was the first to speak at the hearing and addressed his issues with it — chiefly that the amended TMA changes who is eligible to be a permanent town manager in Cohasset.

Coughlin was fired in March 2012 after spending six months as Cohasset's town manager. Resident Michael Milanoski was appointed as Acting Town Manager after previously serving on two town boards. Under the current (1997) TMA, Milanoski and other town employees or board members are barred from applying for the permanent position. The revised TMA removes that prohibition.

This doesn't sit well with Coughlin, who is currently suing the town for reinstatement. Coughlin wrote an email to members of the legislature on Wednesday thanking them for the opportunity to testify.

He also tied his opposition of the bill in with his litigation against the town. Coughlin said, "While I admit that there may have been many more speakers in favor of H.3486 than opponents at yesterday's hearing, I hope that the committee is moved by the fact American history is marked by many instances where a vocal minority has been responsible for fighting injustice."

Cunning said recently that she hopes less attention will be paid to the one change in the TMA that concerns the town manager eligibility, and that the committee will focus on the Act as a whole, which deals with several town issues including the budget process.

Talk on towing contracts

Some confusion surfaces over the 'RFQ'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Acting Town Michael Milanoski explained that the town had to remove two companies from the towing rotation because neither was properly licensed, and this was a liability for the town.

There was some confusion during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting on a recent request for qualifications (RFQ) that the town published for towing companies. The agenda had a typo of RFP, which stands for request for proposals, rather than RFQ. A few interested bidders were in the audience Tuesday and asked for clarification on that.

The town recently sent the RFQ to six towing companies in the area, and submissions are due by July 29. One company that is planning to send in its qualifications is Scituate Collision of Cohasset, owned by Robert Ross. Ross asked the selectmen during the public comment period if they had received letters he had written wondering why his company had been removed from the town's rotation of towing trucks. He wanted to know why it was taking so long to get a response from the board.

Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy said that the selectmen cannot respond individually to letters because they are a deliberative body and can only put a subject on a meeting agenda, but noted that the board should have a policy for answering letters or email stating that the message has been received.

Ross wrote in a May 9 letter to the board that he received a memo from Acting Police Chief William Quigley on May 31, 2012 that Scituate Collision (which is off Route 3A near the Scituate-Cohasset line) had been placed on a three-company rotation to perform police towing for Cohasset. However, four days after performing towing, Quigley told Ross that the company would be removed from the list after receiving a complaint that Scituate Collision was not utilizing its own equipment and was not properly licensed.

Ross said he since became licensed with the state Department of Public Utilities but had not yet been placed back on the rotation.

Acting Town Michael Milanoski explained that the town had to remove two companies from the towing rotation because neither was properly licensed, and this was a liability for the town.

Acting Chief Quigley stated the same in a June 18, 2013 memo to Milanoski. "At that time I told [Ross] that I was suspending him from the tow list until I had proof of proper permitting and insurance," Quigley wrote. "This was to protect the town from liability."

Ross's landlord Donald Staszko also spoke at the selectmen's meeting, asking how many towing companies were currently authorized to perform towing for Cohasset police. Milanoski answered, "Right now, we have one."

Staszko wondered why the town wouldn't have more than one, to which Milanoski replied that this is the purpose of the RFQ process. "Hopefully we'll have qualified applicants and more than one provider," adding that however, "I can't make any determination until I see who applies."

Milanoski said that he, as the town's Chief Procurement Officer, will choose the top bidders in conjunction with the town's chiefs, Quigley and Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

The town manager added that the RFQ process will be a transparent one that seeks to "keep the politics out of it."

When asked for comment Wednesday, Acting Chief Quigley said the RFQ process would help ensure fairness.

"This process will level the playing field, establish clear rules and standards for would-be tow operators, and ultimately protect the town and police department from claims of favoritism and bias," he said.

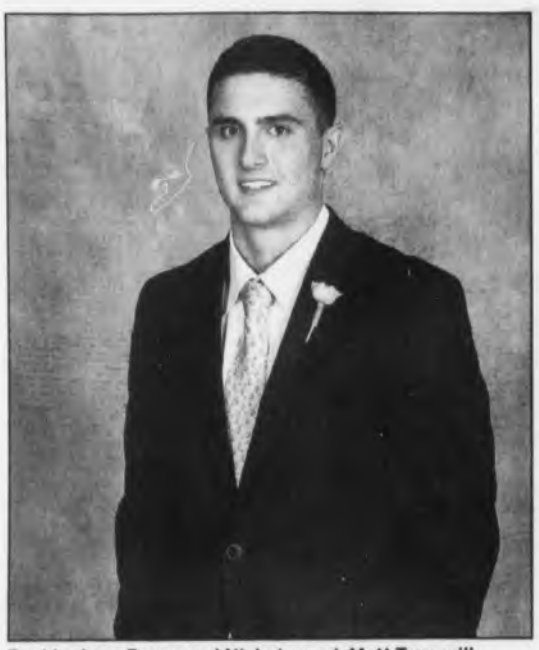
Going 'Over the Edge' for the Special Olympics

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Happy 8th!

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone this week? I am sure many of you were happy to have somewhat cooler temps, I hope that some outdoor time took place for you all. I want to correct an error from last week and wish Becca Palmer a very happy "8th" birthday and not her "9th" as was printed! Sorry Boodles!



Dean's list

Congratulations are going out to Olivia M. Franklin of Cohasset, who has been named to the Dean's List of students in the Columbian College of Arts and Sciences at The George Washington University for the spring of 2013.

Olivia is a member of the class of 2016 and is a member of the Zeta Chapter of Sigma Kappa established in 1905. She graduated from Cohasset High School. Nice piece of news Olivia, your family and friends are psyched I am sure.

Graduate

Way to go for Matt Troy who recently graduated from Buckingham Brown and Nichols in Cambridge. Matt will attend Boston College, School of Arts and Sciences.

Backpacks

Here is a great "pay it forward" story happening here in town called, Backpacks for Wellspring! Join Cohasset Girl Scouts in a collection drive for gently used school and sports backpacks to benefit Wellspring in Hull. Collection boxes are located at Cohasset Swim Center, Rec Camp at Deer Hill, Our World and Cohasset Sports Complex until August 14th.

Backpacks will be sold in Wellspring's Thrift Shop, and all proceeds will benefit their families in need! Don't miss out on this opportunity to help a great cause if you are replacing kids' backpacks for the new school year! Please contact Kim Donohue at kdonhue221@comcast.net with any questions.

Over the Edge

On Saturday (the hottest day of July!), Phil Lehr, Cohasset Citizen of the Year, successfully made it Over the Edge for Special Olympics Massachusetts. Phil and 160 other brave souls rappelled down the outside of the 22-story Hyatt Regency Hotel in downtown Boston. Phil had a great cheering section when his turn came – Joanne and his girls, the Chapman, Roach, Haber, and Nothnagle families and Special Olympics athlete Jay Nothnagle who escorted Phil to the roof and back to the awards area.

Over the Edge raises money to support the 13,000 athletes of Special Olympics Massachusetts, including the 100 members of Team Scituate/South Shore Mariners, our local program. It is not too late to honor Phil with a donation, now that we know he actually did it! Please send a check made to SOMA to Phil at 306 No. Main St. Cohasset or donate online at the secure website: www.overtheedgebostonhome.org. Phil says the experience was memorable, an d he has checked it off his bucket list. Thanks to everyone for your support.

Town Report

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is looking for a copy of the 1918 Annual Town Report for Cohasset for its Digital Cohasset project. The report will be scanned and made freely available online. The copy will be returned to you. If you would like to donate a copy, please call the reference desk at 781-383-1348.

Picnic

On August 29, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., South Shore Elder Services will hold an annual picnic at Nantasket Beach. This year's theme, a country hoe down, will feature live music and entertainment, as well as lunch. Cost is $3. Reservations for this event must be received no later than August 9. No reservations will be accepted after that date. If you are interested in attending this event, please call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112. Transportation will be provided.

On stage

This weekend, you can take in a great family show with your kiddos by attending the Cohasset Dramatic Club's, 2013 Summer Musical Theater Production of "Zombie Prom." With three shows left, tonight (July 26) and tomorrow (July 27) are at 7:30 pm and Sunday (July 28) is at 2 p.m. The tickets are flying out the door and you don't want to miss out. The cost is $15 per person general admission. To reserve your tickets, call 617-922-0280.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL

Historical Society celebrates 85 years

Party is Sunday, June 28

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Historical Society has been holding various events and fundraisers as a yearlong celebration of their 85th anniversary. The society's official birthday is July 16, 1928.

Revelers can celebrate the society's birthday at a party and ice cream social this Sunday, July 28, from 1 to 4 p.m. in the Pratt Building on S. Main Street. All ages are welcome and the event is free of charge.

The ice cream is being donated from Gifford's Ice Cream of Maine. The special flavor of the day is Long Rocky Coast. There will also be a gift shop set up featuring penny candy.

Ice cream will be served outside while inside, event attendees can peruse an exhibit showcasing the Historical Society over its 85-year history. Highlights include vintage clothing from the organization's vast textile archive, along with photographs, newspaper articles, and other treasures from yesteryear.

Historical Society director Lynne DiGiacomo said that the exhibit shows "where we we've been, how far we've come, and where we're going."

President Kathy O'Malley chimed in, "We're looking forward to the next 85 years."

While the Historical Society has been in the business of chronicling Cohasset life and times for the past eight-and-a-half decades, they haven't also been housed in the same location. The society moved from its former location, the Lothrop building at 14 Summer Street, 10 years ago, when the society sold it and purchased its current home, the Pratt Building, formerly the town library (which is now at 35 Ripley Road, the site of the old Osgood School).

The society also obtained various other properties over the years, including the Maritime museum on Elm Street, which houses permanent exhibits while the ones in the Pratt Building change several times a year. The most recent exhibit was a patriotic flag display in time for both Flag Day and Independence Day that featured antique flags from as far back as the Civil War and photos and letters from soldiers in World War II.

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating its 85th birthday with an ice cream social and special exhibit this weekend. PHOTO/ERIN DALE

The Pratt Building has also undergone its share of changes. The light fixtures were recently restored, and the floors were redone in the spring thanks to Community Preservation Committee funding approved by Town Meeting, and now "they're gorgeous," said DiGiacomo.

Pulling up the floors also uncovered some "clues" about the building's origins. Marble was discovered underneath the flooring in the building's foyer, which the society would eventually like to restore.

"People who haven't come in and knew [the building when it was] the library should come in and see this building," said DeGiacomo.

As time wanes on, the society gets busier.

"We went from a sleepy society to a growing one," said O'Malley.

The current exhibit features items from the society's vast archive. "We have over 25,000 objects and things are still being dropped off," said DeGiacomo. "It's wonderful."

This display includes little "odds and ends," such as a wedding dress from the 1800s and a Boston Post cane from the early 1900s, which was traditionally given to the town's oldest citizen each year.

There is also a display table of photographs that have yet to be identified, and the society is seeking the public's help on this.

"Hopefully people will stop by and help identify them," said DeGiacomo.

Attendees are encouraged to donate or consider joining the society for as little as $25 per year. Members enjoy reduced admission for programs and events, members-only events, access to the society's library and archives, and more.

All proceeds from the event benefit the historical society, which is a 501c(3) nonprofit.

Next up for the Historical Society — a clambake scheduled for Sept. 14, 2013.

The Cohasset Historical Society is located at 106 South Main Street, Cohasset, MA, 02025. For more information, visit online at cohassethistoricalsociety.org or call 781-383-1434.

Choosing poor-quality vinyl windows is a mistake.

Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT
an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Offer ends August 10th!

BOMBING VICTIM

Life getting back to normal for JP Craven

By Glenda Garland
Special to the Mariner

Pretty much everyone in Massachusetts knows someone affected by the terrorist attack at the Boston Marathon April 15. Sharing those stories has made our world feel a little smaller, a little more connected. What happened to JP Craven, 24, of Hingham after the marathon reinforced that connectedness even more Craven waited on the Newbury Street side of Boylston, by the door to the Boston Public Library, for his father to finish running the marathon. Since he'd arrived separately, his mother and one of his younger brothers, Brian, 14, were on the opposite side of the street, next to the Lenox Hotel. Craven had been waiting about 15 to 20 minutes for his father to finish when the bombs went off. Craven took some shrapnel to his calf, had his face cut badly enough to require surgery, and suffered some hearing loss in his right ear.

One of his doctors at Boston Medical Center, he found, had graduated from Hingham High School in the mid-1990s. At first, Craven said he didn't really remark on that connection.

"It was more than where she came from, but the amount of work and time she and the others on the team spent making me feel better," Craven said.

Then, as time passed, Craven got to thinking that, "... the fact that she's from Hingham is pretty cool."

Craven said his doctor does not wish to be identified, as she considers what she was just doing her usual job. She declined to comment for this story.

Although he still has scars on his face, Craven said he was feeling "fairly normal" by the beginning of June. He's grateful to friends from college who came visiting him, the team at Boston Medical Center, and the Hingham community. "Close friends of my parents, and parents of my brothers' friends asked me how I was, and that really helped."

He also expressed considerable thanks to his colleagues at St. Sebastian's School, where he teaches eighth grade science and algebra.

"Because we're a private school, we don't have substitutes, so other teachers stepped in and took my classes," he said. "The school took care of it so I didn't have to worry. Everyone really helped me out in a pretty big way."

Craven is looking forward to getting back to teaching in the fall. He said he hadn't been following the news about the surviving bombing suspect more closely than he follows other stories on the news. He did mention, however, that his father plans to run the marathon again next year.

"This year was supposed to be his last marathon, but he says he's going to run again, maybe with my sister."

surviving bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev. "I don't wish anybody dead."

Tsarnaev pleaded not guilty to 30 charges July 1 in his first appearance in U.S. District Court. If convicted, he could face life in prison or the death penalty.

Meanwhile, a number of survivors who lost limbs have taken first steps toward moving on with their lives on new metal and carbon-fiber legs.

Chris Martino, manager of United Prosthetics and Orthotics, said his business has worked with about half the 14 victims who lost one or both legs. At its Dorchester and Braintree offices, the business has crafted custom sockets for each patient's prosthesis. Most include hydraulic knees for amputations above the joint, Martino said.

Survivors have been inundated with images of amputees who are athletes or otherwise had great success with prostheses, he said. Then finding that it can take months to learn to walk with a new limb can be a difficult adjustment.

"It's doable for sure," Martino stressed. "We do it all the time."

Volunteers and fundraisers, meanwhile, continue their work. Red Cross of Eastern Massachusetts, for example, still is aiding 42 families in finding unfamiliar services, such as help making their homes wheelchair accessible, CEO Jarrett Barrios said. Red Cross also has focused on addressing mental health challenges people face in coping with an attack.

"In general, most people are resilient and don't experience a major reaction," said Christine Tebaldi, a Southborough resident who has led Red Cross' disaster mental health initiatives. "Early support generally helps to reduce that risk."

Many are determined to focus on the positive – volunteers who rushed into carnage to help the wounded, an outpouring of support for those hurt the most.

"Yes, I saw two people do a deed that was on the darkest side of humanity," said Robert Wheeler, a runner captured in a now-famous photo at the finish line, holding his shirt to a wounded man's elevated leg. "I also saw thousands of people do something that was on the brighter side of humanity – the brightest."

Wheeler, 24, a Marshfield native and Ashland resident, is now in nearly daily contact with the man he helped, Ron Brassard of New Hampshire, and his wife and children.

"They're family," Wheeler said.

While what he witnessed at the bombing will always be with him, Wheeler said he is determined not to be overwhelmed by anger.

"There's no way I'm going to let this mold me in a negative way," he said.

One of the highest-profile sources of support for victims, One Fund Boston, distributed nearly $61 million to them and their families in late June.

"It worked, and it worked effectively and I think in a brilliant fashion," fund administrator and attorney Ken Feinberg said recently.

The fund continues to accept new donations – it has raised more than $4 million since that initial payout – and local people continue to raise money for survivors facing lifelong medical bills.

How new contributions to the One Fund might be used is up for debate. The Massachusetts Bar Association has criticized Feinberg's methodology for payments, based largely on length of hospital stays, for not weighing factors such as a victim's age or an injury's impact on his or her occupation.

The Bar does not want any money returned, but has asked Attorney General Martha Coakley to intervene going forward.

"Nobody got any money here that they did not deserve," said Paul White, chairman of the Bar's civil litigation section and a pro bono program for Marathon victims. "The question here is whether some people did not get money that they did deserve."

Feinberg, who no longer runs the fund, said the criticism is well-intentioned, but said such considerations would have stalled aid to victims in need and added expense to the process.

"I think that speed, consistency and cost trump the theoretical concerns advanced by the Mass. Bar, which in principle I can't argue with," Feinberg said.

Runners, meanwhile, have begun looking to next year's Boston Marathon. Wheeler, who has run at least two marathons since Boston, said he has seen other races more packed than ever. He plans to run Boston next year, too.

He recalled grabbing a cup of water for a runner who struggled up Heartbreak Hill before the bombing in April. Later, she caught up to him as he tried to stretch out a locked knee and encouraged him to finish the race.

"That's the community of runners that I think will grow with what happened," Wheeler said. "I've already seen it grow."

CHS music teacher composes commemorative song

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Daniel Mahoney, who teaches chorus at Cohasset High School, composed "A Prayer for the City" after the Boston Marathon bombings. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Hans Christian Andersen said, "Where words fail, music speaks."

The sentiment especially rings true during times of tragedy. During the city-wide lockdown on the Friday following the Boston Marathon bombings on Monday, April 15, a local composer decided to spend the day expressing his feelings for the city he loves the best way he knew how — with a song.

Daniel Mahoney, a Norwood native who recently completed his first year of teaching chorus at Cohasset High School, is also an accomplished composer and musician. He studied music education at Itacha College and currently performs with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Tanglewood Festival Chorus and the Boston University Marsh Chapel Choir.

It was the latter choir that performed a piece Mahoney composed to commemorate the events of Patriot's Day — and they did so only two days after the song was written.

Mahoney said that he sat down and wrote "A Prayer for the City" in two or three hours that Friday, then sent it in an email to the Marsh Chapel director of music, Dr. Scott Allen Jarrett. After listening to the file on Saturday, Dr. Jarrett decided that the choir could learn the piece in time for the next chapel service — the following morning.

"We could just learn it in the morning," Dr. Jarrett said. While this speaks to the choir's musical talents, the director explained such a quick turnaround is not the norm.

"It usually takes weeks of rehearsal," said Dr. Jarrett. This, however, was a special circumstance. "It was an amazing moment. Rarely is a new piece of music written and performed in less than 24 hours."

While the Marsh Chapel Choir tries to feature a living composer once a month, the director added, "You don't often have that opportunity to give the world premiere of something, and it turns out the composer is in your midst. And the reason for the composition was the reason we were in that room."

Mahoney said that it's also rare for him to compose a song so rapidly. "I don't typically write pieces that quickly," he said. "They usually take substantially longer."

The song's text is from a Church of England Common Worship prayer. Dr. Jarrett said that copies of prayers had been left in the chapel during a healing service on Wed., April 17, two days after the bombings.

The city was on lockdown on Friday, April 19 while the bombing suspect was on the lam.

"We were all strongly encouraged to stay in the house," Dr. Jarrett recalled. "Most of us were glued to the news station; it was very scary."

While Bostonians and folks around the world waited for the authorities to capture the suspect, those directing Sunday services were "scrambling to figure out what we would do Sunday morning that would work in the moment and honor what the city was going through," Dr. Jarrett explained.

"A Prayer for the City" arrived at the right moment.

"It was deeply moving and meaningful to have a new piece of art come from the ashes," he said, "and that [Mahoney] would be so moved to respond in such a way."

The song created a healing moment in the chapel that morning, Dr. Jarrett added. "It was a deeply moving moment for all of us. In the absence of kindness, the gift of creativity seemed all the more necessary, and I think we all responded to that."

And while the reason for the gathering was harrowing, the beauty of the song and the choir's performance was intended to lift the spirits of a city in mourning.

Mahoney also embedded a code of sorts within his piece. An area code, to be exact.

The composer managed to weave Boston's 617 area code into the song. Mahoney got the idea to include "617" because it kept popping up during the shut-in day, when concerned friends and family members were calling the Boston area to check on loved ones.

Both the composer and the director explained how this works in the composition.

"It's in the chord structures — the inversions of the chords," Dr. Jarrett said. "Composers use non-musical devices to organize their work; he took the area code and used it as a creative departure point."

Mahoney said that Dr. Jarrett's description was on point. The song's chord progression is VI – i – VII (Bb-D mi – C in D minor), or "617."

"It was that little idea that got everything else in motion," Mahoney said of the composition, "and I then sought to convey the meaning of the text as much as possible."

"A Prayer for Boston" can be heard as part of a podcast on iTunes, available by searching for the Marsh Chapel Sunday Services. The song was performed during "The Shepherd" service on Sunday, April 21, 2013.

OUR VIEW

100 days and counting

More than three months have passed since that fateful Patriots Day — April 15, 2013 — when powerful homemade pressure cooker bombs were detonated on a perfect spring day at the finish line of the Boston Marathon. And while it's said that time heals, 100 days later the wounds of the Boston Marathon bombings will leave a scar on our collective psyche for years to come.

For those directly affected by the tragedy, the physical and emotional wounds remain raw. While the healing process is underway for those whose lives have been changed, the recovery has not been and will not be easy.

The bombings shook Boston's – and the nation's – spirit, but the "Boston Strong" mantra has helped guide us through the days and months since with a gritty determination to move forward and not be defeated by a cowardly act that turned Marathon Monday into a scene of carnage and mayhem.

We saw the best of people come through after the attacks, with heroes running toward danger to come to the aid of the injured. We saw incredible feats of strength, compassion for others, selfless acts and many examples of hope and light emerging from the darkness that day.

Four days after the attack, the entire Boston Metro area was under lockdown as police from all corners of the state searched for the surviving suspect, Dzhokar Tsarnaev, a seemingly normal 19-year-old University of Massachusetts Dartmouth student who no one expected could be capable of this heinous act. The young man remained at large after a shootout killed his brother and alleged accomplice, Tamerlan Tsarneav, in the early morning hours of April 19.

The unprecedented, daylong dragnet not only enveloped Greater Boston, but also stretched down to the SouthCoast — on the campus of the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth and the nearby city of New Bedford, where officials searched for clues that would lead to the surviving Tsarnaev. The normally peaceful campus fell under siege as helicopters, military vehicles, federal agents and state and local police tried to knit all the pieces together. Eventually, Dzhokar Tsarnaev would be captured in dramatic fashion in Watertown.

Now, the methodical wheels of justice have begun to turn, with Tsarneav making his first court appearance since the bombings earlier this month. As the court proceedings unfold, we must not lose sight of the victims and those who came to their rescue. In their stories, we can find incredible inspiration.

Millions of dollars were raised for the victims through the Boston One Fund and other charitable efforts. Efforts large and small — spearheaded by businesses and regular people of all ages from around the country who just wanted to do something to help — demonstrated an amazing show of support for our neighbors in their time of need. In just two months, $61 million was raised for the One Fund from donors all over the world.

The chards from the Boston Marathon bombing spread to nearly every corner of Massachusetts — and around the globe. In this special report today, we share some of the powerful stories of those Massachusetts residents affected by the tragedy and look at how that April day changed them.

By sharing these stories of inspiration, we honor their selfless acts of these people – some of them our own family, friends and neighbors — that help us restore our faith in humanity in the face of unthinkable evil. They are reminders of how – 100 days later – Massachusetts remains Boston Strong.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Grateful for help

This letter was in selectmen's correspondence.

Dear Chief Silvia:

I want to let you know I appreciated the help from the two Cohasset firefighters who answered my emergency call Sunday, June 30, 2013.

The sump pump in my basement malfunctioned and overheated.

The firefighters made sure the electricity to the pump was disconnected. They advised me to contact a plumber, which I did, and everything is OK, once again.

Sincerely,

Marion L. Odermatt,
2 Norman Todd Lane

Sailing Club appreciates support

The Cohasset Sailing Club would like to thank all those who joined us for our annual launch party/fundraiser earlier this month.

We especially want to thank the following individuals and businesses for generously donating auction items: Rudolph Adamo Salon, the Albanese Family, Atlantic Bagel, Audi Norwell/Dan Leahy, Baked, Bumble Bee Landing, CMI, Coastal Dealerships, Cohasset House of Pizza, Cohasset Swim Center, Noel Collins, the Curran Family, Curtis Liquors, Dahlia Salon, Darilynn's, Del's Lemonade, Kathy Desjourdy, Feng Shui, French Memories, Great Neck Grill, Hoadley Martinez, the Kenealy Family, the Kenney Family, the Kinscherf Family, Lido Juice Bar, Mr. Dooley's Pub, the Nahill Family, OSI, Paperscapes, Peter Pescatore, Pink Tulip, Jim Porter, Sarah Porter, Simply Nail, South Shore Athletic Club, Tina Watson, Willow Spa and Salon, and the Wrenn Family.

You have all brought us closer to achieving our goal of fully funding the new clubhouse, which we begin building this September. We look forward to welcoming all of you to the new facility next year.

Thanks again for your continued support!

Cohasset Triathlon is a true 'gem'

This letter was in selectmen's correspondence

Dear Mr. Milanoski and Board of Selectmen,

I recently had the distinct pleasure of attending the Cohasset Triathlon on June 30 on Sandy Beach in your lovely town and am compelled to share some of the insights gained as a result. I am the Director of Event Services at USA Triathlon, a senior member of the staff of the national governing body for the Olympic sport of triathlon and a position I've held for nine years. In my tenure here and in my triathlon experience, which extends 22 years in length, I have rarely seen collaborative effort as successful as the Cohasset Triathlon, organized and executed by Mr. Bill Burnett and the Streamline Events team.

I've seen our sport grow from about 800 events in 2004 (my first year with the organization) to over 4,000 this current season. Our sport is flourishing and it is largely due to the example demonstrated by Streamline Events and the Fire Department, Police Department and entire Cohasset community. My personal experience includes over 100 events as a participant and hundreds more as an official, technical delegate and in my role with USA Triathlon. The point in stating this experience is to assure you I've personally experienced and observed more than most.

What I observed on the beach, roads and within the community of Cohasset is nothing short of extraordinary.

From the fundamental execution of the event, which requires detailed communication and planning between Fire, Police, Emergency and race staff, to the broader scope of the communicating to the local residents the details about the event, to the nuanced details of athlete care (race shirts in multiple colors to choose from!, men's and women's sizing!, delicious and nutritious food options!, fabulous awards), it is clear that the Cohasset Triathlon is a first-class race of the utmost caliber.

Since my professional portfolio includes the risk management responsibilities for USA Triathlon it's imperative for me to note the stellar safety aspect of this event. It was my honor to closely observe the swim portion of the race, in the hip pocket of Fire Chief Robert Silvia. With athlete safety as the critical driver there is much for the USA Triathlon family of 2,000+ race directors to learn from the team work displayed, the deployment of water-based assets, and the synergy between race staff, lifeguards, medical, fire and harbor personnel. This was unparalleled coordination, support and attention to detail that is completely "behind the scenes" yet critical to success.

My purpose in writing is to shed light on this triathlon gem, to share a perspective from the national level, to thank the entire town for participating in the delivery of a fantastic experience for the athletes, volunteers and citizen and to encourage you, as an elected body, in your continued support. The multi-sport lifestyle is having dramatic effect on the lives of participants as they train their bodies, eat healthier, lower diabetes and cardiac disease risk and invest in personal wellness. Without wonderful venues such as Cohasset in which to test their progress the sport withers and dies. Thank you all for keeping our sport green and growing, please accept the heartfelt gratitude of this visitor who can't wait to return in the future.

Kathy Nlatejka,
Director of Event Services

UPDATE

Fox Run discussions postponed

A neighborhood dispute on the Fox Run property remains unresolved.

Fox Run is a private way off of Forest Avenue that the Cohasset Conservation Trust is planning to purchase from the White family in Cohasset.

Town Meeting voted to approve $100,000 in Community Preservation Committee (CPC) funds to purchase a conservation restriction, protecting the land from further development. The sale is not a done deal, however, so the money is still in the CPC account. The transaction is currently in limbo as neighbors fear encroachment on their properties via public trails.

Abutters have brought their concerns to the Board of Selectmen who in turn told the neighbors to work it out with the CCT and White family.

Last week the CPC invited the neighbors to the Monday, July 22 meeting to discuss Fox Run; however the neighbors were unable to attend. CPC did not reach a quorum that night and did not hold their meeting.

The selectmen also had Fox Run slated as an agenda item for their Tuesday, July 23 meeting; however the item was postponed until the neighbors and the White's attorney could be present. The board plans to discuss the issue when abutters to the property are available.

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said during the meeting that the Fox Run "parties asked to be notified in advance" of a future discussion of the issue. The "controversy" of the issue calls for a "protocol to make sure everybody is invited," said Koed.

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

COMMENTARY

Setting the record straight

CHRISTINE CUNNING

There was testimony Tuesday that the "driving force and the sole goal of the amendment brought forth was to remove qualifications for the Town Manager." This misses the intent by such a wide margin it is difficult to know where to begin.

I wanted to thank all the individuals who took their time to attend the Massachusetts Legislative committee hearing regarding Cohasset's bill to amend the Town Manager Act and to express their varied opinions. I hope to clarify and highlight some points regarding the process and culture of the Governance Committee. I also apologize for not having had more time along the way to present these, outside the venues of our regular meetings and at intermittent Board of Selectmen's meetings, as my schedule just has not allowed extra time for 'PR"! However, after reading this week and then hearing the extent of misunderstanding surrounding this piece of legislation I must respond, speaking for myself, but feeling that the following aligns with the committee, from our past discussions at meetings.

There was testimony Tuesday that the "driving force and the sole goal of the amendment brought forth was to remove qualifications for the Town Manager." This misses the intent by such a wide margin it is difficult to know where to begin. I start by assuring all that a group of 8-9 independent and varied and very busy volunteer citizens would certainly not invest this kind of time and energy in pursuit of such an agenda. Though organizational circumstances and political timing at the beginning of our work on this issue were murky, over the course of the following 15 months, the committee and interested members of the community certainly moved forth much more comprehensive, thoughtful and positive ideas. And point of fact, though several line items were voted down at the 2012 fall Town Meeting, the act in it's entirety was presented once at spring Town Meeting and overwhelmingly approved with a 61 percent vote by the secret ballot requested by some.

Among these very important changes made in the passed act are the following:

- Budget Planning Process, encouraging continuance on sound and positive financial management
- Requiring selectmen to formally approve warrants before Town Meeting
- Giving selectmen authority to appoint independent auditors
- Obliging selectmen to create a search committee for town manager
- Eliminating the prohibition against appointed or elected officials (excepting selectmen)
- Establishing a written process for removal of the town manager
- Defining process for absences of the town manager
- Authorizing the selectmen to determine powers of acting or temporary town managers
- Clarifying some responsibilities and powers of the town manager
- Requiring selectmen to approve and ratify collective bargaining

There have also been references to the Governance Committee's "ignoring" of the town-wide report issued by the Department of Revenue, in February of this year. In fact the Governance Committee all read and reviewed this report in its entirety. Our work on the Town Manager Act had been ongoing since the previous spring, and this was an issue of a possible solution to our problems being recommended after we had already pursued another. In fact the Governance Committee met early last fall with a representative of the Department Of Revenue, who did agree with us that a complete re-working the current Town Manger act was paramount. There are different legal ways for towns in the Commonwealth to effectuate and make changes to their government structure. (Note, in my opinion, the one preferred by the DOR is the one which seems to me to be easier on the state, but much more time and money consuming for the town.)

Another state resource provided detailed and valuable guidance and assistance. The Department of Housing and Community Development provided an early and later review of our draft amendments. One recommendation in particular stood out; that a town manager act should be clear but brief with specific details expanded in the by-laws.

It is this rationale, in addition to the fact that Town Manager Act is actually the driving governance document of the town that led us to turn our attention here first. We have spent the months since Town Meeting engaged in following the act up with the details we will recommend changing via by-laws; as well as delving deeper into Water/Sewer (no pun intended). This is a long, methodical process, but we have made much progress. To move to a charter commission as some have proposed would certainly extend the process by many years.

A last argument, that we should not change this document because "it is the people in power who are the problem, and not the process" would lead one to a rather defeatist vision. I believe that we should always try to improve, and this is an effort to give those who are willing to serve a better tool to do their jobs for us.

Christine Cunning is Chair of the Cohasset Governance Committee.

Goodbye Miss O

Incredibly warm, personable and caring, Chris, Heather, Matthew and Olivia have been a wonderful part of the fabric of the town.

JOHN MCSHEFFREY

Neighborhoods should come with a warning label. Allow me to explain.

The clock on the dashboard read 12:50. The open house wasn't for another 10 minutes, and as usual, we were early. It was fall 2006, and my wife and I were parked a few doors up from the home on Fairoaks Lane which we'd eventually buy. As the rain hit the windshield, we debated whether or not moving was the right idea or not. Then, as if a movie director had shouted "go," a young boy about the age of our oldest, ran down a driveway, across a few lawns and then out of sight. We watched him run and then looked at each other. End of discussion – we were on our way to Cohasset.

The quintessential neighborhood topped our list of qualities when looking for a new home, and to us, Fairoaks Lane is precisely that. I like to joke that Norman Rockwell is quietly perched somewhere, painting the goings on around the neighborhood. Beautifully trimmed homes with kids of all ages playing outside (or inside in front of the Xbox and computer), neighbors looking after each other, friendly waves as they come and go, block parties, food drives, busy bus stops, pick-up games of flashlight tag, 1.6 million kids each Halloween, and all the other nuisances anyone would want if they were seeking to live in the neighborhood. As much as the warmth of a family makes a house a home, the kindness of families makes a group of houses a neighborhood.

As we moved in, many families came to introduce themselves. As conversations eventually turned to kids (our son was going into first and our daughter Tyler was in preschool), we were inevitably asked, "have you met Olivia yet?" Over and over again we were told about an amazing 5-year-old girl who lived a few doors up from us and apparently had captivated the neighborhood. Eventually we had the pleasure of meeting young Olivia Peracchi, and without a doubt, she exceeded the hype.

Simply put, the Peracchi family is that family that you hope to move next to when you move into a new home. Incredibly warm, personable and caring, Chris, Heather, Matthew and Olivia have been a wonderful part of the fabric of the town. From assisting seniors, to preventing the spread of Triple E, to countless youth activities, you were bound to bump into a Peracchi. And from great parents come great kids.

At some point I began to call Olivia "Miss O." "Why hello, Ms. O., how are you today?" I would inquire when I'd see her (sometimes it was simply, "Yo, O"). Each time, she would smile. With her warm manners, and vivacious personality, Olivia is a true joy and has always been a welcome addition in our home. Over the years, the entertainment has been both precious and hysterical. Eventually, Olivia evolved into Liv and while I've attempted to adjust I still find myself saying, "Hello Ms. O."

For all the wonders of a neighborhood, there can also be a bit of unexpected heartbreak. As many of us know, career opportunities have a tendency to lead in directions never anticipated, and the past year, Chris' growth has taken him to Texas. His extended commute hasn't been easy for any of the Peracchis and it didn't take much to realize that six years of growing up a few doors down from Liv was coming to an end.

As it became apparent that the Peracchis would be relocating to Texas, our daughter Tyler was understandably saddened. With a bit of drama, if the world as she knew it was coming to an end, she wasn't going down without a fight.

With Texas stricken from her vocabulary ("that place," she'd say) Tyler was determined to keep the move from happening. Each week she'd ask if we had played the lottery because she was going to use the winnings to keep Liv in Cohasset. One morning she informed us that she was planning to take Mr. Peracchi to court; to sue him for inflicting excessive grief and sorrow. I'm sure I didn't make Heather and Chris's life any easier as I sat at dinner one evening and spurred Liv and Tyler on as they excitedly plotted a neighborhood wide bake sale and carnival that would raise enough money to keep the family here in the Bay State.

Alas their plans would not come to fruition and this weekend the Peracchi family will say goodbye to Cohasset and begin their new exciting journey. There have been a lot of sad faces around these parts, and I anticipate that the next few days will see its fair share of tears. With that said, I know Liv and her brother Matt will excel in their new adventure.

Miss O, I hope that in some way you know how much we have all loved seeing you grow up; seeing you at the door, playing out front, laughing at the kitchen counter, watching you all walk to school, listening as you'd plot the next move and of course always seeing you smile. I hope you know that you have brought us tremendous happiness and I know that going forth you are going to shine brighter than any other star in the Lone Star State.

I also know that over the next few days there will be a lot of girls and families around Cohasset with tears in their eyes as they will dearly miss their good friend Liv. But Liv, you need to know that we are all going to be here ready to welcome you back when you are ready to visit. You go get 'em girl! Show those folks in Texas what an amazing person you are and let them see what so many of us love and will miss.

So with deepest sincerity I wish best of luck for Chris, Heather, Matthew and most of all Olivia. Let's hope your new neighborhood appreciates you as much as we do here on Fairoaks.

Thanks for reading.

FOR THE RECORD

Frequently asked questions

GREGORY MATHIS

This is the first of a two-part series focusing on common questions our staff is asked.

The 10 questions I'll cover over the next two weeks fall into the frequently asked category. If you have questions that aren't addressed this week or next, please send them along and I'll either answer you personally or use your question in a follow-up column.

Why do I see dean's list/graduation listings from other colleges, but not my child's?

Students are typically asked to provide their college the name of their hometown newspaper, which is used to notify us once those lists are released. We get a ton of dean's list/graduation lists, especially this time of year. We're probably coming to the end with a new school year right around the corner, so if you haven't seen your child's name yet, and they graduated or received some type of academic award and you'd like them recognized, email your local editor with the information. We'd be happy to find a spot for it.

Can you do a story about our upcoming event?

Not all events rise to the level of a story, but there are other ways to get your information out to the community. You can send in a news release with all the relevant details – time, place, and description of the event – and we'll do our best to get that into the paper before the event. We also use an Alternative Story Format to preview upcoming events. So while we might not be able to do a story, there are plenty of opportunities to promote your event.

Can you do a story on our event after it has happened?

Similar answer to the last question. Some events will be covered through photography, but with a huge geography and limited resources there's no way to get to everything. We will find space in the newspaper and online for photos sent to us from community events. It's simple enough to contact your local editor before or after the event to make arrangements for getting the photos to him.

How can I buy a photo that appears in the newspaper?

Photographs that appear in the newspaper can be purchased by calling 1-866-746-8603 or by sending an email to photoreprints@wickedlocal.com. Many photos are also available for purchase online. If you see a photo with a "Purchase this photo" link next it, click on the link and it will take you to an order form with many ordering options.

Who writes the headlines for stories?

Many hands can touch a headline. Reporters are asked to put suggested headlines at the top of their stories. Editors may use or change the headline based on where the story is planning to run on the page. The page designer may have to modify or change the headline once it's finally placed on the page. While some may think a headline is too sensational or doesn't tell the story, the headline writer is trying to use the best words to get the reader into a story. As far as who is to blame if you don't like a headline, it's best to start with the local editor.

Hopefully this answers some questions about the newspaper and how decisions are made. There will be five others addressed next week, but if you have a question you'd like answered, please email me at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

LOCAL MUSIC

Playing to the crowd

Teen singer Emilee Lyons headlines local gig

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

With a shock of bright red hair, a few swipes of black eyeliner, and some punk-style guitar chops, singer/musician Emilee Lyons is a pint-sized powerhouse.

The Cohasset-based artist took the stage at Disney World in Orlando this past winter, placing in the theme park's American Idol competition. Now, Lyons is headlining her own local show each Friday night at the Fresh Feast.

And she's only 13 years old.

The soon-to-be Cohasset Middle School eighth grader isn't offended when people mistake her age. Upon realizing how young she is, most people's "jaws go to the floor," Lyons shared.

Her edgy style isn't the only thing to suggest a maturity that defies her age — Lyon's voice, a perfected blend of an alto, rocker rasp with the occasional twangy crack that almost suggests a yodel, is comparable to one of her favorite artists, Paramore's lead singer Hayley Williams, who also sports red hair and is Lyon's senior by over 10 years.

If you check out one of Lyons' shows, you'll likely hear a cover of "The Only Exception" or a similar song by Paramore. You're just as likely to hear "Under the Bridge" by the Red Hot Chili Peppers, one of Lyons' favorite songs to cover.

"I try to do stuff everybody knows and can sing along to," she said.

Lyons has been playing at the Fresh Feast each Friday night from 6 to 7 p.m. since June. She landed the gig after the Lyons family became frequent patrons of the Cohasset restaurant and struck up a friendship with the owner, Julia Lisinski.

Lisinski said she was happy to help Lyons get some performing experience and exposure.

"It's nice to support local artists and have something unique and different," the Fresh Feast owner said. "It's artsy, and I like it."

Lyons plays her hour-long set each Friday on the restaurant's porch.

"It's really fun," the singer said of the gig.

And while gaining performing experience each week has been helpful, Lyons already sounds like an old pro.

"I don't get nervous," she said.

Lyon's musical tastes also reveal that the teen is a bit of an old soul. She's just coming out of a 90's grunge stage, favoring Nirvana and the Foo Fighters. Now, she's into surf music, which has grunge influences but tends to be "poppier," said Lyons. She cites bands Best Coast and Wavves, whose songs she covers during her Friday night set.

Rock music has always been a love, said Lyons, who started taking guitar lessons when she was five years old.

"I always knew I was going to be into rock music, but everybody, when they're little, just listens to what's on the radio." This explains why the first songs she ever performed live – back when she was the ripe old age of 10 – were Cee Lo Green's "Forget You" and Lady Gaga's "Born This Way," Lyons explained.

In general, her musical tastes run the gamut, and for a versatile performer, that's a good thing. "It's good to get a base," said Lyons. "I try to stay away from what everyone else is doing."

She certainly is not another Taylor Swift, someone Lyon's mom, Jackie, joked that people usually compare every young female singer-songwriter to. For Lyons, comparisons to Williams are inevitable, but the Cohasset teen doesn't mind.

"I love Paramore — I've liked them the whole time," said Lyons. "My voice kind of developed to be like Hayley's."

Lyon's vocal chops have had some coaching from another redhead in the music biz — singer/songwriter Chrissi Poland, who has opened tours for Lady Gaga and the Scissor Sisters. Poland is based in New York but travels to the South Shore to visit her sister in Scituate.

Lyon's mom met Poland at Lido Juice in Cohasset and asked the singer about coaching her daughter; Poland agreed, and she and Lyons have weekly lessons over Skype, which Poland has conducted from as far away as L.A. or Japan. Poland, a yoga devotee, has taught Lyons to breathe properly and to develop her vocal tone.

Lyons enjoys having the chance to work with Poland. "She's a good coach," she said. "She's very nice and fun to be with and talk with."

Poland has also taught Lyons how to navigate a tricky business, said Jackie, who is grateful her daughter is "getting help from someone in the industry."

Perhaps most importantly of all, Lyons has learned through Poland that it's possible to do music for a living, which is the teen's "total goal."

Lyons hopes to achieve the same level of fame that her favorite indie bands have, many of whom aren't exactly world famous, but are just famous enough.

"I want to be 'underground,'" said Lyons, "so I can still go into places and only be recognized by three people, but still be able to make a living."

With her talent, drive, and maybe the bright red hair, the spunky singer is well on her way.

Emilee Lyons stands next to a poster of the Black Keys, which is decorated with some of the shows that she has been to over the years.

Q&A: Chrissi Poland

Singer/songwriter Chrissi Poland, who has toured with the Scissor Sisters and opened shows for the likes of Lady Gaga, took time out of her busy schedule to discuss being Emilee Lyons' vocal coach.

Q: How did you start working with Emilee?
A: "Em's mom and I got to chatting at [Cohasset juice bar] Lido, I told her what I did as a songwriter and performer, and she asked about possible lessons for Em!"

Q: How long have you been working together?
A: "We started working last winter, late November I believe. I could tell Em had a real passion and talent for music and was already developing her style as an artist."

Q: How has Emilee grown as an artist?
A: "Emmy has really grown in her range and power as a singer. I have a few methods I like to use with artists and performers to help them unlock their inner power, and she got it right away."

Q: What do you think of Emilee's voice?
A: "Em has a fantastic indie-rock voice... One minute she can be whispery and introspective, the next she can wail like [Foo Fighters lead singer] Dave Grohl. She is tapping more and more into her uniqueness; very important for a young artist."

Q: Emilee wants to do music for a living, like you do. Obviously it's possible, but what's the secret?
A: "You can make a living— the secret is being diverse. Know your craft, learn your instruments, learn the business, be willing to network, and create your brand. It's not easy and not for the weak of mind; it's tough. But it is possible...and that's what makes it great."

Q: What's your advice for young performers like Emilee?
A: "My advice is the same as I said, as well as being willing to sacrifice. It takes a great deal of time and focus. Living out a dream is most definitely tough, but it can happen. If you love it and can get paid for it, you are a success... anything more than that is icing on the cake. But it's all possible... drive and work ethic is the ultimate deciding factor. Good luck to all the newbies out there... Go for it!"

FRESH FEAST

Friday night is Mexican Night

Local singer/musician Emilee Lyons performs outside each Friday night at the Fresh Feast in Cohasset, a restaurant that offers up healthy fare featuring fresh, local ingredients.

Owner Julia Lisinski loves Mexican food, and each Friday night the menu reflects that.

"I traveled through Mexico and I love making" Mexican cuisine, she shared. Her special dishes, which can be made vegan/vegetarian or even gluten-free, feature made-from-scratch sauces. Lisinski added that it's helpful if those with allergies or other dietary concerns call ahead so the kitchen can have something ready.

The weekly Mexican fiesta is made all the more special with Lyons' music, said Lisinski.

"She comes in and does the music, which is nice," the Fresh Feast owner said. "It's nice to support local artists and to have something unique and different."

Check out Emilee Lyons each Friday at the Fresh Feast at 105 Ripley Road, Cohasset, from 6 to 7 p.m. For more information on the Fresh Feast, call 781-383-2255, email julia@thefreshfeast.com or visit www.thefreshfeast.com.

COMMENTARY

Proud of state of Sandy Beach

PATRICIA WHITE MURPHY

The Sandy Beach Association is very pleased with the beach in its current state, after this devastating winter. We have many people to thank for that. Carl Sestito and the DPW and Ross Rosano collaborated on the gathering of sand and did an amazing job of straining it, gathering and redistributing the huge amount of pebbles and then spreading everything to give us the beach back for our summer enjoyment.

Our staff had the daunting task of cleaning the bathhouse. The sand was so deep in there that the lifeguard chairs had to be dug out. The door facing the beach had been caved in by the blizzard. The water line along the concrete throughout is about 6 inches high, which has to have been standing water for some time, although the door was replaced right after the storm. Many things that normally survive the winter were destroyed. The electronics and valuables are removed and stored in a safe place. The water cooler, although wrapped in its original plastic and box, was stored on a shelf. It still needed replacement, as did the small refrigerator used by the staff. The Sewer Pump cover had been buried in sand, requiring a maintenance call, and a new part. The flagpole attachment needed replacement. There are too many other items to list, but obviously it has been a very expensive opening from the Maintenance standpoint.

Our staff had the daunting task of cleaning the bathhouse. The sand was so deep in there that the lifeguard chairs had to be dug out. The door facing the beach had been caved in by the blizzard.

We had ordered the additional sections of the handicapped ramp for around the bathhouse during the winter, when it would be discounted since it was in the off-season. That was also a significant budget item. It is certainly more user friendly for those who require it, as well as more attractive and easier to install remove, and store. We had hoped that would be our biggest expense item this year.

Additional trash cans have become necessary with the recurrent heat waves.

Many patrons have asked if we could install a foot shower to make it easier to rinse off their little ones before heading home. Some have even offered to fundraise for this specific purpose. In spite of the expensive start to the season, we decided to have the foot shower installed. We are counting on those "fundraisers" in advance. We ask that any donations planned for that purpose still be sent to Sandy Beach, P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Although there has been a generous response to our ONE fundraiser, our letter each year, we ask that anyone who has not yet mailed a check will consider doing so now. As always, we thank those of you who are such faithful supporters. We could not operate the beach without you. We hope you are all enjoying our incredible treasure, Sandy Beach.

GROUND LEVEL

Two coffeehouse events in August

Cohasset's Ground Level Coffeehouse is hosting two nights of good music, good community, and really good coffee in August at Beechwood Congregational, 51 Church Street.

Aug. 2: Young Adult Coffeehouse

The first event on Friday, August 2, is the open mic, concert, and jam session for tweens, teens and young adults—open to junior high students through twenty-somethings.

See you in the Beechwood basement from 7 to 10 p.m. for open mic, coffee, art, friendship, and magic (yes, a magician is slated to perform).

The regularly programmed first-Friday coffeehouse will feature Boston's Leo Lydon. Two weeks after the event, Lydon will be hitting the road on a trans-American bike voyage to get his music on the map, where it deserves to be. As always, Ground Level entry, coffee, and snacks are on a suggested-donation basis, but if you can spare an extra dollar, it would help fuel this guy's epic dream!

Interested in open mic? You don't have to sing – you can tell a story or read a poem, you could do a magic trick, you could speed paint, or anything else creative – pitch your idea to ground_level@ymail.com. Email to sign up for the open mic and be prepared to do a sound check at 6:30 the night of the event.

Not ready to take the stage alone? Bring your instrument and stick around till about 9:45 to close out the night with an easy, all-inclusive jam session.

Aug. 9: Ground Level for Grown-Ups

If your driver's license is oriented in the "landscape" rather than the "portrait" direction, then this is the event for you! Slightly more sophisticated and slightly less chaotic than our typical hang/jam/eat sugar teens-and-twenties nights, the evening of August 9 is dedicated to all the parents, friends and neighbors who are jealous of the cool new café their kids are hanging out at these days.

As always, the music, art, and coffee-drinking fun starts at 7 p.m. and winds down at 10.

For more information, call 781-383-0808, email Ground_Level@ymail.com, or "like" Ground Level on Facebook: www.facebook.com/groundlevelcohasset.

ConComm approves senior center permit

On July 18, the Conservation Commission unanimously approved a permit under the Mass. Wetlands Protection Act (WPA) for the new Cohasset Senior Center, to be located at 91 Sohier Street.

The Con Com also approved the storm water management plan for the project. The board will issue conditions for work under the WPA and the construction will be performed under those conditions.

The senior center project has been in the works for nearly five years and is in the final design stages. Cohasset's Social Service League is fundraising and building the new facility to house the town's elder affairs department and programs.

Three Town Hall designs under review

Members of Cohasset's Town Hall Restoration Committee gave an update on the pending project to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night. The committee is chaired by David Farrag, a Conservation Commissioner who served on a similar committee that convened five years ago to address the renovation and rehabilitation of the building.

Farrag, along with the town's Director of Project Management and Planning, Brian Joyce, provided the selectmen with a report that included some history on Town Hall, the background of the renovation project, and what the next steps for the project are.

The town hired an architect to come up with design schemes for a renovated Town Hall, and the committee is in the process of evaluating three different schemes. They plan to make a recommendation to the selectmen sometime this fall.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that there could be discussions on selling the Town Hall building complex and building a new hall elsewhere, or even demolishing the current structure and building anew; however, this is not the scope of the restoration committee, he said.

Look for more on this issue in upcoming editions of the Mariner.

POPPIN' OFF

New football format a good start

Playoffs more accessible to everyone now

The Cohasset football team will face new challenges, but may have a better chance at playoffs with the new alignment that begins this year. FILE PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Since I have been covering football in Mass., I have noticed that the season can be unforgiving.

Every team has a goal of winning their league and making the playoffs.

With that in mind, the goal sounds easier than it is.

Depending on the league, one game can ruin a season.

Lose a league game early in the year, and you might as well forget about playoffs.

I've seen it happen to East Bridgewater, Cohasset, Scituate and Hingham.

Everything can come down to one game.

It has happened in the South Shore League a couple of times.

This year there will be many changes in the format, changes that will allow more teams to compete for a Super Bowl championship.

To start, the top two teams in each league get automatic playoff invitations, and they will play teams in newly aligned divisions based on attendance.

Cohasset will play in Div. 6 South. They will be joined by Mashpee, Diman, Southeastern, Bristol-Plymouth, Tri-County, Blue Hills, Cape Cod Tech, South Shore, Upper Cape, Old Colony, Carver, Nantucket, Millis, West Bridgewater, Hull, Monomoy, Holbrook, Bishop Connolly, and Pope John Paul

On the North side of the Division, teams include Matignon, Pope John, Chelsea, Charlestown, Latin Academy, Minuteman, O'Bryant, Boston English, Lynn Tech, West Roxbury, Burke, North Shore, Dorch-

Cure for Cole

August tournament still looking for teams

By Mark Ducharme

Cole Pasqualucci, then 13, is surrounded by his friends as they watch the first game of the wiffle ball tournament to benefit Cole and his fight against F.S.G.S. STAFF FILE PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

The philosophy that Jamie Murray has for his Cure for Cole Wiffle Ball Tournament is simple.

If you can swing a bat, catch the ball and throw it you will have fun playing wiffle ball all day for a good cause.

Murray, who was a goalie at Scituate High School is going into his sophomore year at Babson College, and is looking to expand his annual Cure for Cole Tournament fundraiser as it heads into its fourth year.

The tournament has been a big, if unexpected success.

"The first year we had 27 teams," said Murray. "It went up to 40 teams the next year and we had 40 teams in the tournament last year."

The tournament, which raises funds for Murray's neighbor Cole Pasqualucci, who has a rare kidney disease called focal segmental glomerulosclerosis, is day of fun and enjoyment playing wiffle ball.

Murray wants to expand from the 40 teams that have competed in each of the last two years.

The tournament this year is slated for Aug. 10th and will start at 9 a.m.. and go through to about 7 p.m.

The price is $100 for each 3-5 person team that will compete. "It is pretty simple day of wiffle ball," said Murray. "It is a way to come together and support a good cause. I like playing wiffle ball and it is a lot of fun. There is no limit to the Team Mizuno Cardinals crowned New England champs

The Team Mizuno USA 14U Cardinal team recently won the New England Elite Baseball Division II championship.

The team went 30-5 (9-1 in their division) during the regular season, scoring 365 runs and a division title. The team carried that momentum into the playoffs and survived a loss in the first game of the playoffs, but then bounced back to win four straight games in the tough summer heat to capture the title. Congratulations to the players, coaches, and parents on this unforgettable season!

The team featured Jack Rega (Scituate), Owen Leary (Abington), Colin May (Scituate), Patrick Santorella (Scituate), Liam O'Connell (Cohasset), Jack Murray (Sandwich), Zach Simpson (Pembroke), Brett Sullivan (Hanover), Eamonn Duffy (Duxbury, and formerly of Norwell), Xander Schubert (Cohasset), Danny Smith (Marshfield), and Jared Pellegrino (Marshfield).

TALKING GOLF

In golf, youth isn't wasted on the young

PAUL HARBER

Brendan Ridge took up the game two years ago and already has a resume to be proud of. DAVID COLT PHOTO COURTESY OF THE MASSACHUSETTS GOLF ASSOCIATION

The poet was out of bounds when he wrote that youth is wasted on the young.

It's where it belongs, where you experience everything for the first time.

There is nothing better than a youngster taking up the game of golf and enjoying the thrills of that first par, that first birdie and the first time you hit that pure shot, the driving force why we play the game.

While those of us who took up the game later in life as a recreational activity, a youngster's future is unlimited. Just as the Little Leaguer dreams of playing at Fenway Park, the junior golfer dreams of someday playing in the U.S. Open.

He might have trouble reaching the fairway when he begins the game, but with the right instruction, he could be booming 300-yard drives shortly thereafter.

Progress comes quickly for juniors.

Take the case of Brendan Ridge of Hanover.

Two years ago Ridge and one of his neighborhood friends decided to give the game a whirl. Now, it's the only game Ridge wants to play.

He has progressed so quickly; there is no telling how good he will be.

Ridge earned a berth in the State Amateur at a qualifier held at Plymouth Country Club in June.

The sophomore-to-be at Boston College High School, who turned 15 in March, was the youngest competitor in the Massachusetts State Amateur at Longmeadow CC.

"I didn't realize how big of a deal it was until a few days before," said Ridge. "It wasn't until I started talking to some family members and seeing some of the people in the field."

Most of his opponents were playing the game long before Ridge was born and probably have clubs that are older than Ridge.

Nonetheless, the Hanover youngster wasn't happy with his performances.

Ridge carded an 83 the first day, an 81 the second day and didn't qualify for match play.

Ridge said he felt he could have done better.

That's a great feeling, being young and talented and seeing no limitations or speed limits on the highway of life.

Yes, Ridge is better than an 83 and an 81 and you can bet there will come a day when he returns to the State Amateur and advances to match play. That day is not far off.

You learn more from your losses than you do from your victories and hopefully he'll take that education back home from Longmeadow and use it this week at the US Amateur qualifier at Crestview Country Club in Agawam or the State Junior Championship at the Essex County Club in Manchester-By-The-Sea.

In addition to qualifying for two MGA Championships, Ridge came just one stroke shy of qualifying for the US Junior Amateur Championship. He carded a two-round score of 7-over par 147 at Thorny Lea.

If Ridge plays as he did in the State Junior qualifying tournament at his home course, the Harmon Club in Rockland, he'll do well. He earned medalist honors carding a 1-under 69.

It's a matter of adjustment.

He has good bloodlines.

His uncles, Ed and Tom Riordan of Milton-Hoosic are golfers. And his aunt and uncle, Lorraine and Larry Feeney of Thorny Lea GC, are big hitters, too.

Although his parents are not golfers, they certainly are people to look up to, admire and emulate. His father is a Boston Police Officer and he was at the Boston Marathon bombings, 100 feet from one of the bombs that exploded. He was a first responder and attended to many of the wounded.

He was honored at Fenway Park on July 4 along with many other first responders and had his picture with Wally displayed on the Jumbotron.

They have supported their son's desire to play golf.

"I'd like a career in golf someday," said young Ridge.

Oh, to be young. Those who are young and talented have no boundaries.

He really doesn't know how good he can become.

For instance, last fall, as an entering 14-year-old freshman at BC High, he thought he would go out for golf.

Golf has a strong history at BC High. In fact, three BC High alums were in the field at the State Am last week: former champion Ryan Riley (Class of '99), Rick Santili ('83) and this year's finalist Ian Thomble ('09).

"I was figuring I'd make the junior varsity team," he said. "But I played a couple of good rounds. And I kept playing good rounds and they put me on the varsity."

It was a tough team to make. BC High was good enough to finish second in the Massachusetts Div. I State Championship last fall.

And he still has three more years at BC High, then college and then who knows what.

Maybe, someday, he'll get the opportunity to play in the Masters.

GOLF NOTEBOOK

Earning US Amateur berth is a cause for celebration

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

It has been a busy summer vacation for Rockland High School junior-to-be Megan Khang. FILE PHOTOS

Doug Clapp, left, lost to Mike Calef in the 2012 State Amateur at Tedesco, but still came out to caddie for his friend in the final round match.

John Gratton of Dedham Country & Polo Club can celebrate. He has made it to the US Amateur, which will be played Aug. 12-18 at The Country Club in Brookline.

Gratton fashioned a 2-over 74 to earn medalist honors at Weston Golf Club last week.

This week, if there is one golfer you might want to root for to qualify, it's Andy Drohen who is playing the best golf of his career, which is saying a lot.

He qualified for last week's US Amateur Public Links Championship in Lorton, Va., and advanced to match play.

Problem was he ran into a buzz saw named Austi Smotherman, a 19-year-old standout from Southern Methodist. Drohen lost, 6 and 4.

But he didn't play poorly.

Drohen shot even par on the front nine, but was down 2 at the turn. Then Smotherman strung four birdies together on the back nine and it was good-bye Andy.

Drohen holds a unique honor in Massachusetts golf circles. He made Massachusetts Golf Association history last summer when he won the MGA's Amateur Public Links Championship, becoming the first golfer to win all four major non-senior amateur MGA Championships.

Springfield golf writer Russ Held called it the "Andy Slam."

Besides the State Publinks, Drohen won the State Amateur, Mid-Amateur and Four-Ball (with his brother, Bill).

Drohen and his brothers (besides Bill, who lives in Easton) there is Jon and Mike, all great golfers, are all trying for the US Amateur this week.

Andy Drohen, 44, has dropped 25 pounds in an effort to get in shape for walking 36 holes.

This year's U.S. Amateur site holds special significance for Drohen. He won his first and only Massachusetts Golf Association Amateur Championship at TCC 10 years ago. There are other connections that drive Drohen's pursuit of a spot in the field.

While a student at Northeastern – on a Francis Ouimet Scholarship – he caddied at The Country Club.

"My brothers and I actually couldn't have graduated and got through college without the scholarship," Drohen told Andrew Blair, the director of communications for the Virginia State Golf Association.

"The whole summer has been spent gearing up for the US Amateur," said Drohen, who is also battling a torn meniscus. "The only good thing about going out early is I get some rest from the heat. I want to qualify just to be there, experience the whole thing and who knows what's going to happen?"

While qualifying for the U.S. Amateur remains Drohen's top priority for the time being, his long-term goal is to play in the Masters Tournament.

It's a day For Dolph

Long-time starter Dolph Aimola has not been seen much at South Shore Country Club this summer. He's getting up there in years, deep into his back nine. Sure, he'll tell you, "I'm old enough to know and young enough to learn," and denies the rumor he was there when Wayne Stiles laid out the Hingham golf course in the 1920s. But the long-time South Shore CC favorite was there with Roger Barry and Phil Farina & Co., when they started the Southeast Amateur in 1960 when wonderful guys like Fordie Pitts, Bill Foley, Mel Cowe and Allan Doyle were crowned champions. Aimola was there in when they old South Shore Two-Ball was a major event. But when the old South Shore Country Club went dark in the 1980s, the old Two-Ball died. When the town took the land by eminent dominate and restored the golf course, it was only a few years ago when Aimola revived the tournament, Well, on Aug. 3-4 South Shore Country Club is holding the Dolph Aimola South Shore Country Club Four-Ball tournament. This tournament will include a men's, a women's and a senior flight. SSCC members and non-membership participation will include a continental breakfast, prizes, green fees, range balls and optional $10 skins pool. The fee is $50 for SSCC member and $75 non-member per player. All proceeds will go to the Hingham Fourth of July Parade Fund. For more information on the tournament, contact Joe Keefe, PGA professional, at jkgolfpro@pga.com...Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea shot an even-par 213 (67-69-77) to finish tied for sixth place in the New England Amateur Championship at Green Mountain National GC in Killington, Vt., last week...Alison Paik of Sharon and playing partner Julia Natale captured first place in the junior-junior division of the WGAM Mowatt tournament at Olde Scotland Links in Bridgewater...In the junior division, Cora Bernier of Taunton and Anna Haynes were second with a 74...At the WGAM Mother-Daughter/Member-Junior tournament held at Highfields GC in Grafton, Pamela and Erin Kiley of Braintree Municipal GC captured first place in Div. 3. Aimee and Karen Dubois of Black Rock CC in Hingham took low net.

Khang in Hoosierland

Keep an eye on Fort Wayne, Ind., this week. Rockland's Megan Khang is at Sycamore Hills Golf Club in Hoosierland, vying for the US Girls Junior Amateur Championship. And she is a legitimate contender to win the darn thing. The precocious 15-year-old Rockland High School junior-to-be, who is ranked by Golf Week weekly magazine among the top 15 girls in the US, is a veteran of this event. She has played in it three times and has qualified for match up. Before heading to Indiana, Khang captured medalist honors in an international field at the US Women's Amateur sectional qualifying tournament at Oak Hill Country Club in Fitchburg. Khang fashioned a 3-under 68. Indonesian Tatiana Wijaya and Mexican Maria Fassi tied for second with even par 72s and qualified for the Aug. 5-11 US Women's Amateur at the Country Club of Charleston in South Carolina.

Clapp leads POY race

Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich Country Club in Plymouth solidified his hold on the point parade for the Massachusetts Golf Association's Player of the Year honors. His finish at the State Amateur (quarterfinals, before being ousted by Brockton's Matt Parziale, 3-2) gives Clapp 538 points. State Amateur champion Mike Calef is second with 350 and Thorny Lea's John Hadges has 325. There are still points to be won. There is this week's Ouimet Memorial tournament, the State Mid-Amateur at Marshfield CC in September, and, of course, the Southeast Amateur in October. Both Hadges and Clapp are eligible for all three tournaments. Both are in the field today at Wollaston GC in Milton when they play the first round of the Ouimet. Both are exempt into the State Amateur and both are previous champions of the Southeast Amateur, with Hadges winning more titles (nine) than anyone in tournament history and Clapp winning in 2011, setting the record for the lowest score. It should be quite a race to the finish . . . Congratulations to Julie Stanton, winner of Scituate Country Club's Grandmother Tournament. Stanton is a two-time champion. Julie Chapman won low putts...Keira Joshi of MGA Links at Matampat a participant of The First Tee of Massachusetts, has advanced to regional qualifying for the 2013 Drive, Chip & Putt Championship at Pinehills Golf Club in Plymouth next month. She finished first in her age division (7-9 years old) at Granite Links Golf Club. "The event was a lot of fun and I am very happy to have won my division," said Joshi. "I get to play a lot of golf with my family and we all enjoy it."

THIS WEEK'S SIGNATURE HOLE

The 15th Hole at Atlantic Country Club Plymouth, MA

Atlantic COUNTRY CLUB

PAR 4 HCP 12 — 15 — YDS 373 350 330 250

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

The top two teams in each league will qualify, and more can make it.

Teams will play their complete league (or division) schedules in the first seven weeks. Playoff qualifiers could play up to five playoff games, including Super Bowls. In Weeks 8-10 a committee will set schedules for non-playoff teams and for playoff losers that drop back into regular-season play.

If a team doesn't make the playoffs, they'll be placed in a Sectional pool for the next four games.

Cohasset will open the regular season September 6 with a game against Norwell. The'll then have a week off, followed by a trip to Rockland. September 27 is a strange game, with the Skippers hosting Thansgiving day opponent, Hull.

"Big changes," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We play Hull twice home on 9/27 and then at hull on Thanksgiving."

Goals however, have not changed, and Afanasiw feels the new rules can be helpful

Overall, I think the format does benefit us, in that when we get to the playoff part of the schedule, if we are fortunate enough to qualify, then we will be pitted versus schools of our size, unlike years past, when we'd be up against Holliston or Westwood both teams almost Three times our size...so that should help a bit, but we have to get there first.

amount of teams. Central Field is huge. We would like to have things set the week before the tournament (Aug. 3)."

The tournament will have music as well.

Teams can be from anywhere. A friend of Murray's from Connecticut brought a team with a player from Illinois.

There have been teams put together by Murray's father and sister as well as other people from the South Shore.

"The youngest player was 10 and 55 was the oldest," Murray said. "I thought the tournament was something that I could do to help out Cole.

"I pitched it to friends a few years ago and they did not think it would work. It was the Summer after my senior year and I was not doing much during the summer because I was playing junior hockey. We put it together and everyone loved it. Everyone can play if they swing a bat, throw a ball and catch it. It is a day of fun."

It has been a busy summer for Murray.

He just concluded a Road Hockey tournament for the Boston Marathon Fund on July 13th.

"I was in charge of some things such as the lights," said Murray. "A friend of mine Luke Heller put the other part of the tournament together. We raised the fund for the Boston Marathon Fund.

"I was 10 and there was a road hockey tournament in 1998 that was sponsored by Good Sports and lasted for four years. There has not been a road hockey tournament in 12 years."

Murray is looking for teams to compete in the Cole Tournament. He wants people to come out and have fun playing a great game and giving to a good cause in the process.

For more information, contact Murray, 617-921-3644 and visit the tournament website http://cureforcolewiffleball.yolasite.com/

'Zombie Prom'

On stage tonight through Sunday

Cohasset Dramatic Club presents its 10th Summer Musical Theater Workshop production for young adults this weekend, "Zombie Prom." This "ghoul" rock 'n roll off-Broadway musical is set in the atomic 1950s at Enrico Fermi High, where the law is laid down by a zany, tyrannical principal, Miss Strict. Pretty senior, Toffee, has fallen for the class bad boy. So, when family pressure forces her to end the romance, he charges off to a nuclear waste dump. He returns glowing and determined to claim Toffee's heart. He still wants to graduate, but most of all he wants to take Toffee to the prom – action ensues and history comes to his rescue all set to an original '50s style rockin' score.

Performance dates for "Zombie Prom" will take place at 7:30 p.m., on Thursday, July 25, Friday, July 26, and Saturday, July 27, and 2 p.m., Sunday, July 28. General admission tickets are $15 and are available by reservation at 617-922-0280 or one hour prior to each performance at the door. All performances will takes place at the air-conditioned Cohasset Town Hall Theater. For more information, email CDC at info@cohassetdramaticclub.org or call 617-922-0280.

Tri-ing hard for Jett

Raising funds to fight disease

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

This Sunday, a team of local triathletes will use the strength of their muscles to help find a cure for Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy, a devastating disease which robs young boys of their muscle strength – and ultimately takes their lives much too soon.

Though few have ever heard of Duchenne, it is now a worldwide presence thanks to Jett McSherry's mom Christine, who set out on her own "endurance" event to find a cure for this rare disease. It is literally a race against time for these patients and their families. Duchenne is the most common fatal genetic disorder diagnosed in childhood. Those who suffer from it are most often wheelchair bound by age 12 and do not live to see their 20th birthday.

Cohasset resident Laura DeSisto founded the "Tri for Jett" triathlon team last year to compete in the Marshfield Duxbury Tri (formerly Marsh Madness Triathlon) and to raise funds for the Jett Foundation.

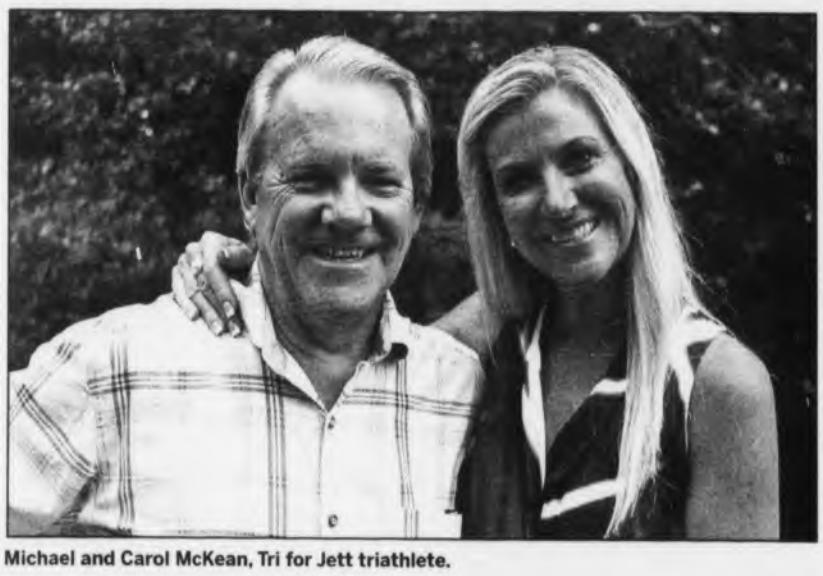
"My dear friend Christine is in the fight of her life to save her son and I have joined her cause," says DeSisto. "Over the past 12 months, Christine has met with the FDA four times and been to Parliament twice to advocate for accelerated approval for the first drug to show any effectiveness in slowing the disease. I founded the Tri4Jett triathlon team last year to help fund this fight."

The McSherrys, Christine and her husband Stephen, created the Jett Foundation in 2001 after receiving the devastating news that their then 5-year-old son Jett had this fatal, life-limiting form of muscular dystrophy.

The 2013 Tri for Jett Team of 36 is double the amount of participants from last year's inaugural fundraiser due to DeSisto's tremendous efforts. The Tri For Jett consists of nine teams and several individual consisting mostly of Cohasset and Hingham residents. Team members include: Mark Maggi, Sam Morse, and James Hughes; Terry Haskins, Doug Harvey and Carl Manoogian; Andrea Buffum, Patrice Vogelman, and Ellen Hanson; Laura DeSisto, Todd DeSisto, and Geoff Filbey; Greg Weisman, Stephen Oronte, and Tim Kaijala; April Durant, Jack Keniley, and Kevin Connolly; Cathy Sears, Mona Pohl, and Kim Albanese; Dr. Richard Eisen, Nate Morse, and Jen Chamberlain; and Linda Fechter, Vinna Dunn and Michelle Millerd. Individual Triathletes include: Steven Pohl, Liz Oddleifson, Stephanie Middleton, Katie Cutler, Carol McKean, Patty Smith, Molly Frame, Gigi Meehan, and Sally Meehan.

Corporate sponsors include Axeda Corporation, Carol McKean Events, Frank Corrado Custom Masonry, EBI Consulting, the Center for Children with Special Needs of Massachusetts, Not Your Average Joe's of Norwell, South Shore Bank, Oceanside Buiders, Cbay, Gourmet Caterers, Leslie Smith/Design Decisions, Deborah Flanagan/Edward Jones, Pilgrim Bank and The Ink Spot.

"Time is of the essence for my son and all these young boys," says McSherry. Significant financial support for the research is critical. We are so appreciative of team Tri for Jett and all their sponsors."



By channeling her determination through the Jett Foundation, what McSherry has been able to accomplish in little more than a decade is nothing short of remarkable. Just this past Wednesday, as a direct result of McSherry's efforts, the FDA agreed to allow the submission of a New Drug Application for the first safe and effective drug (Eteplirsen) for Duchenne MD.

To those who know Christine well, this comes as no surprise. "Her ability to bring people together to do whatever it takes, for as long as it takes, is absolutely contagious," says DeSisto. "You meet Christine and hear Jett's story and that's it. You're not asking what you can do, you're just saying I'm in, and then you go from there."

COHASSET REC CONCERT SERIES

Don't miss the summertime favorite "Souled Out" next Thursday on the common. All Rec concerts begin at 6 p.m. on Cohasset Common and end at approximately 7:45 p.m. COURTESY PHOTO

'Souled Out' performs Aug. 1

The Cohasset Recreation Concert Series Summer 2013 is underway and next up is a summertime favorite, "Souled Out," sponsored by the McMorris Family. Souled Out is a musical ensemble that specializes in Motown and Soul sounds. Featuring a three-piece vocal section, the group weaves its way through the Motown and 70's soul eras with choreographed dance routines and great music. Souled Out is fun to watch, great to listen to and inspires the audience to get up on their feet!

The entire series, which also included performances by the Rusty Skippers and Trooper Dan Clark, is funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. This program is also supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency that is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

- August 1: Souled Out-sponsored by the McMorris Family
- August 8: Matt Browne
- August 15: Mark and Wendy
- August 22: New City Cowboys

All concerts begin at 6 p.m. on Cohasset Common and end at approximately 7:45 p.m.

Make an evening of it. Concerts are held after the Cohasset Farmer's Market. All performances are free, open to the public and handicap accessible. Bring a blanket or folding chairs. It's a great time for the whole family. Visit: cohassetrec.com

Peaches is a people cat!

PAULA J. FATERSIK

Peaches is a people cat and loves to spend time with you and follow you around. COURTESY PHOTO

He's the cat's meow. Really! Peaches is definitely one of a kind. Tall, handsome, with beautiful marmalade shades accented by white fur, this year-and-half-year-old boy is a real pal with a fabulous personality. Peaches is a people cat and loves to spend time with you and follow you around. He, of course, is looking for attention and playtime and will reward you with love and loyalty.

Since coming to the shelter, Peaches has made a friend of everyone here in a matter of weeks. It is hard to believe that he lost his family and home. This is a cat who was loved and he is looking for space in a new forever home to roll and run and play again. When you meet Peaches, he may be curled up on a big pillow. Then begins the rolling over game. He will roll over and over until he slides right off his pillow out of sheer joy to be in your company and feel your loving pat of his head and neck. You can't help but chuckle as he regroups in typical cat fashion. You never saw that clumsy, silly little mistake at all. After all, he is dignified and classy.

And did you need to have a chat? Well, Peaches can carry on a little conversation with you right from the start. He will meet you at the door, follow you around and speak on the needs and wants he might have at that moment. Or he may sit and listen to your tale of the day. A head pat, neck rub, some serious complimenting and loving attention will win his heart. It's that easy.

To learn more about this handsome and funny young boy please call Judy at 781-534-4902. Peaches is waiting to meet you so please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information on our special cats and events.

A very special thank you and shout out to Mary Henricksen's second grade class at the Jacobs Elementary

And did you need to have a chat? Well, Peaches can carry on a little conversation with you right from the start.

School in Hull! This spring, the students collected money and chose to help the cats and kittens at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue. All of the proceeds were used to buy litter, kitten and cat food for the special felines who are waiting for new forever homes. We appreciate your generosity and are so happy that you chose us!

Our volunteers are working very hard keeping the shelter running and we are always happy to see new people who are cat lovers and want to join us in the care of the feline population we serve. We have special cases and cats who require a lot of tender loving care as they may be recovering from injury or abuse, was well as some who are just scared and need reassurance and gentle attention. Please call Sue at 617-733-2986 for more information on volunteering with HSAR.

Thank you to those who continue to help us with bottle and can donations. The outpouring of donations to our bins is helping to pay rent and other bills here at the shelter. You make a big difference and we appreciate it. Sorting and transporting is a tough job and we are thankful to the volunteers who continue to give of their time and effort. It hasn't been easy with the recent heat waves but it is getting done and we are grateful.

To all of our adopters, thank you for choosing our kittens and cats and providing them with caring and loving homes. Every cat here at the shelter is special and has a story to tell. Our goal is to find the best forever home for each and every one. Love, attention and patience provides them the chance for happy, content and peaceful lives. The joy and companionship they can bring is worth every minute spent.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

ADVERTORIAL

Massasoit students gain transfer options

It is no secret that the availability for students to transfer to baccalaureate institutions is an important part of the mission of community colleges.

Transfer programs at Massasoit Community College have seen significant growth in the past several years, with almost all outpacing the college's growth in any particular year. Transfer programs now account for more than two-fifths (42 percent) of the college's total enrollment, compared to only about 20 percent just a few years ago. The College's Liberal Arts Transfer-Science program is one of the fastest growing programs, with a 35 percent increase over last year; and more than five times as many students as it had just four years ago.

The statewide Massachusetts MassTransfer program is a fundamental piece to transfer opportunities for thousands of students each year. This program is designed to facilitate transfer within the public higher education system in the Commonwealth. Students enrolled in designated associate degree programs who plan to transfer to the University of Massachusetts or one of the Massachusetts state universities who meet the criteria receive the benefits of full transfer and applicability (many times entering the four-year institution as a rising junior) and are guaranteed admission and a tuition discount.

Jochebed Miller, left, will transfer to Northeastern University this fall and Colleen Newell, right, will transfer to the University of Massachusetts-Boston. COURTESY PHOTO/MASSASOIT COMMUNITY COLLEGE

Massasoit Community College also provides many articulation and transfer agreements with private institutions as well as specialized transfer programs and creative reverse transfer opportunities.

Last fall, 38 colleges and universities from all over the New England region visited the Massasoit Community College's Brockton Campus for a 3½ hour Transfer Fair which was attended by approximately 500 students. This event has been held on the Brockton Campus each fall for more than 25 years and is hosted by the Advisement and Counseling Center. Forty percent of Massasoit's graduates transfer within one year of graduating and nearly one-third of students transfer even before they graduate.

Community college students considering transferring to a four-year institution are generally very attractive to campus recruiters because of their proven commitment to higher education and ability to achieve positive results in college level work. The Transfer Fair provides current Massasoit Community College students the opportunity to look at transfer options and to speak one on one with admissions representatives. Part of the mission of Massachusetts' 15 community colleges is to offer open access to high-quality, affordable academic programs, including associate degree and certificate programs, and to also offer academic preparation for transfer to four-year institutions, career preparation for entry into high demand occupational fields, developmental coursework and lifelong learning opportunities.

The Advising and Counseling Center coordinates a variety of recruitment events and on-the-spot admissions throughout the year on each of Massasoit's campuses which are designed to enlighten current students to the educational possibilities that lie ahead. This fall, three Massasoit students transferred to Wellesley College, two as Davis Scholars and one as the recipient of the prestigious Jack Kent Cooke award. The number of students transferring to four-year institutions is steadily increasing. "We are seeing more and more of our student getting into prestigious colleges and universities based on their strong academic record at Massasoit Community College," Counselor Chris Moran said.

IS IT RIGHT FOR YOU?

Community college myths, facts you should consider

By Jessica Assimon, NextStepU.com

Are you considering pursuing an associate degree after high school? Don't let others' stereotypes hold you back. Start searching for the best two-year program for you.

MYTH: Students attend community college because they can't get into a four-year university.

TRUTH: "This is true for some students; it is no longer true for the majority of students," says Tom Proietti, professor of communications at New York's Monroe Community College (monroecc.edu). The quality of education at two-year schools can be impressive, and Proietti says many are becoming "first-choice institutions."

If you don't want to attend a four-year college right out of high school, a community college is a good place to discover what you want to do.

Community colleges offer an affordable, high-quality and sensible option for many students. COURTESY PHOTO

"When starting off college, I think most kids are scared, unsure and confused as to what they exactly want to do with their entire life," says Krista Nichiporuk, who earned an associate degree in 2006. "I just feel that taking the route of a community college can help college students really decide on what they will pursue without spending and wasting away money."

Proietti adds, "Community colleges are affordable, sensible, flexible and place a great deal of emphasis on good teaching. And you won't leave college with $75K in loans."

MYTH: The education and/or instructors are not high-quality because community colleges are cheaper than four-year schools.

TRUTH: Proietti calls this myth "absolute garbage."

"Our central focus is teaching. It is what we get ranked, evaluated and promoted on," he says.

MYTH: I can't get a job with an associate degree.

TRUTH: "The main focus to getting a job is gaining experience, not necessarily the degree you have," Nichiporuk says. "It's not what you know, it's who you know."

Some community colleges offer a "2+2" program, which ensures that your credits count toward transferring to specific colleges.

MYTH: Four-year schools won't accept my credits if I transfer.

TRUTH: When you decide that you want to transfer to a four-year college, meet with a transfer counselor at your community college to make sure the bachelor's program will accept your completed credits.

Some community colleges offer a "2+2" program, which ensures that your credits count toward transferring to specific colleges.

MYTH: I have to live at home if I attend a community college.

TRUTH: Whereas this may have been the case in the past, it does not have to be the case anymore.

Many community colleges offer recently built dorms on campus. Renting an apartment with friends is another way out of the house.

BRIEFLY

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's

The 89th annual Summer Recital Series continues at 6 p.m. each Sunday until Aug. 18.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America.

July 28 – Gerard deWaardt, Rotterdam, Netherlands.

Aug. 4 – Gordon Slater, Nepean, Ontario, Canada.

Aug. 11 – Philippe Beullens, Leuven, Belgium.

Aug. 18 – Lee Leach, Norwood.

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Tim Reynolds of Hull in loving memory of his brother, Richard Tyler Reynolds; and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council.

Yoga on the Farm

Join yoga instructor and certified holistic health coach Linda Storm for outdoor yoga at Holly Hill Farm Saturday mornings from 8 to 9 a.m. through Aug. 31. Bring a mat and enjoy an hour of gentle Vinyasa style yoga, moving with the breath. All levels are welcome. There is an indoor space available if the weather does not permit outdoor yoga. Fee is $12 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $15 for non-members. Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road. For information visit: hollyhillfarm.org.

JUNIOR MARSH MONITORS

Junior Marsh Monitors Ava Fusco, Nathan Arnold, Ben Bernsee, Maeve Humphrey, Quentin Humphrey and Keith Hendrickson met with team leaders Dom Brennan and Gabe Goodman at CSCR headquarters on Cohasset Harbor to review their plan for the day.

Michael O'Connell, Dom Brennan, Quentin Humphrey, Maeve, Humphrey, Jack Fechter and Ben Healey spent their last day as Junior Marsh Monitors exploring Cohasset's inner harbor and marshes by kayak.

Middle-schoolers explore Cohasset Harbor

More than a dozen local middle school students took part in the Center for Student Coastal Research's Junior Marsh Monitors program this July. Working alongside CSCR team leader Dom Brennan, the students explored Cohasset's harbor and marshes and gained a better understanding of the fragile coastal ecosystem.

Students took part in fish and invertebrate collection, observation and identification, and learned about some of the other environmental projects happening at Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Re search. Students got to participate in a fun, hands-on environmental program designed to increase their appreciation for the coastline.

Paul L. Lacy Jr.

Paul L. Lacy Jr.

COHASSET – Paul L. Lacy Jr., Rear Admiral, USN (Ret.), of Cohasset, MA died peacefully on July 14, 2013.

Born August 2, 1920 in Dallas, TX, Paul was a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, Class of 1943, and later received a Master of Science in Applied Physics from UCLA. He first served on the USS Cleveland (CL-55), participating in the North African Invasion and the Solomon Islands Campaign. After volunteering for submarine service, he was graduated from the U.S. Naval Submarine School in Groton, CT on April 1, 1944 and was ordered to new construction of the USS Sea Cat (SS-399) on which he made four war patrols.

Paul was a representative on the USS Missouri (BB-63) at the signing of the surrender on September 2, 1945. He went on to command two diesel powered submarines, the USS Guitarro (SS-363) and the USS Pickeral (SS-524) prior to being selected amongst the first group of commanding officers of fleet ballistic missile nuclear submarines, commanding the Blue Crew of the USS Ethan Allen (SSBN- 608).

He was promoted to Rear Admiral in July, 1967 and served as Commander, Submarine Force, U.S. Pacific Fleet from 1970 to 1972.

Paul retired from the U.S. Navy in March, 1973. Amongst his medals and awards are the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit with Combat "V" and Gold Star, the Navy Commendation Medal with Gold Star, and the Navy Unit Commendation Medal with Gold Star. He continued to serve the public after retirement from the navy in the Hawaii State Constitutional Convention in 1978 and was elected to serve two terms in the Hawaii State House of Representatives. Later he was instrumental in the development of the USS Bowfin Museum in Pearl Harbor, which is dedicated to the Pacific Fleet submariners of World War II.

Paul was the husband of his beloved late Katherine M. Kerley of Honolulu, HI and is survived by his children William Lacy and his wife Martha of Gales Ferry, CT, Sheryl Lacy Anderson and her husband Michael of Cohasset, MA, Craig Lacy and his wife Marggy of Clarendon Hills, IL, Jon Lacy of Mesa, AZ, seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Admiral Lacy will join his wife, Kay, in burial at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific in Honolulu, HI at a date to be determined.

In lieu of flowers contributions may be made in his memory to St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, MA 02025 or to the USS Bowfin Submarine Museum, 11 Arizona Memorial Drive, Honolulu, HI 96818.

NUMBER TO KNOW

40 Facing busy calendars and over-scheduled summers, Americans are dedicating, on average, only 40 minutes a week for family time, according to a research study from the NYU Child Study Center. With summer in full swing, it's the perfect time to capture those fleeting family moments and create delicious celebrations of happiness, laughter and togetherness. — Brandpoint

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

BRANDPOINT

Lose your sweet tooth

Most of us have been there at some point. You somehow find yourself barefoot in your kitchen at midnight, eating ice cream out of the container. Alternatively, the mid-afternoon energy slump has landed you in front of the vending machine pining for a package of candy.

How do we combat these cravings in an effort to eat better?

Increase hydration, protein intake and movement: Adequate hydration is essential for energy, nutrient absorption and improved digestion, while optimizing protein intake helps stabilize the blood sugar spikes and crashes that cause an endless cycle of cravings for sugar and carbohydrates.

Ditch processed foods: Processed foods that are unrecognizable in nature are typically high in carbohydrates and grossly lacking in hunger-busting protein and fat. Healthier options include a handful of cashews, hard-boiled eggs or Greek yogurt topped with grain-free granola.

Get adequate sleep: Research shows when healthy adults are sleep-deprived they tend to crave carbohydrates and can develop disruption to normal blood sugar regulation.

Retrain your taste buds: Ditch added sugars in favor of natural ones, and go cold turkey. While an artificially sweetened dessert is OK as an occasional treat, any dessert food — whatever the sweetener — shouldn't take up a substantial portion of your diet.

Raid the mini-bar

White Truffle Rice-Stuffed Mushrooms. COURTESY OF FOOD NETWORK

Enjoy vacation snacks even on staycation

By Lisa Messinger
Creators Syndicate

Due to the economy's slow recovery, surveys show that many of us are still taking "staycations," vacations at home, a term that's already made it into the Urban Dictionary (www.urbandictionary.com) and been reported upon by the Associated Press, CNN and Forbes magazine.

If we are spending our vacations at home, we are often advised to catch up on our reading, gardening and check out local sites we may have missed. No one really, though, has talked about food, which is one of the other treats of time on the road, and how we might enjoy such fruits at home.

When it comes to the kind of fun, indulgent fare we can easily imitate at home, just a few words pop to mind: room service and mini bar. Doesn't that waiter-pushed table stacked with treats, while you wait in a plush robe and fluffy slippers, bring a mile-wide grin? Well, guess what? Because of harsh economic times for some hotels over the last few years, there has been a trend with doing away with room service altogether. And who hasn't ransacked a hotel mini bar — even when they've promised themselves they wouldn't?

Why not recreate sinful snacks at home? Here are some ideas that are still some of my favorites as summer after summer of staycations become fond memories:

■ Aim for the moon when planning your theme. Sure, room service breakfasts are nice, but late-night sophisticated snacks are much more fun. Tiny tins of caviar, gourmet chocolates and champagne served on a silver tray will probably make you forget you didn't fly off to some exotic locale. Break out the sophisticated recipes you're usually too harried at work to even think about, like the gorgeous — yet easy — White Truffle Rice-Stuffed Mushroom appetizer recipe below that event organizer Tracy Stern created for her top clients.

■ Stock a staycation section of your refrigerator as mini bar territory. Fill it with gourmet snacks, cocktail ingredients and special sodas that would never be there during busy workdays and school weeks. Don't forget the little extras that we often find on the road, but barely ever at home, such as maraschino cherries, cocktail olives and cocktail onions.

■ Create personalized welcome baskets and leave them in the bedrooms of your esteemed spouse and kids.

■ If one of your children loves baseball, then baseball card gum is part of his stash. If your spouse only indulges in mango, papaya or kiwi when vacationing, then fill the basket with those.

■ For fun, turn down beds each night and leave favorite wrapped candy on the pillows. Anything from a mini Milky Way bar to pure Godiva goes.

White Truffle Rice-Stuffed Mushrooms

■ 20 medium white mushrooms
■ Salt, to taste
■ White pepper, to taste
■ 2 tablespoons unsalted butter
■ 1 medium onion, finely chopped
■ 1 1/2 cups cooked white rice
■ 2 teaspoons white truffle oil

Preheat oven to 400 F. Spray a large, shallow baking pan with nonstick cooking spray.

Pull stems from mushroom caps. Finely chop stems; set aside. Season mushroom caps with salt and pepper; place them, rounded side up, in prepared pan. Bake until mushrooms are tender and start to release liquid - about 10 minutes; carefully remove from oven.

Meanwhile, melt butter in skillet over medium-high heat for a minute or two, until foam goes down. Add chopped mushroom stems; saute, stirring until golden for about 5 minutes. Add onion and salt and pepper; saute, stirring occasionally, until onion is golden, about 5 more minutes. Stir mushroom mixture into rice along with truffle oil. Season with salt and pepper.

Carefully turn mushroom caps over; spoon rice filling into mushroom caps, pressing gently (there may be some filling left over). Bake until mushrooms are tender, about 20 minutes. Remove from oven. Let cool for 5 minutes, then arrange on tray and serve hot.

Note: You can make filling ahead and refrigerate in airtight container for up to one day. Stuff and bake mushrooms just before serving.

Yields 8 to 10 appetizer servings.

"Tea Party" by Tracy Stern with Christie Matheson

Strawberry Shirley Cocktail

■ Juice of 1 lemon
■ 1 tablespoon sugar
■ 2 teaspoons grenadine
■ 8 to 10 ripe strawberries
■ Ice, to taste
■ 2/3 cup lemon-lime type soda
■ Maraschino cherry, for garnish

In blender, mix lemon juice, sugar, grenadine and strawberries until fairly smooth.

Pour into glass that has ice in it. Top with soda; stir. Garnish with maraschino cherry.

Yields 1 serving.

Ditch the buns: Turn cheeseburgers into paninis

JIM HILLIBISH

I can't remember when I ate my last cheeseburger in a bun, but it will be my last. I'm doing panini-style cheeseburgers from now on.

I got the inspiration from John's Bar in Canton, Ohio. The thing about cheeseburgers is the bun always gets in the way of the meat flavor. Panini solves this with a light flat bread toasted on the grill. It complements — instead of competes — with anything you put between the slices.

I don't have a panini grill at home, but I do have a Lodge cast-iron skillet with raised edges that mimic grilling. If you don't have either, you can adapt our recipe to your patio grill with excellent results.

Our recipe has plenty of wiggle room. You could substitute Italian cold cuts (mortadella, salami, pepperoni or ham) for the ground beef. One thing you do need is a good salad dressing. I like bleu cheese, but Thousand Island is the staple.

The bread is your choice, but keep it minimal. The authentic classics are ciabatta, rossetta and baguette. I like thinly sliced rye (this would make a perfect grilled reuben, with ham, Swiss cheese, sauerkraut and Thousand Island dressing).

Panini Cheeseburger

■ 1 onion, sliced into rings
■ 1 pound ground beef
■ 8 slices flatbread
■ 8 slices American cheese
■ 1 tomato, sliced, seeds removed
■ 6 tablespoons Thousand Island dressing
■ Olive oil
■ Salt and pepper

Note: Our instructions are for a panini grill. You could use a skillet, a grill pan or your outdoor grill for similar results.

Lightly brush oil on a panini grill. Heat to medium high. Grill onions with lid closed for 2 minutes until they are soft with grill marks. Set aside.

Roll out meat in a square about a 1/2 -inch thick. Cut into four square patties. Season with salt and pepper. Grill patties lid closed for 3 minutes. Set aside.

Brush olive oil on one side of each slice of bread. Turn bread over, oiled side down.

Layer cheese, onions, a burger patty and dressing and a tomato slice. Top with another slice of bread, oiled side up.

Grill with top closed until golden and grill marks appear. Garnish with pickles.

Serves 4.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 5, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A longtime situation starts to move into a new phase. The question for the uncertain Lamb right now is whether to move with it. Facts emerge by midmonth to help you decide.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A talent for organizing your priorities allows the Divine Bovine to enjoy a busy social life and not miss a beat in meeting all workplace and/or family commitments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) What began as a dubious undertaking has now become one of your favorite projects. Your enthusiasm for it rallies support from other doubters-turned-believers.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Accept the help of friends to get you through an unexpectedly difficult situation. There'll be time enough later to investigate how all this could have happened so fast.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Change is a major factor for the Big Cat through midmonth. Be prepared to deal with it on a number of levels, including travel plans and workplace situations.

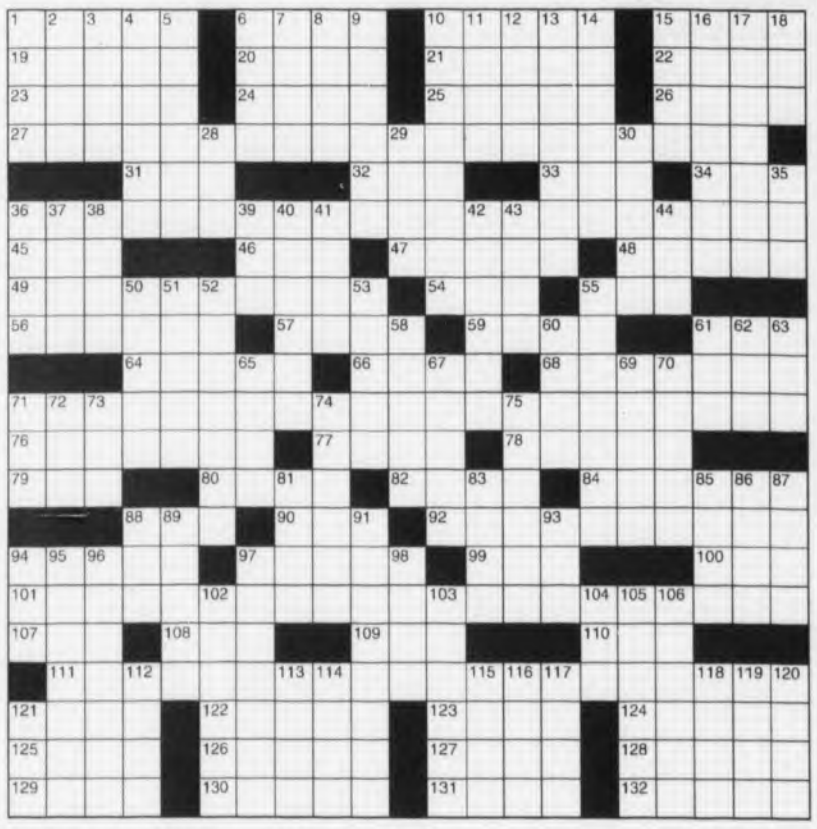
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might not like all the changes that have begun to take place around you. But try to find something positive in at least some of them that you can put to good use.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member's unsettling experience could create more problems if it's not handled with care and love. And who's the best one to offer all that? You, of course.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It might not be the right time for you to start a new venture. But it's a good time to start gathering facts and figures so you'll be set when the GO! sign lights up.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sagacious Sagittarius should have no trouble deciding between those who can and those who cannot be trusted to carry out a workplace commitment.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Surprise, surprise. It looks as if that one person you once thought you could never hope to win over to your side suddenly just might choose to join you.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might have to set aside your pride for now and accept a change that isn't to your advantage. Cheer up. There'll be time later to turn this around in your favor.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your creative self emerges as dominant through midmonth. This should help you restart that writing or arts project you've left on the shelf for far too long.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

JUVENILE DIABETES

Finn goes to Washington

Cohasset boy represents state at Children's Congress

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

He's only 12 years old, but Cohasset's Finn Doherty has already testified before Congress.

Finn has been a mover and shaker in the juvenile diabetes research world since he was a young boy. In fact, he is the reason the Cohasset Triathlon has raised money for research every year since its inception seven years ago. The race is one of the largest and most successful volunteer fundraisers for JDRF across the country and has raised nearly $1 million for the cause.

Finn recently represented Massachusetts in Washington, D.C. as an ambassador for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) at the Children's Congress, which took place from July 8 to 10. Doherty joined 150 children from around the country to ask Congress to continue supporting research to find a cure for type 1 diabetes (T1D).

For Finn, who was diagnosed at age 2, diabetes is just part of his daily routine.

"I have to track everything, every single carb I eat," he said.

In addition to monitoring his sugar intake by pricking his finger "nine to 10 times a day," Finn also has to monitor his activity level. For an active 12-year-old, this is a bit of a challenge. But between baseball, basketball, golf, lacrosse, soccer, and tennis, he doesn't let the disease slow him down.

His mother, Suzanne, can attest to his busy schedule.

"He leaves the house at seven in the morning and comes home at five at night," she said. "He has school and sports all day, and he just [manages] it all by himself. It's pretty incredible."

Finn said he is inspired by Olympian Gary Hall Jr., who participates in the Cohasset Triathon each year. The two have become good friends, and Doherty said he's learned a lot from the famous athlete.

"One of the things I've learned from being friends with Gary – and I go by it every day, whenever I have a complication – is, 'Don't let diabetes beat you,'" said Finn. "I think of that and keep pushing through; if you keep pushing, you will get through and everything will work out."

SELECTMEN

Board rescinds work policy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen voted 4-1 on Tuesday, July 23 to abolish a self-imposed policy regarding requests for work and information from town employees that falls outside of their normal scope of work must go through the town manager's office.

According to selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy, the policy came from former Town Manager Mike Coughlin to "streamline work requests" and was voted on by the selectmen last year. The policy's intention was to help employees manage their workflows and to protect them from any potential political pressures, Kennedy said.

However, after selectman Karen Quigley requested information from a town employee and was told by the employee that they were not allowed to even talk to selectmen, Quigley brought the issue up with the rest of the board.

"I understand the premise" of the policy, Quigley said. "There has to be respect and restraint on town employees; they have workload duties... They should never feel that they should immediately drop what they're doing and respond to a request." However, Quigley said she felt it was inefficient to have to go through the town manager every time the selectmen have a simple request.

Further, she was concerned about employees being discouraged from talking to selectmen. "I find it disturbing," said Quigley.

3,600 MILES OF MUSIC

Indie musician embarks on cross-county tour

Leo Lydon to bike from Boston to Seattle

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In today's do-it-yourself music scene, independent artists are becoming all the more prevalent. Musicians are launching their own careers, crowd-funding their albums and tours, selling records and finding fans from their bedrooms.

Or even on a bicycle.

Boston musician Leo Lydon – who is performing in Cohasset tonight Friday, Aug. 2) – is raising money to take his music on the road. His tour bus is just a little compact.

Lydon, an avid cyclist, is biking from Boston to Seattle this month, performing along the way. That's 3,600 miles of music.

The indie multi-hyphenate – Lydon, 24, is a singer-songwriter-musician and audio engineer – embarked on a similar tour last summer, cycling from Boston to Toronto. That adventure inspired his newest album, appropriately titled "Spoke on Spokes."

"I wrote it on the road and recorded it in six months," said Lydon.

Last summer, the musician embarked on bike with his guitar and composed chords and lyrics on the way to Canada, returning to life in Boston. This year, Lydon is packing his bike up even more, adding his laptop, a 25-key keyboard, a battery-powered amplifier,

PICTURE THIS

Dominic Brennan

The Mariner caught up with Dominic Brennan, group/camp leader at the Cohasset Center for Coastal Research (CSCR) this week. If you see Dominic around town, be sure to tell him that you spotted him in Picture This! PHOTO/ERIN DALE

Name: Dominic Brennan

Occupation: Student at St. Lawrence University, Group leader and camp leader at CSCR

Best day of your life: Today, when my life-long dream of being in "Picture This" was fulfilled!

Best vacation: Tough choice, so many great places... New Zealand, 1998-9.

Favorite season: Autumn; you can't beat good foliage.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Favorite junk food, meal or dessert: I'm a big dessert fan. I like making different cakes and experimenting with the flavors, but I think Ice cream wins out in the end.

Best book: "Franny and Zooey" by J.D. Salinger

Best movie or actor: "Into the Wild"

Best TV show: "Mad Men"

Best music, group or artist: You can never go wrong with The Beatles.

Pet peeve: Overly aggressive drivers.

Fun fact about yourself: I have three earlobes!

Goal: Bike from ocean to ocean, across the continental United States (however, other continents seem pretty appealing too!).

Person you would most like to meet: Ernest Hemingway.

Biggest worry: Running out of time.

Best part of Cohasset: The harbor, marshes included; that ecosystem has given so much to me in both the educational and experiential sense that I wouldn't trade it for the world.(But if we're looking for a specific place, Picaquasset Rock and Wompatuck are fantastic.

CONCERT SERIES

Matt Browne performs Aug. 8 on the Common

The Cohasset Recreation Concert Series Summer 2013 is underway and next up is local artist, Matt Browne. Browne is a vocalist/guitarist who performs solo at venues all around Greater Boston including the Blues Barge at Rowes Wharf.

Browne's earliest influences began with The Beatles and Irish folk music. As he continued he also developed a core of favorites including Yes, Genesis, Rush, Emerson Lake and Palmer, Led Zeppelin, Sting, U2, R.E.M., Paul Simon, The Who and Steely Dan. In addition to being a freelance musician, Browne is also a guitar and general music teacher on the South Shore.

The entire series, which also included performances by the Rusty Skippers and Trooper Dan Clark, and Souled Out is funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. This program is also supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency that is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

POLICE BEAT

Woman goes missing at Music Circus show

A 58-year-old woman from Hull went missing during a performance at the South Shore Music Circus last Sunday, July 27. It started when the Hull woman left her seat to go to the bathroom and never returned. The reporting party, who is 55 and also from Hull, notified detail officers that her friend had disappeared three hours ago. It was learned that the missing person had been drinking, and has a history of becoming confused. Cohasset Police K9 Erik and officers checked the woods around the Music Circus and surrounding areas. During the search, officers were notified that the woman was just located by family members in Hull and she did not remember how she got there. It is believed that she walked home.

Mistaken identity

Hingham and Cohasset Police stopped a 42-year-old Norwell man at the intersection of Spring and Pond streets on Friday, July 26 at 10:20 a.m. The incident started when a cell phone caller reported to Hingham Police that a man in a black Lexus pointed a gun at him at Route 3A and 228 after a road-rage incident. The caller reported that the suspect was then traveling south on Route 3A into Cohasset. A Cohasset officer was driving behind a vehicle that matched the description just as the call was being put out to all units. Suspecting that this was the wanted vehicle, the Cohasset officer followed the Lexus off of Route 3A and onto Pond Street, where a felony stop was conducted with the help of Hingham Police. It was quickly determined that the male in this Lexus was not the suspect that police were looking for. Officers explained the circumstances to the male and he understood why great caution was taken when stopping him.

Man came home drunk

A 9-1-1 call brought officers to a home off of Route 3A on Wednesday, July 24 at 10:40 p.m. A wife called police after her husband came home intoxicated and would not sleep on the couch for the night. The man reportedly became enraged to the point where their children began to cry. Officers arrived and attempted to speak with the male, who was visibly intoxicated and belligerent. While yelling, the man took a fighting stance and stepped toward officers, at which time he was taken to the ground, handcuffed, and placed into protective custody. The man's wife stated that this behavior on her husband's part was an anomaly, and there has never been physical abuse in the home. Because children were present, Cohasset Police notified the State Department of Children and Families (DCF) as required by law. DCF will follow-up with the family and provide services if necessary.

Drunken visitor

Police officers were called to the Golden Living Center on Route 3A last Saturday, July 27 at 3 p.m. The nursing staff reported that an intoxicated male was visiting a patient. When officers arrived, they found a 57-year-old man from Weymouth attempting to get behind the wheel of a car in the parking lot. The man told officers that he had been visiting a friend who is a resident of the facility. After attempts to arrange transportation for the intoxicated man failed, he was placed into protective custody. He spent 12 hours at the Cohasset Police station and was released when he was sober.

Intoxicated teen

On Sunday, July 28, around 3 a.m., a police officer on patrol on Route 3A made observations of a green SUV traveling south. This vehicle was crossing over the white fog line and being operated in an erratic manner. The officer stopped the SUV to check on the driver's sobriety. The driver was identified as an 18-year-old man from Cohasset and he passed several field sobriety tests at roadside. He admitted to adjusting the vehicle's radio– that's why he was swerving all over the road.

The officer then observed a highly intoxicated 17-year-old male passenger in the SUV. Attempts were made to contact this young man's parents to no avail. Officers placed this Hingham teen into protective custody. He spent the night at the Cohasset Police station.

Email hacking

A 38-year-old Cohasset woman came to police headquarters on Thursday, July 25 at 3:25 p.m. to report that her Gmail email account password had been compromised. The victim reported that she discovered this earlier in the day and reported the hacking to Google. Google advised her to change all of her passwords and monitor her accounts closely. The hacking appeared to originate in Brazil, according to Google.

Solicitors

Police continue to receive calls about unlicensed solicitors operating in Cohasset. This past Friday (July 26), at 5:40 p.m., three solicitors were stopped by police and warned that they would be arrested if caught going door-to-door again. This group was selling magazine subscriptions for an out of state firm. Checks of these people (two men and one woman) revealed long criminal histories for each of them from as far away as Kansas and Georgia. The group was told to not even bother to apply for a solicitors permit in Cohasset— they would be precluded due to their records.

Not cheating

A 40-year-old Cohasset woman came to the police station on Sunday, July 27, at 2:20 p.m. She showed officers a letter that she received in the mail accusing her of sleeping with another woman's husband. The woman denied the accusations in the letter and wanted to be on the record as not sleeping around with married men. Officers made a note in the police computer system of the same. It is unknown where the letter originated.

TOWING SERVICES

Two companies bid for work

Scituate Collision and Express Towing being considered

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"My job is to ensure that we protect the town and receive fast and reliable service with regard to towing vehicles."
William Quigley, Cohasset Acting Police Chief

Cohasset's tow woes appear to be over, for now.

After some controversy, two local towing companies have expressed interest in providing towing service in Cohasset. This week, Scituate Collision of Cohasset and Express Towing of Braintree responded to the town's request for qualifications (RFQ), Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski shared in a memo issued Wednesday, July 31.

There was some confusion and controversy as last year two of the three towing companies that Cohasset utilized were unexpectedly taken out of the rotation. According to officials, two of the companies did not have proper licensure and also were not using their own equipment, and the town needed to protect itself from liabilities.

Robert Ross of Scituate Collision and Ashley Thomas of Thomas Auto Body in Hingham both contacted the Cohasset Board of Selectmen to defend their companies. Ross said that he became licensed with the state Department of Utilities but was still not placed back on the town's rotation. Thomas explained that her company was not improperly licensed, but once used a Weymouth company's truck to tow a wreck because their equipment was being repaired.

Thomas said her company was not removed from Cohasset's rotation due to improper licensing. "We have been properly licensed since we started towing with our fleet back during the 1960s. We have been in business for over 50 years at the same location and have been towing for the Town of Hingham and Hull for a number of years," she said. "We do not want to be accused and spoken falsely about."

Cohasset's Acting Police Chief William Quigley stated that he has nothing but respect for the owner of Thomas Auto Body. "I have known John Thomas for over 25 years, and I consider him to be a friend. He is a leader in his industry and has a great reputation."

However, Quigley explained that the whole situation arose out of a need to protect Cohasset.

"My job is to ensure that we protect the town and receive fast and reliable service with regard to towing vehicles," Quigley said.

Milanoski said that the RFQ process for towing work would be an open, fair process, with him and Acting Chief Quigley working together "to bring transparency and accountability to government."

The RFQ process, said Milanoski, "began many months ago to find multiple licensed and insured towing companies to provide towing services to our town and what our expectations would be. This transparent process is meant to take the politics out of the process and provide the best service for the residents of Cohasset."

The RFQ was sent to six towing companies in the area, and two responded by the Wednesday, July 29 deadline: Scituate Collision and Express Towing. Milanoski will award the contracts and expects them to go into effect in September.

"I reviewed the insurance certificates, references, training information, equipment lists, and permitting documents that were provided by both companies, and everything appears to be in proper order," Milanoski stated in his July 31 memo. He recommended both companies be utilized on a rotating basis "that is both fair and equitable."

COHASSET HARBOR

Plans in place for dredging to begin

Harbor dredging could soon be underway in Cohasset. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said this week that he learned through the New England District of the U.S. Army Corps that funding has been approved to hydraulically dredge the channels in Cohasset Harbor.

Milanoski credited Cohasset Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons and Congressman Stephen Lynch for their work to make this happen in a relatively short period of time since the meeting with the Army Corps last May.

Cohasset has seen significant shoaling (high waves) following a number of major storms, such as Hurricane Sandy, which has impacted draft and safety of navigation and property.

Funding is being awarded under the Hurricane Sandy Disaster Relief Appropriations Act. The town and the Army Corps will explore options to beneficially use the material to preserve the coastline of Cohasset.

Environmental Coordination with State and Federal resource agencies will begin in the next few weeks to gain the necessary permits and coastal zone management requirements. Due to environmental and species time of year restrictions, the project is not expected to undergo dredging operations until the fall or winter of 2014.

Milanoski thanked all those who were involved in working behind the scenes to make this happen, including Congressman Lynch, Harbormaster Gibbons, and Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed.

"The Settlers of Catan" is the foundation game that starts the exciting journey, and is needed when playing the game with any of its many expansion sets. This best-selling game received Game of the Year in both Germany and the U.S. Game enthusiasts are certain to enjoy learning to play "Catan" from seasoned players. Please join us at Buttonwood for this engaging evening. Appropriate for teens 14-plus. Refreshments will be served. Catan will be available for 15 percent off the list price on Aug. 7. Call 781-383-2665 with any questions.

The "Diary of a Wimpy Kid Book 8" Mobile will be at Buttonwood on Sunday, Aug. 4 beginning at 2 p.m. COURTESY PHOTO

SOUTH SHORE LEARNING LAB

Taking tutoring to another level

By Ruth Thompson

Erin and Adam Culbert, students of the Scituate School System, have opened a local tutoring center that offers specialized instruction in a multitude of areas. COURTESY PHOTOS

Scituate natives Adam and Erin Culbert are passionate about teaching, enjoy working with young people, and believe in giving back to their community.

In establishing the South Shore Learning Lab (SSLL), they are able to encompass it all.

Adam said the goal of the SSLL is to provide a broad range of exceptional quality and affordable tutoring services personally tailored to the individual needs of its clients.

"Unlike other educational companies, South Shore Learning Lab is not limited in its scope of service or restricted by a franchised curriculum," he said. "Rather, as a dedicated tutoring center comprised of experienced professional educators, the learning lab is able to offer specialized instruction in a multitude of areas."

Adam, a math teacher at the Gates Intermediate School in Scituate, and Erin, an intensive special needs teacher at the early childhood program in the Scituate School District, opened the SSLL in Norwell last summer.

"Since last July, SSLL has provided services to over 100 students in one capacity or another," Adam said.

He said the learning lab came about "as a natural progression of our teaching."

"We knew that, aside from ourselves, many teachers were tutoring students beyond the school day and during the summer," he said. "Most tutoring normally takes place either in a public library or in the student's home. We wanted to create a dedicated center and professional environment for teachers to work with students without any distractions. We also realized that almost all teachers were tutoring based on word-of-mouth recommendations. Our hope has been that in creating this learning center we have been better able to share these experts with the wider community on the South Shore."

What differentiates SSLL from other tutoring organizations, Adam said, is the fact that all of their tutors are certified teachers in their respective fields.

"As they are accustomed to doing each day in school, their goal is to tailor their services to the unique needs of each individual student and their family," he said. "As part of that goal, we believe that the best services are provided through experts: if you need help in Latin, you will be seen by a Latin teacher, physics – a physics teacher, etc."

Moreover, he said that throughout the year, and especially during the summertime, the expertise provided by these teachers allows them to layout a program for their students and create lessons designed to meet the specific needs of their students.

The concept of SSLL – that there are very few limits to what could be offered from an enrichment standpoint – is what Adam said he likes best.

"Our goal is to provide exceptional enrichment opportunities for all ages, learning levels, grades, etc.," he said. "We not only offer a full range of academic support including all classes K-12 (and some college level courses), but we also offer specialized sessions for reading and writing, foreign languages, speech and language therapy, social skills classes, study skills and organization, test prep (ISEE, SSAT, SAT, ACT, etc.), and the college essay."

He said the learning lab has also offered such classes as music and movement, yoga, art adventures, readers theater, literature labs, discovery science and are looking to add more all the time, including adult education and enrichment.

"We have seen students as young as a few months old to students in college," he said of SSLL clients.

Aside from working with the students himself, Adam said his role is to find the best match between a student and teacher.

"This year, many students have sought tutoring in mathematics and test prep (ISEE, SAT, etc.), although more recently we have been fielding requests for essay writing and history," he said.

One of his biggest challenges is coordinating everything that goes on at the learning lab, and he points out that he and Erin handle all phone calls and emails themselves.

"It's a challenge that I enjoy, however, since it allows me to personally connect with each teacher and student, and help facilitate their relationship," he said.

Adam said he "fell into teaching after college."

"Amidst following a dream of being a professional musician, I grew to love working as an aide and substitute in my school system while I was also tutoring on the side," he said. "I really enjoyed being around young people and having an impact on their development, and made the decision that I wanted to pursue a career in education."

One of his most difficult subjects in school, surprisingly, was math.

"I was always curious about the 'why' behind a concept, which sometimes got in the way of me just sticking to the basic algorithms and facts and using them to solve the problem," he said. "That has helped influence how I approach teaching math today in that I try to teach students as much of the 'why' as I can.

The South Shore Learning Lab strives to provide exceptional educational and enriching experiences to students, Adam said.

"While at the same time giving professional educators a dedicated center in which to do what they do best: teach."

The South Shore Learning Lab is located at 683 Main St., 2nd floor, in Norwell. For more information call 781-659-1555 or visit www.southshorelearninglab.com. They can also be found on Facebook under South Shore Learning Lab.

FARMERS MARKET

Cooking up a Storm

Healthy food demo planned for Aug. 15

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Storm has showcased her culinary skills on the common over the past two years, creating healthy dishes from local produce like kale, tomatoes, succotash and corn.

Farmers market favorite Linda Storm is back this year, cooking fresh fare on the town common. Storm, a local health coach and yoga teacher, will host a cooking demo at the Cohasset Farmers Market on Thursday, Aug. 15 from 3 to 5 p.m.

Storm has showcased her culinary skills on the common over the past two years, creating healthy dishes from local produce like kale, tomatoes, succotash and corn.

This year's demo menu is as yet unplanned.

"I'm not sure what I am cooking but you can say it will be nutritious and delicious!" Storm teased.

Crafting good-for-you – and good-tasting – meals is Storm's specialty.

She has said that her mission as a nutritionist is to make healthy food beyond palatable to even the pickiest eater. To Storm, "nutritious" does not equate boring (see her recipe for zucchini fritters, below).

"I like people to know that healthy can taste good," Storm said.

Storm might not yet have the menu planned for next week's cooking demo, but this is because she likes to make her dishes with what she has on hand. She likes to use what is fresh and available at the market that day.

According to market organizers, there will be an abundance of locally-grown produce available, especially corn and early tomatoes. Also new at the market – ponies. Duxbury's Westside Farm started providing pony rides last week.

The Cohasset farmers market is open every Thursday from 2 to 6:30 p.m. on the common through Oct. 17, 2013. For more information, visit www.cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

If you go:

Cooking demo

What: Cooking demonstration featuring local produce at the Cohasset Farmers Market.
Who: Local health coach and yoga teacher Linda Storm.
Where: Cohasset Town Common.
When: Thursday, Aug. 15, 3 -5 p.m.
Why: Local health coach Linda Storm uses locally grown produce from the farmers market. If you tasted Storms's cooking last year, you know that she prepares beautiful, delicious food featuring fresh, local ingredients.

RECIPE

Zucchini fritters

Health Coach Linda Storm shared the following recipe; try it for a taste of what she could prepare in next week's cooking demo.

1 large zucchini (or 2 small), grated
1 large egg, lightly beaten
1 cup bread crumbs (panko or regular)
1/4 cup fresh parsley, chopped
1/4 cup fresh basil, chopped
1/2 cup Parmesan cheese, grated
olive oil or butter for pan

Remove excess liquid from freshly grated zucchini by placing between paper towels or in a clean dishtowel and squeezing. Combine all the ingredients in a bowl and mix thoroughly. Heat a large pan on medium, and coat bottom with oil. Shape spoonfuls of the zucchini batter into approximately 2-inch diameter patties, and drop into the sizzling pan. Cook each side for a minute or two or until outside is golden brown. Transfer to a cookie sheet and broil for 1-2 minutes. Makes about 12 fritters.

Misty is just a kitten at 4 months old, but has been through a lot in that short period of time. COURTESY PHOTO

GIMME SHELTER

Misty needs a loving home

PAULA J FATERSIK

Wanted: One home, safe and secure, with lots of attention and love. Misty is hoping and praying for the right family or person who has room in their hearts and home for a very sweet and special kitten. Hers is a sad tale as she did have a family when she was 9 weeks old. Well, a few months later, it turns out that there was not enough room to keep her in their home so she made her way to HSAR at only 4 months old. This is a challenge for any cat, but for a kitten, to go thorough this much change is scary and quite sad.

Misty doesn't understand why she is here, and really, who can blame her. It is a time of wondering why for Misty and we are trying to make her comfortable and love her like crazy, but just like any child, there is confusion for her. Trying to adapt to a room full of strange cats after being in a family is tough. Like most kittens, she wants to sit on your lap and purr and be petted, and she waits by the door with an expectant look on her sweet face. Seeing that is both wonderful and heartbreaking since she may expect a former family member. But soon it will be her new owner who will delight in her adorable face. Well, we can all see that this fabulous young girl is a beauty who just needs a new start with a family that can commit to raising her and treating her like a princess.

To know Misty is to love Misty. She may have a hard luck tale, but let's get to her personal information. At just 4 months, of course Misty is kittenish with plenty of energy. She is a blend of Bengal and tiger and maybe some tortie as well. The patterns and markings of her coat are fabulous. Gorgeous big eyes, and her Bengal side, give her an exotic look and her petite build tells us that she will probably be a small cat. Having a good space to play with Misty will be important, and being able to spend lots of time with her every day to make her feel loved and wanted is so important. Sweet talk and telling her how beautiful and precious she is will bring those wonderful purrs that happy babies reward us with here in the shelter.

Maybe this is the right time, and the right kitten for you and your family.

To learn more about this beautiful little girl please call Judy at 781-534-4902. Misty is waiting to meet you and needs a real, loving, forever home so please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. Open hours are Monday evening from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for the best matches and homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also, please visit our Facebook page for updates and information on our special cats and events.

There are so many cats and kittens in need of loving and safe forever homes. Being kitten season, there are many precious little ones waiting for love and attention. The number of unwanted kittens being born every spring and summer is problematic as all shelters try to find wonderful placements for them. As a 501(c)(3) organization, we operate solely on donations, unlike many large organizations, so everything that our supporters do to help us is appreciated more than you know. Right now our specific need is kitten food, both wet and dry, and KMR kitten formula dry milk. So many kittens come in missing their mom and we want to keep them healthy using products geared toward their needs. Laundry supplies and fresh bedding are also on our wish list.

We are so grateful to Petco Unleashed in Hingham for their continued support and generosity. On many Saturdays, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue board members and volunteers spend time presenting and featuring information about our organization and our available cats and kittens. The staff and management at Petco are fabulous and are helping to keep our cabinets stocked with foods for the many adult cats waiting for their forever homes. We are very fortunate and appreciate their most generous support.

All of the volunteers who are involved with HSAR have been putting in a lot of time and effort and we appreciate the dedication and hard work involved. It takes a lot of commitment and heart to keep our residents healthy, comfortable and happy as they wait for new loving homes. Thank you to all!

Paula J Fatersik is a volunteer and feature writer for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

We have a match!

EILEEN PUZO

South Shore Conservatory's Playground Committee is thrilled to announce that we have a $10,000 anonymous challenge match for our playground renovation! As a famous movie once said, "If you build it, 'they' will come." Well, "they" are already here. We just need to rebuild it so "they" can stay and play.

The Conservatory playground is home to hundreds of children every week throughout the year. During school hours, our preschool through kindergarten students go there to play, to have story hour and, on particularly hot days, cool off with a popsicle. After school lets out, neighborhood children, friends, Conservatory students (my own nieces and nephew among them) and siblings make their way over to join in the fun.

Overtime, however, the playground has become tired. Originally installed in 1995, the playground structures have been moved three times, and their replacement is long overdue. Our goal is to give all of our children a better, safer place to play. To that end, a group of neighbors, preschool parents and teachers came together as the Playground Committee to evaluate the Conservatory's needs for an inclusive playground, keeping in mind that a playground is a valuable tool to allow children to develop both motor and social skills.

Our new playground is an environmentally friendly design by local contractor Childscapes. Its sustainability and natural color scheme allows it to blend in naturally with the beautiful landscape of neighboring Bare Cove Park. The playground features two play structures, one for children ages 2-5 and the other for older children ages 5-12. In addition, free-standing musical panels continue the creative expression found inside the Conservatory and give everyone an opportunity to discover their inner musician. The renovated playground is accessible to people of all ages and abilities, something that the Committee took great care to ensure. We also plan to feature a miniature amphitheater for many uses, including performances both planned and spontaneous, and for outdoor learning.

Having been an SSC playground user when I was a preschooler years ago, I was honored to be chosen to take a lead role in this fundraising effort. Since we kicked off fundraising in December 2012, donors have generously given $70,000 toward its goal of $87,000. F. Riley Construction, EL Margetts, and Specialized Rigging and Tree Care have given been quite supportive with their knowledge and resources. Now, with just five weeks left in the Conservatory's 2013 fiscal year, the Committee is tasked with raising the final $17,000. We are so close! In fact, we're even closer than we appear. And you can get us there.

To inspire others to give, an anonymous challenge match of $10,000 has been put forward. Between now and Aug. 31, any gift made to the Conservatory's playground project will be doubled automatically up to a total of $10,000. This means that your $50 will become $100, and $500 will become $1,000!

To make a tax-deductible gift online, please visit http://sscmusic.org/playground_donate.html#contribute. Checks, payable to South Shore Conservatory with "Playground" in the memo line, may be mailed to South Shore Conservatory, Playground Project, One Conservatory Drive, Hingham, MA 02043. For more information or to give via MasterCard or Visa, please contact Eileen Puzo at e.puzo@sscmusic.org or 781-749-7565 ext. 30.

POLICY

Both Kennedy and Gaumer said that they had never had any issues speaking with town employees. Gaumer said that he didn't understand the problem with going through the town manager's office to ask employees to do work outside of their workload.

"Our role is not as overseers of the employees but as overseers of one employee," the town manager, said Gaumer, who was the sole vote against rescinding the policy. "They report to the town manager... The policy clearly says the workflow goes through the town manager."

Gaumer also noted that the policy protected employees from being "bent to the will of elected officials."

Kennedy added that she felt that Quigley's experience was an anomaly.

Quigley brought up a recent memo issued to the selectmen by the town department heads asking for a "formal process" to speak with the board. The memo was sent to the selectmen on June 20, 2013 and signed by 13 department heads and asks the selectmen to consider assigning liaisons with the town departments "to meet periodically to gather feedback and share ideas."

Kennedy said that she interpreted that as asking for a selectmen liaison to attend department head meetings to encourage "open communication."

"I think it's separate from this particular issue," Kennedy added.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the purpose of the memo was to set up a meeting between the department heads and the selectmen chair and vice-chair for sometime in August just to discuss town issues.

Milanoski said that the town employees "like the buffer" between them and the selectmen and "don't want politics to interfere with work." He explained that short requests for documents is not an issue; the issue is having to reconfigure workloads for time-consuming requests. The policy also did not prohibit employees and selectmen from speaking, Milanoski added.

"To say that they're not allowed to talk to [selectmen], that's not something that happened on my watch," said Milanoski. "That's not how I operate. I encourage communication... that's where the truth comes out."

Quigley mentioned a specific instance where she asked the town manager's assistant for an electronic copy of the budget and received an email from Milanoski stating that he was to manage the request. She cited another instance where she was talking to a town employee who told her she would have to leave because Milanoski was coming, and the employee could not be seen talking to Quigley.

Milanoski said that the latter situation was "a political issue."

Selectmen chair Fred Koed said that the policy should be clarified if the board even wanted to keep it. "This is only a year old. The town's operated quite a number of years without it."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby agreed. "I'd like to eliminate it."

Kennedy said that while she felt it was all "much ado about nothing," she was in favor of rescinding the policy and let the town employees decide whether they wanted to bring a policy of their own forward. "This is for them," said Kennedy.

Milanoski asked the vote to be tabled until after the as yet unscheduled department head meeting. However, Quigley had already motioned to rescind the policy. Koed said he didn't see the harm in taking a vote.

"It needs to be reworked no matter what," Koed said of the policy. "The way it's worded, it could be interpreted strictly."

Quigley said that she would like to hear what the town employees have to say on the matter. "I've always felt that the back room of Cohasset should be run as a business and the front room should be Mayberry, USA; lately it hasn't been Mayberry."

FINN

cure to the Children's Congress this summer. The summit, held every other summer, was led by JDRF International Chairman Mary Tyler Moore and included congressional visits by the delegates and a Senate hearing during which Moore, select delegates and advocates testified on the need for continued funding for T1D research.

The theme of this year's congress was "Promise to Remember Me," serving as a reminder to lawmakers to think of the struggle those living with the disease must endure on a daily basis.

The children, like Finn, who attended the summit were all aged four to 17 and all live with T1D. They came from all 50 states and the District of Columbia, along with six international delegates from Australia, Canada, Denmark, Israel, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom. The message these children ambassadors were trying to convey—fighting T1D requires a global effort.

In particular, Finn explained that he and his fellow ambassadors asked lawmakers for a three-year renewal of $150 million per year in funding for T1D research.

"That funds all sorts of research, such as artificial pancreas, which takes care of everything," said Finn. "It would be really nice, replacing cells so you don't even have to think about diabetes."

Currently, said Finn, there are many advancements in the field of diabetes research that are "really cool and downright helpful, making life easier for the other kids and adults with the disease." However, he added, "It will not be possible without all the money we need."

It sounds like the 12-year-old could have a future in politics. One thing is for certain – he already is, and will continue to be, an advocate.

"I have a bunch of ideas," he said of possible future careers. "I've thought about being in the government and doing advocacy. This whole thing, the Children's Congress, was definitely something I was interested in and wanted to do."

Participating in the summit was "cool," said Finn. "I got to meet four or five of our congressman from Massachusetts, and I'd never met any of them before. I got to talk to them about how I handle diabetes every single day throughout my life.

"They were all pretty supportive of it, which was nice," Doherty added. "They all thought this was a cause that they needed to fund; that makes it a little easier."

An inspiration

Finn may not even be a teenager yet, but he's already had a major impact on T1D research.

Cohasset Triathlon founder and director Bill Burnett said he decided to donate the race's proceeds to JDRF after meeting the boy (he was in kindergarten with Burnett's twin daughters).

"He had seen what I have to do every day," said Finn of why Burnett got involved.

Burnett said, "My friendship with Finn and his parents initiated my decision to have the triathlon give back to help find a cure for type 1 diabetes. To see what Finn and other type 1 diabetics have to go through on a daily basis is mind-blowing. I am so very proud that the triathlon has helped spearhead nearly $1 million toward type 1 research."

The triathlon founder added that he is also proud of Finn.

"I am proud to call Finn a friend," said Burnett. "He is a smart, athletic, thoughtful person who has a big, bright future ahead of him."

"I've thought about being in the government and doing advocacy. This whole thing, the Children's Congress, was definitely something I was interested in and wanted to do."
Finn Doherty

Finn participates in the triathlon each year, holding the flag. Next year, when he is old enough, he hopes to complete a relay in the three-event race (swimming, cycling and running).

"That's definitely something I've wanted to do for a long time, basically ever since it started," he said of the triathlon.

As for the Children's Congress? Said Finn, "I would definitely like to do something like that again."

About Children's Congress

The JDRF Children's Congress program was inspired by 8-year-old Tommy Solo from Massachusetts in 1999. He overheard adult JDRF volunteers talking about going to Washington, D.C. to talk to Congress, and thought it would be great if children could go, too, because their voice also needed to be heard. Children's Congress inspires lawmakers to remember the children who live with T1D when making decisions about medical research and voting on other important federal issues relating to diabetes. The young delegates' stories, told in their own words, are often more powerful than almost any other type of legislator education.
Today, Children's Congress brings 150 children with T1D, and one parent or guardian each, to Washington, D.C. They come together as advocates to meet on Capitol Hill with members of Congress and other key federal policymakers, to help educate them about the critical need for federal funding of T1D research. About JDRF

JDRF is the leading global organization funding type 1 diabetes (T1D) research. JDRF's goal is to progressively remove the impact of T1D from people's lives until we achieve a world without T1D. JDRF collaborates with a wide spectrum of partners and is the only organization with the scientific resources, regulatory influence, and a working plan to better treat, prevent, and eventually cure T1D. As the largest charitable supporter of T1D research, JDRF is currently sponsoring $530 million in scientific research in 17 countries. In 2012 alone, JDRF provided more than $110 million to T1D research. More than 80 percent of JDRF's expenditures directly support research and research-related education. In 2012 Forbes magazine named JDRF one of its five All-Star charities, citing the organization's efficiency and effectiveness. RECITAL SERIES

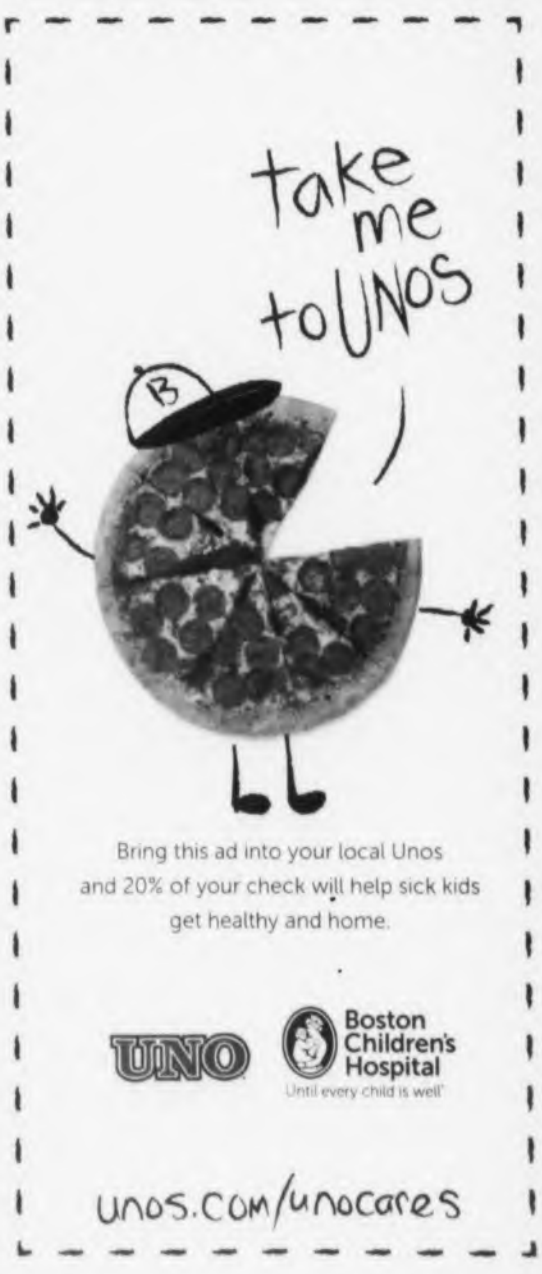
The 89th annual Summer Recital Series continues at 6 p.m. each Sunday until Aug. 18.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of 23 bells, President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

Aug. 4 – Gordon Slater, Nepean, Ontario, Canada.

Aug. 11 – Philippe Beullens, Leuven, Belgium.



Aug. 18 – Lee Leach, Norwood.

After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above. Parking is ample and free.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Tim Reynolds of Hull in loving memory of his brother, Richard Tyler Reynolds; and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

OUR VIEW

Color or black & white?

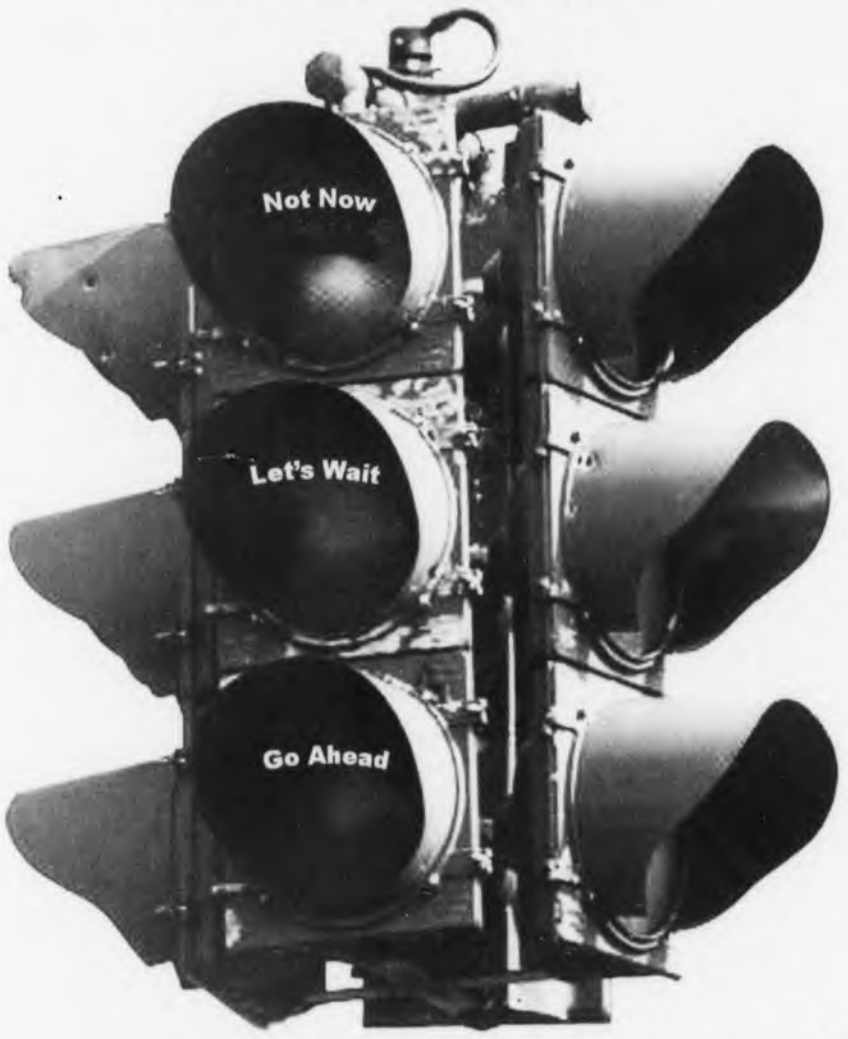
One of the most common requests we receive from our readers but often cannot fulfill is: Please run this photograph in color.

Color pages in your Cohasset Mariner – apart from section fronts (front page, sports front page and the back pages) are dependant on whether color advertisements have been booked. In other words, it is possible to have a paper without any "inside" color.

In the Mariner, there is usually a fair amount of inside color but those pages are often filled to the brim with full color advertisements. If there is a considerable number of "color ads," there is little or no room remaining on those pages for editorial copy including photographs.

Color pages are also usually limited to the four pages in the center of the front and back sections of the paper. In other words, the way the Mariner is "plated" at the press allows for color on the four center pages in the front and back sections, again – only if there are paid color advertisements there.

We strive to find color spots for weddings and engagements and certain photos – such as scenic photos or American flags around Memorial Day or the Fourth of July – but often, we have to stick with black and white for the reason previously stated



Color placement in the paper is one of the parts of the Cohasset Mariner that the editor does not have any control over.

On a related matter, some readers still submit black and white photos to us. There is no need to do so, as our photo processing system turns color photos into black and white for those non-color pages we talked about! So submit your photos in color and depending on color space, we will try for color. If not, they will appear in black and white.

We remember the days when all newspaper photos in the Cohasset Mariner were back and white. So we are happy to be able to offer color on the front page and front page of sports and elsewhere when space and color needs permit!

You can always check out our photos (and submitted photos) in full color online at: wickedlocalcohasset.com.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

Bits about Boston – past and present

MARY KENNEDY

Once upon a time in 1630, the population of Boston was one. Church of England Reverend William Blackstone, preferring solitude to community comforts, lived alone with his 200 books in a pasture (now known as Boston Common) that the local Indians called Shawmut ("living waters"). It was Blackstone who invited John Winthrop and his fellow Puritans to leave Charlestown and join him where there was more space and an ample supply of fresh spring water. For his generosity, the practical Puritans "gave" Blackstone 50 acres (of his own land), renamed the area Boston (after their home town in England), and promptly set aside 44 acres of the open pasture for "common land" to be used as a "training field for militia and for the feeding of Cattell".

Boston Common also served the Puritan church-state as a place for executing pirates, witches, and heretics, including Quakers like the gentle Mary Dyer, hanged in 1636, for daring to challenge Puritan authorities by hosting bible-study groups in her home. The conveniently located Frog Pond served not only as an execution site for drowning witches, but also to determine – by God's will, of course – the innocence or guilt of the convicted woman. Strapped to a wooden chair, the "witch" was flung into the water. If the chair rose to the surface and floated, she was obviously guilty. If it sank, she was innocent. Alas, however, she was usually dead when finally rescued.

With the "passing" of Puritan rule, the Common later hosted – along with grazing animals invited once every year — public celebrations, free summer concerts, and even amateur orators. In 1851, passersby were astounded to find a woman not only wearing pantaloons (trousers) but loudly expressing their merits for the "gentle sex." Her name? Amelia Bloomer.

A few of Boston's "firsts": first public park, the Common (1634); first public school (1636); first college, Harvard (1639); first public post office (1639); first public library (1653); first outright challenge of British authority – eight years before dumping tea in the harbor - when colonists refused to pay a tax on stamps (1765); first Board of Health – with Paul Revere as president (1779); site of America's first football game, played by students from Boston Latin and other elite schools (1862); and the first underground subway line (1895).

Along with nicknames like "bean town" and Cradle of Liberty," is "The Hub." In 1858, Poet/Professor/Physician Oliver Wendell Holmes, writing for the Atlantic Monthly, actually referred to the State House – not Boston — as the "Hub of the Solar System". A rather exalted viewpoint, even for a Boston Brahmin. The term, Brahmin, meaning the highest social caste in India, was used in Boston during the 19th century to satirize those Bostonians of both impeccable taste and lineage. (No Irish nor Italians need apply). As one ditty describes it: Welcome to dear old Boston; the home of the bean and the cod; where the Cabots speak only to the Lodges; and the Lodges speak only to God.

Education, however, is what really defines Boston. From the first public school in America, today there are over 100 universities and colleges within a 20 miles radius of the city. Even Mark Twain, humorously acknowledged Boston's intellectual supremacy when he said, "In New York, they ask how much are you worth? In Philadelphia, who are your parents? In Boston, how much do you know?

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

PUSHING THE EDGE

There are 50 shades of 'yes'

GLENN MANGURIAN

Have you asked permission, received a "yes' only to discover that it wasn't really the "yes" you thought it was? Seem like a strange question? Well, I've discovered that not all "yes's" are created equal. We think of most decisions as being binary – yes or no. A "no" seems pretty clear cut (more on that point later). But a "yes" can be more complex.

Consider this common scenario. It is dinnertime and 14-year-old Lauren asks "Hey, mom can I go to the mall with Sally tonight?" Mom's response: "OK yes." What has mom just agreed to? Was there any agreement on how the young girl was going to get there, what time she should be home or who else would be going? Probably not. I call that a "soft yes."

We encounter "soft yes's" all the time. There are no problems with a "soft yes" unless we mistakenly interpret the answer to be a "hard yes". A "hard yes" is like a blank check or a check with no stipulations attached.

I've come across at least five variations of "soft yes."

• Uninformed yes: This is a yes given without consideration to the implications.

• Superficial yes: This is a yes given to appease the requestor.

• Qualified yes: A yes that was given with an unexpressed "if only."

• Polite yes: A yes when no seems disrespectful or will hurt feelings.

• Clueless yes: A yes given when you really don't understand what is being asked but are embarrassed to ask.

Offering a "soft yes" can be dangerous especially when given to teenage children or when it involves your money. Receiving a "soft yes" and misinterpreting it as a "hard yes" can be equally dangerous.

By now you might be asking if there is "soft no." My experience is that most adults consider a no a no – especially if repeated several times. Children consider every no as a "soft no." They learn early on how to wear down their parent's repeated no until they get a "soft yes," which they will act upon like a "hard yes."

Why can't life be more simple? Wasn't there a time when a yes meant yes and a no meant no? Probably not and that is a "soft no."

HEDLUND REPORT

It's their party and they'll tax if they want to!

ROBERT HEDLUND

It's easy to become numb to the idea of higher taxes in Massachusetts, since tax increases have become standard operating procedure over the last seven years under one-party rule.

But the latest round of tax increases passed by the state Legislature may be some of the most irresponsible and counterproductive votes I have seen on Beacon Hill. And how did the Governor respond? He vetoed the higher taxes because he didn't think they went high enough. That's right, the argument within the majority party is not whether to raise your taxes or not, but how high to raise your taxes.

The formula for higher taxes in Massachusetts has become simple. As the Boston Business Journal recently put it, "Call it tax-hike fever. Or a revenue stampede. Our one-party state has consulted with itself and has decided it can get away with it."

And the Governor and Legislative leaders are hoping taxpayers are numb when it comes to tax increases or are just not paying attention during these dog days of summer. But I believe they are about to wake a sleeping giant of fed up taxpayers and small business owners who have had enough of working harder and harder only to get back less and less.

Massachusetts taxpayers already pay the eighth highest state and local tax burdens per capita in the nation, including the third highest income tax burden per capita and the 13th highest sales tax rate in the nation. Massachusetts taxpayers have to work until April 25 to earn enough money to pay off their total tax bill for the year. That is the fourth latest date in the nation.

Small business owners do not fare any better. Massachusetts is home to the fifth highest tax burden on businesses, leading to the second highest business costs in the nation.

Higher taxes hurt working families and small business owners. The Governor and Legislature just poured salt on those tax wounds.

The most foolish of all the latest tax increases that is sure to have the most negative impact is the new 6.25 percent sales tax on computer system design services and software services. Michael Widmer, president of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, said it best when he warned the Governor and Legislature that "State leaders could hardly have chosen a more perfect tax to undercut the future of the Massachusetts economy. This is the most sweeping computer and software services tax in the nation. It strikes at the heart of the state's innovation economy and will stifle job creation for years to come."

This new tax will hit virtually every business in the state, which are already faced with one of the highest costs of doing business in the nation, jeopardizing many good, high-paying jobs. As the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation put it, employers in the health care, life sciences, biotechnology, finance, manufacturing, hospitality, restaurant, retail, grocery, and other industries will all pay more to improve productivity, generate growth, be more competitive and, most importantly, create jobs.

I have heard from many business owners and managers in my district. They are all telling me the same thing. Not only will this tax have a dramatic impact on their ability to stay competitive and continue to grow and create more jobs, it is likely to lead to layoffs. Even worse, many have questioned whether they would keep their business in Massachusetts after this latest tax hit. One businessman put the impact succinctly by telling me, "I would prefer to hire locally, but if this tax stays, I will have no choice but to move on, as will hundreds of other software service companies."

These businesses have been leading the way as innovators and are the future of the Massachusetts economy. We need to be supporting these businesses to help grow our economy and create jobs, not driving them and our economy's competitive edge out of state.

The Governor and majority in the Legislature also passed an increase to the cigarette tax of $1 per pack, a 40 percent increase. While I do not condone smoking, Massachusetts already has the ninth highest cigarette tax. This increase brings us to number two. And the Governor and Legislature didn't increase this tax to fund any health-related spending. They did it to help fund their misguided transportation finance bill.

And then we have the latest increase to the gas tax. You may have heard or read about the 3 cent a gallon increase. That's bad enough, but what you may not know is that the Governor and Legislature have tied future increases in the gas tax to the consumer price index (CPI), a measure of inflation. That means the gas tax is now almost guaranteed to increase every year, with no vote or accountability from the Legislature.

To give that some perspective, over the last 10 years gas prices have nearly tripled. A gas tax linked to CPI during that time would have increased gas prices by an additional 28 percent. Of course, the Governor and Legislature made sure to prevent the gas tax from ever going below the current rate (21 cents/gallon) should the CPI decrease.

What makes this even more maddening is that the price of gasoline is included in the calculation of the CPI. So as the price of gas goes up, there is upward pressure on the CPI, which, in turn, increases the gas tax. Meaning Massachusetts taxpayers will be hit even harder by gas price increases.

Will a higher gas tax at least lead to better roads? Have the recent MBTA fare increases led to better service and fewer delays? The answer to both is no.

Studies show that states that have tied gas tax increases to inflation have a higher than average gas tax burden, but not necessarily better roads. Before Maine eliminated inflation indexing last year, they had the 16th highest gas tax nationally but ranked 29th in state highway systems on cost versus effectiveness. Florida, which also indexes their gas tax to inflation, has the 10th highest gas tax in the nation and ranks 37th in overall highway performance.

These outrageous and counterproductive taxes passed by a vote of 34-6 in the Senate and 106-47 in the House. That is 85 percent support in the Senate and 73 percent support in the full Legislature. The majority on Beacon Hill are hoping taxpayers stay numb and resigned to higher taxes as just Massachusetts being Massachusetts. I believe they have dramatically underestimated just how far they can push the tolerance of taxpayers and voters.

PLANNING MATTERS

Beyond birth order

LEANNA HAMILL

Selecting your attorney-in-fact

Birth order can determine many things – personality, curfew times and even how many baby pictures there are of you. One thing that shouldn't be based on birth order, however, is the people you name to help you in your power of attorney, health care documents or will.

An attorney-in-fact is the person you select to act for you under your durable power of attorney in the event of your incapacity. Under the power of attorney, that person will be your legal agent, and able to manage your money, real property and other matters such as life insurance and retirement accounts. They will essentially be able to perform any act related to your property that you could have performed.

I have seen many clients who appoint their spouse as their primary attorney in fact, with their adult children, from oldest to youngest listed as the alternates. Your spouse is probably a good first choice, since they are most likely on many of your accounts and know how you would like things handled. But, when appointing your children, there are more important things to consider besides birth order:

1. Your first choice for an agent should be that the child is responsible and trustworthy. After all, this person will be managing your money, writing checks on your account, and may even have the power to sell your property. If your oldest child has a drug, alcohol or gambling problem, or is recently recovering from one, you should not select them as your attorney-in-fact simply because they were born first.

2. Your agent should ideally live near you as well, since it will be easier to handle things on your behalf. However, if the most responsible child lives far away, and another child lives nearby, you could appoint them both to act either jointly or separately. That way the local one can run down to the bank for you, or write a check to the plumber, but the other one can manage your stock accounts and retirement plans. Make sure their relationship is such that it won't lead to conflicts or the inability to make decisions.

3. If one of your children is going through a divorce or other stressful event, you may not wish to select them as your attorney-in-fact at this time, in order to minimize the stress in their life.

4. Your agent should be someone you think can be calm in a crisis. In the event of your incapacity, which will no doubt be stressful enough on your family, you would want to have selected the child who could step up and handle those things that need to be dealt with – writing checks to pay the mortgage, signing contracts for medical facilities, arranging for home care, meeting with attorneys and maybe even remortgaging or selling your house.

If none of your children fit this description, or if you have no children, you should still select an attorney-in-fact to assist you. You could choose a sibling, friend or trusted advisor. If you don't make a choice, and you do become incapacitated, the court will have to select a guardian for you. This process is time consuming, expensive and you have no control over the choice of guardian. It could wind up being someone you don't know or would not want appointed. Selecting an attorney-in-fact is not a decision to be made lightly, but it is a decision that has to be made.

FOR THE RECORD

Frequently asked questions

GREGORY MATHIS

Part 2

This is the second of a two-part series focusing on common questions our staff is asked.

The five questions I covered in last week's column were fairly basic. This week I'll answer five questions you have maybe asked yourself, if not actually asked a reporter or editor.

Why are editorials unsigned?

Let me say we don't do nearly enough local editorials, but that's an entire column for another day. Some editorials may be signed, but generally editorials are the opinion of the staff, not necessarily one person. As many know, our local papers only have a few people responsible for the news coverage, so the author of an unsigned editorial shouldn't be much of a mystery.

How are stories chosen for the front page?

We try to provide a good mix of stories and content on the front page that reflects what's happening in the community. It changes from issue to issue, but hopefully there's a news story, feature or photo that captures your attention. The biggest news and/or the best features generally get front-page billing. Inside pages are determined by space as advertisements are placed first, then the editorial content is built around the advertisements.

Why are there so many ads in the paper?

Our publisher and advertising director might not like this, but this question has been asked. The only real answer is advertising pays the bills, and without that, there's no newspaper. Over the past few years advertisements have found their way to the front page as well, which is pretty much industry standard at this point. And front-page advertising now includes sticky notes, which is also becoming more standard. The bottom line is ads keep us in business.

Why should I buy the paper when I can read everything online for free?

Not everything you see in the newspaper is available online. With that said, there are some very good reasons to read your local paper. First and foremost, content is constantly being added to the website and pushing older articles off the homepage and out of sight. If you don't come to the website often enough there's a good chance you'll be missing some interesting information. The newspaper in some regards is a collection of all that content, except it's organized in a way where you can spend as much time reading as you need and not miss a thing.

Why is there never any news in the newspaper?

We hear this question a lot, mostly if we miss covering a particular event or topic. Local content is local news. Our editorial commitment is covering all aspects of the community, which can mean reporting on local meetings and writing feature stories on local people and organizations, but it also includes high school and youth sports, printing local news releases from local organizations and highlighting accomplishments and milestones of local people. There's lots of local content in your local paper.

Hopefully this answers some questions about the newspaper and how decisions are made, but if there's a question you'd like answered, please email me at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Providing fresh produce to people in need

JON BELBER

The weeds are high. The tomatoes are on the vine, though not quite yet ripe. Many a crop need cultivating and harvesting. There is work to be done on the farm, for the community and the people. These two weeks will be a chance to make headway on cultivating rows of crops, making and spreading compost and connecting rain barrels for coming rains.

About a year ago, I wrote about a new Farm Pantry community service program at Holly Hill Farm for high school students who worked on the farm for a week and ended the week by bringing fresh, organic produce to Father Bill's shelter in Quincy. Well it is late in the summer again and there is still need to grow and bring fresh produce to people in need.

Holly Hill Farm sits just off Jerusalem Road in Cohasset and has lately grown vegetables for the immediate, nearby neighbors, though briefly in the mid-1900s, trucking farming crops to Boston was a common practice. These days, visitors to the farm stand are figuring out how best to use chard, turnips and beets in their next meal.

Sometimes, these local, organic crops can be difficult to negotiate when planning the next meal. Cooking with such often esoteric roots, greens and legumes presents a challenge. Nutritionists and chefs are encouraging folks to eat a wide variety of crops and are creating new food pyramids for all of us to follow. Imagine learning about the health benefits of these veggies and then recipes to best use them. 'Tis a challenge.

Imagine the difficulty for someone facing these vegetables on the shelves of a food pantry. A visit to a food pantry may be the result of many a complex reason. Most shelves in these growing community food pantries are stocked with soups, noodles, dry goods and easy to prepare (heat and serve) meals or supplements to meals.

One of the tasks this week for the high school students should be to provide recipes and strategies for the crops that are not so common, but may indeed be quite healthy. Perhaps there should even be access to a community kitchen for students to apprentice with a chef and cook meals and soups with these vegetables and herbs so as to bring organic vegetables in a more prepared and ready to eat state.

A more direct route of these vegetables to the people in need would keep produce local, fresh and teach about the value of in-season food and meals. But I wax on about an ideal community where kale and pac choi are not just considered high-end greens for the elite, but rather sustainable foods with beneficial nutrients. Grow the crops and share them in a useful way with all who eat and need to know from where their next meal comes.

At the Teak Sherman community garden in Scituate, growers are encouraged to bring known, easy-to-use crops to the food pantry. If there was a community garden in Hingham or Cohasset, I would suggest plotters grow onions, potatoes, tomatoes and squash. When will land be made available for interested growers to embrace the difficult and invigorating opportunity to turn the soil and sow seeds for those in need in the community? It seems we all can provide better food and education about healthy food, from familiar to new crops.

There is room to grow food in our neighborhoods, farms, back yards, gardens and open spaces and a demand to go beyond the same cycle to provide not just dry goods that are on the shelves.

Until we entertain a paradigm shift with new produce and healthy food, the teenagers will work hard at the farm and then head back to Quincy with a variety of ripe fruits and greens, after a week of cultivating and harvesting community service, growing beyond our confines and learning about new ideas for healthy produce.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

TOUR

and a bag with a change of clothes. This time, Lydon isn't coming back.

The musician plans to stay in Seattle, where he hopes his brand of music will flourish.

"As far as what I'm doing, Seattle has a better music scene," said Lydon. "I hope I'll be able to network quickly, play a lot, and meet awesome people."

Lydon's bike tour caught the attention of Amanda Thompson, who started the Ground Level Café in Cohasset, and invited him to play a show.

"It was one of those friend of a friend things," Thompson said of how she discovered Lydon. "I saw that one of my friends was sponsoring this guy to take his bike on tour across the country and it blew my mind. I thought he was crazy until I heard his music, and then I realized everyone was going to love him. And I wanted to love him first, so I invited him to Ground Level."

Lydon's sound is a unique blend of indie-folk and alt-rock, with reverb guitar and falsetto vocals. He counts folk act Bon Iver as an influence, although the first music he identified with growing up was heavy metal, said Lydon, a Norwood native.

"I started off playing guitar because I wanted to play Metallica and Pantera. I was the metal head kid with long hair; I wanted to play solos and play really fast," said Lydon, adding that it's a stark contrast from his current style. "What I'm playing now is a complete 180."

Lydon uses an eight-string guitar and non-traditional time signatures to create his unique sound. While the style is artistic, there is a mathematical method behind the dreamy chord progressions. Lydon is doing that on purpose.

"I would say my influences, even heavy metal and stuff like that, definitely shaped the way I look at music as far as the mathematics and structures behind music," he said. "I love numbers, counting, and weird time signatures; I like making really long patterns that add up to four-four."

Lydon attended Emerson College, where he studied music and audio engineering so that he could record his own material, as well as help other musicians record theirs. This enables Lydon to be able to control his sound.

"I like the 'do it yourself' philosophy," he said. "Everything for me has been 'DIY.' I like being in control of what my music sounds like, 100 percent."

Lydon caught the "DIY" spirit from Iver, whose first album was written and recorded in a log cabin.

"It inspires me with the whole biking thing— you've got to clear your mind, push yourself to the limit of what you know about yourself," said Lydon. "I'm going to be writing these honest pieces of music that are as emotional as possible."

Building a fan base

Whatever it is he's doing, fans are getting onboard.

Lydon's music has already garnered international interest, recently having a song played on a podcast in the U.K.

"They were saying incredible things about me, and they don't even know me," Lydon said of the radio show, humbled that people "genuinely like" his music.

"It's so comforting and gratifying to me," he said. "I'm writing my music for myself, and at the same time people connect to it; that's very important."

The indie musician engineers his own sound during his live shows, arriving to gigs equipped with his guitar, keyboard, laptop, and amp.

"When I play live, I do the drum programming, have a keyboard setup with ProTools on my laptop, and am always scrolling through different keyboard sounds," said Lydon. "There's always a lot going on. Everything about my set is so meticulous; all the buttons have to be pressed a certain way. The way I designed my set with all the gear I have, everything is controlled by me on stage. I have a fair enough idea of what it should sound like, but I like being able to adjust things on my own."

This setup makes it easy for Lydon to play on the street, anytime, anywhere. Since he is still booking gigs for his upcoming tour, the musician said that he plans to busk along his route. The spontaneity helps keep the trip exciting for the nomadic musician.

Boston indie singer-songwriter-musician Leo Lydon manages to pack all of his gear on his bicycle. He is playing a live show in Cohasset prior to leaving for his cross-country bicycle tour that ends in Seattle.
COURTESY PHOTO

"I like having the option to play a show live [anywhere]," said Lydon. "I can play on the top of a mountain or the side of a cliff, video tape it and post it online later, almost real-time of what's going on." This enables his fans to be part of his tour every step along the way. "I want to be as involved with social media as possible so everyone can follow me everywhere and see what I'm doing as it's happening."

Lydon kept a blog of his trip to Toronto last summer; he'll do the same this year, adding more photos and videos, all so those following his adventure can see it all through his eyes.

"People want to see more visual stuff, and I want people to feel they're a part of it because they definitely are," he said. "I'm going to be alone, so any interaction with people is going to be great."

A one-man band on a bicycle tour is the ultimate independent music venture, but Lydon hasn't always been a solo act.

"I was in a band up till January and was not doing my singer-songwriter stuff," he shared. However, it was "hard to get people on the same page and find people that are serious about [music]. For most people it's a hobby— I want to do this for a living."

Not to mention, "It's hard to find people who want to bike across the country!"

Final preparations

Lydon kicks off his tour in less than two weeks, and is tying up loose ends before he goes, training for that long bike ride, trying to sell his car – "I can't really bring anything with me," he said – and finalize gigs. He is also coordinating tour stops in bicycle shops with a local sponsor, Allston-based bike helmet company Bern Unlimited.

Boston-area fans have a few chances to catch Lydon's live show before he leaves, including tonight's show in Cohasset. Lydon is playing at the Ground Level Café at 8:30 p.m. Attendees are encouraged to bring an extra dollar to help fuel the musician's cross-country adventure.

It's an opportunity to support one local musician's dreams as he embarks on the adventure of a lifetime.

"I grew up here, I've lived here 24 years and am leaving everything I've ever known to do this," said Lydon, hoping that his journey sparks something in other people. The indie musician's message? "You shouldn't be trapped in a dead-end job and feeling like you're going through the motions."

GROUND LEVEL

Two coffeehouse events in August

Cohasset's Ground Level Coffeehouse is hosting two nights of good music, good community, and really good coffee in August at Beechwood Congregational, 51 Church St.

Aug. 2: Young Adult Coffeehouse

The first event on Friday, Aug. 2, is the open mic, concert, and jam session for tweens, teens and young adults—open to junior high students through twenty-somethings.

See you in the Beechwood basement from 7 to 10 p.m. for open mic, coffee, art, friendship, and magic (yes, a magician is slated to perform).

The regularly programmed first-Friday coffeehouse will feature Boston's Leo Lydon. Two weeks after the event, Lydon will be hitting the road on a trans-American bike voyage to get his music on the map, where it deserves to be. As always, Ground Level entry, coffee, and snacks are on a suggested-donation basis, but if you can spare an extra dollar, it would help fuel this guy's epic dream!

Interested in open mic? You don't have to sing – you can tell a story or read a poem, you could do a magic trick, you could speed paint, or anything else creative – pitch your idea to ground_level@ymail.com. Email to sign up for the open mic and be prepared to do a sound check at 6:30 the night of the event.

Not ready to take the stage alone? Bring your instrument and stick around till about 9:45 to close out the night with an easy, all-inclusive jam session.

Aug. 9: Ground Level for Grown-Ups

If your driver's license is oriented in the "landscape" rather than the "portrait" direction, then this is the event for you! Slightly more sophisticated and slightly less chaotic than our typical hang/jam/eat sugar teens-and-twenties nights, the evening of Aug. 9 is dedicated to all the parents, friends and neighbors who are jealous of the cool new café their kids are hanging out at these days.

As always, the music, art, and coffee-drinking fun starts at 7 p.m. and winds down at 10.

For more information, call 781-383-0808, email Ground_Level@ymail.com, or "like" Ground Level on Facebook: www.facebook.com/groundlevelcohasset.

BASKETBALL

Stars come home

Alumni stars return to edge current varsity in new Summer Classic

The Cohasset Mariner

A passing thought became a reality as the Cohasset Boys Varsity Basketball team played CHS alumni basketball players in a new summer classic, Tuesday night,

Twelve of the fourteen alumni that played for Coach Bo Ruggiero since his arrival to Cohasset for the 2008-2009 season hit the hardwood once again, competing against the younger, fresher legs of Coach Ruggiero's 2013-2014 Varsity basketball team.

In regulation, the Alumni squeaked out a 71-69 win.

The varsity found themselves down by double-digit points in the second half, but they found their opponents achilles heal; stamina.

Varsity team coach Chris Haggerty had his young guys run their patented fast break and the older guys struggled a bit to slow it down. Only the defense of the veterans kept the youngsters from getting the win.

Alumni Coach Jim Richardson told his players that it might be tough to get

JR. LEGION BASEBALL

To the wire

Post 118 battles into final innings of State Tournament

The Scituate Mariner

The Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 Jr. American Legion baseball team has had a dream season.

In just the second year of the program, the team made it all the way to the State Championship Tournament, and as of Tuesday night, was two wins away from a title.

Tuesday night under the lights at Community Field in North Attleboro, Post 118 fought to stay alive in the double elimination tournament against undefeated Methuen Post 122.

With one loss, in the opening game of the tournament, a second loss meant elimination.

Post 118 pulled out the win, rolling to what felt like an easy 9-3 victory to send them into the final day of the tournament needing two wins to take the title.

The locals wound up finishing just short of the title, losing the championship game 11-3 to Methuen.

Cohasset had a 1-0 lead in the fourth, but Methuen notched a three-run homer and a solo homerun in the fifth to take control, and with the momentum went on to win.

Post 118 will still advance to the Regionals in Windsor, Conn. next Friday as one of the two teams representing Mass.

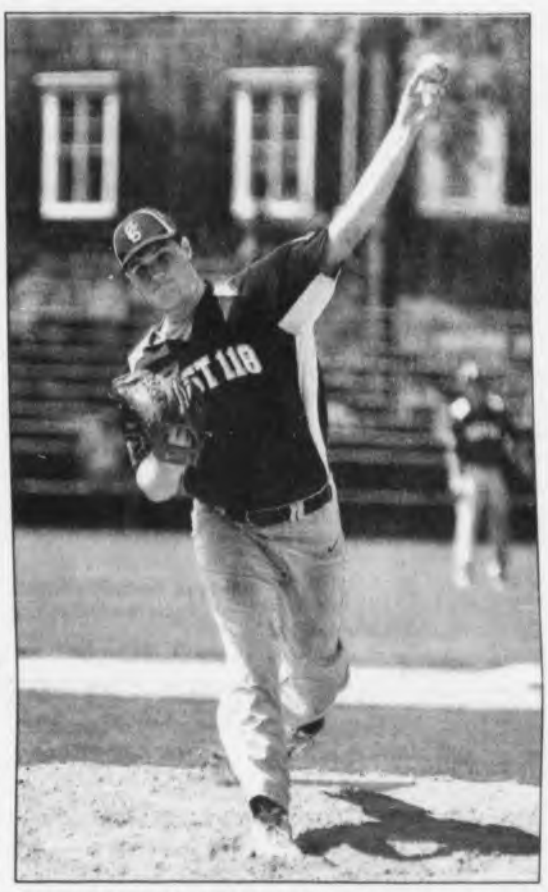
In the first game on Wednesday, Cohasset rolled to a 13-1 win over host team North Attleboro in a game stopped early by mercy rule.

To get to play on Wednesday, Post 118 had a big win over Methuen on Tuesday.

Methuen threatened early putting runners on first and third in the bottom of the first, but Post 118 second baseman Nick Hall turned a line drive into an inning ending double play, nailing the runner off of first. Hall's defense seemed to give Cohasset the life it was lacking early when Tommy O'Brien and Jake O'Donoghue followed with back-to-back singles. Methuen's pitcher felt the pressure mounting and walked Jake Burchill, Joe Kensinger and Timmy Chase resulting in an early 4-0 lead for Cohasset.

Charlie Blackington found his groove early and allowed only one run and three hits into the seventh inning before he tired and was relieved by Tommy O'Brien who came on with runners at first and second and struck out the side.

Blackington didn't just pitch a gem he also homered, doubled and walked to help Post 118 advance to Wednesday night's finals in which Cohasset faced North Attleboro Post 49 at 5 p.m. in the loser's bracket final. A Cohasset win would have set up a rematch with Methuen squad at 8 p.m. to capture the State Title, both games at Community Field in North Attleboro (Results were unavailable at press time).



Monday afternoon, Post 118 flexed its muscle with a 12-2 mercy rule victory over Dartmouth Post 307

Not quite the expected result

Senior Legion plays hard but struggles for wins

There are times when the best plans look great on paper, but in reality don't turn out to be anything close to the original thinking.

That was the season in a nutshell for Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 American Legion baseball team, as they finished the season with just four wins.

"We had the college kids," General Manager Scott Arnold said. "On paper it looked good, but July to June without swinging a baseball bat is a long time. We had

TALKING GOLF

Relics of my religion

Here are four of the clubs Francis Ouimet used to win the 1913 US Open at The Country Club in Brookline. From left to right, they are a jigger, mid-iron, mashie and mashie-niblick. PHOTO COURTESY OF THE UNITED STATES GOLF ASSOCIATION

While baseball might have been one of Annie Savoy's religions in Bull Durham, golf is one of mine and why not?

It's a world where everyone lives by the rules and cheating is the worse sin.

And when you break the rules, no questions asked: you accept the penalty. There is no jury, no attorneys, no plea-bargaining allowed.

Last week I was privileged to visit the Holy Land (The Country Club), a sanctuary of the entitled where cell phone are prohibited and everybody walks the golf course, unless you have a medical dispensation.

I was fortunate to view holy relics that were carefully handled with cotton gloves, just as you would a da Vinci or Michelangelo masterpiece.

There was a niblick, a jigger, a mashie-niblick and a mid-iron. They were the actually clubs Shia LaBeouf used to win the US Open in Brookline one hundred years ago.

It was a miraculous victory, especially when you realize these rudimentary clubs are as unforgiving as Vince Wilfork in spandex.

You play golf and never heard of a jigger or a sammy or a mid-iron?

Back in the day, when Mass was said in Latin, golf clubs were made out of wood and iron and were not numbered. They all had names.

A jigger was a low-lofted iron used for bump-and-run shots; a mid-iron was similar to a 2-iron. A mashie was about a 5-iron and a mashie-niblick was similar to a 7-iron.

Other clubs you might have in your bag included a niblick, (9-iron), the brassie (2-wood), spoon (3-wood), wooden cleek (5-wood) and sammy (utility club with a rounded back).

The only clubs whose names survive today, ironically, are two unnumbered clubs the putter and the driver. Oh, the wedge had yet to be invented.

These relics were on display at TCC last week, promoting the US Amateur's return to Brookline on the 100th anniversary of the young amateur's 1913 US Open playoff victory over English supermen Harry Vardon and Ted Ray.

It was monumental. The victory placed golf on the front page of newspapers for the first time and inspired a generation to take up the game.

To this day, the unlikely victory in 1913 is celebrated among the greatest moments in American sports history.

After his victory, Ouimet gave his clubs to Eddie Lowery, his 10-year-old caddie, who years later sold them to a good friend.

In 2007, the USGA, who already had Ouimet's putter in its museum, was fortunate to acquire these clubs from a Connecticut couple who had obtained the clubs from Lowery's friend and subsequently cared for them for some 25 years.

Of the four clubs, the jigger stands out as perhaps the most important,

It was used to play two of the most important shots of the championship.

In the fourth round, Ouimet needed to birdie one of the two finishing two holes to tie Vardon and Ray.

He knocked his jigger on to the17th hole green, just 15 feet from the flagstick and made the putt for a birdie 3.

And in the playoff, again at No. 17, now leading Vardon by one stroke and Ray by five, Ouimet rifled his approach to 20 feet and made the birdie putt to insured his victory.

You could say he knew the 17th green like is his backyard, probably because he lived not 100 yards away from the green and often snuck on in the early morning and at sunset for practice..

And who knows, if Ouimet s victory didn't capture working class America's heart, the game might have been regulated to the backburner, such as other foreign sports as polo, cricket and soccer.

South area golfers' dominate the game

It's been a banner year for golfers from our region and it seems to only get better.

For instance, just last week Thorny Lea's Matt Parziale won the prestigious Francis Ouimet Memorial Tournament in unusual fashion and 15-year-old Megan Khang of Rockland advanced to the semifinals of the US Girls' Junior Championship in Indiana.

Parziale, survived a five-hole playoff to win the rain-shortened championship last Friday at Woodland GC in Newton. It's not his first Ouimet title. Parziale, 24, won the Ouimet in 2009 before he gave pro golf a whirl.

As for Khang, it's not her first dance at the Junior Prom and won't be her last..

She was the youngest player ever to qualify in 2009 when she was 11. She is a veteran of the Girls Junior, making her fifth straight appearance and in the tournament's 65-year history, only 38 players have played in five or more.

"It's a huge event and I love playing in it," Khang told reporters in Indiana. "I just want to keep coming back. Even if I'm too old, I want to keep coming back ... but I know I can't."

Unless the championship is moved off its traditional late-July date, Khang will be eligible for two more US Girls' Juniors Championships before she turns 18, meaning she is on pace to tie Margot Morton's record of seven appearances.

Khang, who is ranked among the top girls in the nation by Golfweek magazine, should walk away with this championship trophy someday soon.

But Khang and Parziale are not the only golfers having a great summer.

Golfers for the region have been piling away hardware.

John Hadges of Easton won the Norfolk County Classic and the Hornblower Memorial to start the year.

Marshfield pro Geoff Sisk won the Cape Cod Open in May. But that was only the beginning. Sisk made headlines by surviving two qualifying tournament to play in the US Open at Merion (Pa.) GC in June.

West Bridgewater native and Brockton Country Club member Mike Calef, who now calls Texas home, captured the State Amateur for the second year in a row.

And you cannot forget Doug Clapp of Old Sandwich GC in Plymouth. He finished second to Hadges in the Norfolk County Class and in the Hornblower. Clapp also made the cut at the State Open; went deep into match play at the State Amateur; and had a respectable finish at the Ouimet Memorial last week.

His efforts have him in first place for the Massachusetts Golf Association's Player of the Year standings. Clapp has 566 points. Parziale is chasing him in second play with 470 points while Calef has 350 points and Hadges has 325.

Another player who will be making headlines is Easton's Ryan Riley, the 2011 State Amateur champion. Riley is one of the few locals who earned a berth in the upcoming US Amateur at The Country Club.

And there is Brendan Ridge of Hanover and the Harmon Club. He was the youngest competitor at the State Amateur. He also fashioned the best qualifying round (a 3-under 69) for this week's State Junior Championship at the Essex County Club in Manchester-By-The-Sea, where he has to be considered one of the favorites.

Of course, on the women's side, Tara Joy-Connolly dominated the Edith Noblit Baker tournament, a WGAM major, winning by a whopping 10 strokes. To be fair, they played it on her home course, Cohasset. But it was her sixth Baker victory since 1997.

And there are others, such as Norwell native Ben Spitz earned low amateur at the State Open; Herbie Aikens, who advanced to the USGA Public Links Championship in Lorton, Va.; and Blue Hill CC's Isabel Southard, who is one of the rising juniors.

It's been a good summer.

Parziale is a great story. [In full journalist disclosure, he is a friend who caddied for us when he was a junior. I still feel bad for the time he was fore-caddying and one of my errant shots headed in his direction. In an attempt to elude my missile, he smashed his face into a tree, leaving an awful bruise. I still haven't gotten over it.]

He gave the pro tour a whirl and realized how difficult it was and has his amateur standing reinstated.

At the Ouimet last week, the first two rounds were played at Wollaston GC and Wellesley CC; the final round is always played at Woodland – Ouimet's home course – but last Friday's rain made that impossible.

Parziale was tied after the first two rounds with Cody Paladino of Wethersfield (Conn.) CC and John Flaherty of TPC River Highlands, also in Connecticut. The three were knotted at 3-under par 139. Seeing that there was only a short window of good weather, tournament officials decided to cancel the final round, but have the competitors tied for the lead play a three-hole aggregate playoff on the 16th, 17th and 18th holes. Parziale took an early lead after hitting a 9-iron to five inches on the 17th, but three-putted from 44 feet on 18 to extend the playoff against Paladino. Flaherty bogeyed 18 to drop out, and the playoff then went to sudden death. It ended on the 17th after Paladino drove out of bounds and eventually double-bogeyed while Parziale made a routine par.

"This was very special to win here again. I'm feeling good about my game, and feel that if I can get in contention I have a chance," Parziale told Becky Blaeser of the Massachusetts Golf Association.

As for Khang, eventual champion Gabriella Then of Upland, Calif., beat her, 2-and-1, in the semifinals.

Aimola will be missed

Dolph Aimola, 87, died last Saturday at 4 o'clock in the morning, which was about the time he would rise every day to prepare for his position as starter at South Shore Country Club. He was as much a part of South Shore Country Club as the greens and the tees and is fondly remember by all of its members. Even before his death, South Shore Country Club was going to pay special tribute to their longtime starter by bestowing his name on the SSCC Four-Ball tournament, scheduled for this Saturday and Sunday. Everyone there is heartbroken he cannot be on have to savor the celebration as was planned.

Dolph was involved in the founding of the old South Shore Two-Ball Championship some fifty years ago until the tournament expired when South Shore CC went dark in 1985. Eventually, Hingham took the land by eminent domain and restored the golf course. Three years ago it was Dolph who was a force to revive the tournament. In his youth, Dolph was a talented athlete, playing football (semi-pro ball for the old Quincy Manets) and golf. He received an award from the Massachusetts Golf Association for his dedicated work with the old two-ball tournament and also received the Executive of the Year Award from the Tournament Players League.

Fairways and greens

Jake Shuman of Blue Hill CC in Canton advanced to match play at the U.S. Junior Amateur Championship in Truckee, Calif., before bowing out in the first round . . . Nate Davis of Taunton won the Rockland Open on Sunday for the third straight year with a 7-over-par 115 at Rockland Golf Course. D.J. Arsenault, playing with a prosthetic left leg, captured the overall low net title at 1-over 109. In the Rockland Junior Open played earlier in the week, Chris Flipp (61) won the boys' title and Christine Cutting (72) was the girls' champion . . . Only a few positions remain to be a part of a unique volunteer experience at the Aug. 28-Sept. 2 Deutsche Bank Championship. The deadline to register is Aug. 15 or until all of the positions are filled to work with the PGA Tour professionals at TPC Boston in Norton..Available committees include: Marshals, Premium Access, Shotlink Scoring, Spectator Experience, Cart Services, Fan Information, Kid Zones and Monsterboard Scoring. Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

by Brett Dooley, Charlie Blackington and Jake O'Donoghue mixed in with a walk to William Roach and an RBI ground out by Tommy O'Brien. In the second a leadoff walk to Nick Hall and a single by Timmy Chase advanced Hall to third. Brett Dooley then hit a sacrifice fly scoring Hall for a 3-0 lead.

Dartmouth battled back in bottom of the second with a leadoff triple, an infield error and three consecutive walks which resulted in a 3-2 score until Jake Burchill came on to relieve starter Jack Chamberlain and get the third out.

Cohasset added to their lead in the third after a triple by Tommy O'Brien was followed by a two run home run deep to left by Jake Burchill, Joe Cavanaro worked a walk and came around to score after a double by Nick Hall and a sacrifice fly by Timmy Chase.

In the fourth Post 118 added two more runs when Tommy O'Brien followed Jake O'Donoghue's single with a two run shot to left center, Post 118 now led 8-2.

Burchill got through the third unscathed but loaded the bases in the fourth; giving up a single and two walks but Peter Belval came on to throw one pitch which resulted in a 5-2-3 double play to get out of the inning.

Cohasset then added four more runs to reach the ten run "Mercy Rule"; Blackington tripled and O'Donoghue knocked him in with a sacrifice fly. O'Brien and Belval singled and Hall hit a three run home run to left, 12-2.

Sunday was another blowout, with Post 118 rolling over Hanover Post 149, 17-4.

The Sunday win was huge in two ways.

Most importantly, after a loss on Saturday, any loss meant elimination. Secondly, there was a big confidence boost by beating Hanover, a team that most players were familiar with through AAU.

Four of Cohasset's players and five of the Hanover players are currently teammates on their AAU 15U team, which is coached by Don Cornell who was also coaching Hanover's Junior Legion team.

Cohasset coaches Darin Souza and John Cavanaro were the ones advancing with the 17-4 win.

Cohasset sent out their big lefty William Roach and pounded out 14 hits including two home runs by Jake O'Donoghue.

Will Roach lets a strike go by during Post 118's win over Hanover on Sunday.

Cohasset also took advantage of eight walks and two hit batsmen in the win.

Tommy O'Brien led off the top of the second with a single, O'Donoghue followed with a single and Jake Burchill loaded the bases on the first of his three walks on the day. Peter Belval then ripped an RBI single, Nick Hall lined a double into left center and Brett Dooley also doubled to left, Cohasset led 6-0 entering the bottom of the inning.

Hanover managed to score a run in the second but Jake O'Donoghue answered that run with a bomb to deep left restoring Cohasset's six run lead.

Cohasset pushed three more runs across in the fourth on a Tim Chase single, three bases on balls, a hit batter and a sacrifice fly to lead 10-1. Hanover fought back with two runs in the bottom of the fifth but Cohasset answered with two of their own in the sixth on O'Donoghue's second long ball of the day, for a 12-3 lead.

They didn't stop there, in the top of the seventh Cohasset/Scituate scored five more runs on singles by Nick Hall, Tim Chase, William Roach and Charlie Blackington for a final score of 17-4.

Roach only allowed three hits in 4-1/3 innings and gave way to Jake Burchill who came on to strike out both batters on six pitches with runners on first and second and two runs just in.

Burchill also pitched the sixth and Jack Chamberlain got some work pitching the seventh.

Offensively Jake O'Donoghue was the story, belting two home runs and added a single, Brett Dooley was 3-for-3 with two walks and both Tim Chase and Nick Hall had two hits. Defensive play of the game went to Hall who dove to his right and backhanded a flip to second to get out of a jam in the second.

Saturday's opener was a tough 7-3 loss to Wilbraham Post 286.

Wilbraham entered the tourney with a high powered offense but Blackington kept their offense at bay until Cohasset could push a few runs across in the third.

Tim Chase led off the top of the third with a walk and Brett Dooley followed with single to left, the next two batters were retired on strikeouts but with two outs and runners now on second and third Tommy O'Brien blasted a long double to deep center scoring both runners, to take a 2-0 lead.

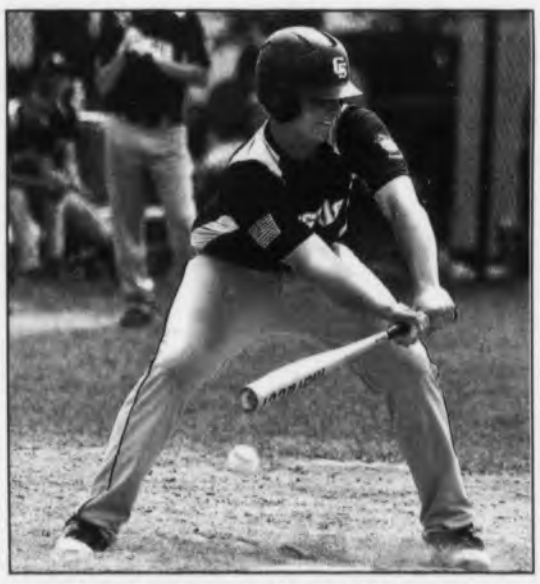
Wilbraham began to mount a comeback in the bottom of the third scoring an unearned run on two Cohasset errors and then tied the game in the fourth on a solo homerun to deep left.

They didn't stop there; after a walk, a stolen base and a single Wilbraham took their first lead at 3-2.

In the bottom of the fifth Wilbraham plated another run after a leadoff walk, stolen base and another single, Cohasset Post 118 found themselves trailing 4-2.

Blackington left after five innings giving up only three hits while recording seven strikeouts.

Wilbraham padded their lead in the bottom of the sixth scoring three more runs to take a commanding 7-2 lead into the final frame.



Cohasset managed to plate another run on back-to-back doubles by Dooley and William Roach.

Charlie Blackington took the hill and pitched well for Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 on Tuesday night. He also homered in a 9-3 victory.

Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 Jr. Legion's Brett Dooley takes a lead off third on Sunday against Hanover.

Jake O'Donoghue drops a bunt against Hanover on Sunday.

Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 Jr. Legion players wait to greet Charlie Blackington at the plate after Blackington's homer gave Post 118 a 5-0 lead over Methuen on Tuesday night.

Richard Roach and Tim Kensinger back. They were four-year veterans. They were going to lead the team. Unfortunately, they didn't play all that well."

Part of the trouble was the fact that the guys weren't playing college baseball. Arnold said they got better with every at-bat, but it was too late.

Furthering the trouble was the fact that injuries crept in.

"Chris Murphy, a college freshman from Cohasset went down with a sprained hand early in the season," Arnold said. "Chase Michaud (Scituate grad and HS pitcher) was the same way. He made the JV at Alabama, but was an outfielder."

"On paper we had seasoned veterans that looked unbeatable," Arnold said. "It was basically the same team we brought to Riverside (State Tournament two years ago). This year it just didn't meld."

In the future, the team will have a different look.

"In 2015 they begin doing away with the 19-year old's," Arnold said. "We're starting to phase that out. It's one of the reasons I started the Junior Program."

Still, this year's team had potential.

Next year looks promising.

"The Junior team in its second season," Arnold said. "Last year they were eliminated in the first round of the playoffs. This year is pretty much the same kids. They're in the State Championships. Next year there will be six kids too old for this team."

Those kids will be moving up.

Arnold created the Post 118 Legion team several years ago, with the feeling that he wanted to bring back the feeling of what Legion ball was when he played.

His son Scott is currently playing on the Junior team

"He's the baby on the team," Arnold said of his son. It's amazing. He made it on his own will. I told him that there weren't many 14-year olds that could make it."

On the big team, Tim Kensinger was a captain.

"Tim was our backbone," Arnold said. "He kept our spirits up."

Another key players was Brendan O'Connell.

"Brendan threw a one-hitter against Stoughton," Arnold said. "He had a no-no going into the sixth. He did really well. He jumped into the rotation and pitched extremely well."

As far as winning goes, Post 118 started slowly, but played hard all the way through the season.

"One time we lost six in a row," Arnold said. "They were all pretty close, 3-1, 3-2 games. The kids still had great attitudes. Our first win was a forfeit against Hyde Park. They were thrilled to get it. Then Brendan O'Connell got the next win with his one-hitter. The other two wins were from Chris Smith.

"Chris is a recent Scituate graduate. He did a great job," Arnold said. "He's very crafty with his off-speed pitches. He was unbelievable.

Arnold said he's still having fun, especially when he looks at the players and coaches like John Cavanaro, who has done an outstanding job leading the Jr. team to the Finals. John orchestrated this whole thing, the whole program. I just outfit them."

Arnold did help run the Sr. team, with help from former player Patrick Stewart and long-time coach Bob Barrow.

"Patrick Stewart apprenticed under me," Arnold said. "Hopefully next year I can float between the teams next year."

PMC

Cohasset residents get ready to ride

On Aug. 3 and 4, 14 Cohasset residents will ride in the 34th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC), the nation's pioneer charity bike-a-thon that raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country. They will ride up to 190 miles to support adult and pediatric cancer care and research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Many participants have personal stories about why they ride and raise money. Dennis Newman, of Cohasset, is one of these people.

Dennis Newman of Cohasset and Chris Crooks of Norfolk, Mass., both 45, have been riding their bikes together since before nursery school. Today, they ride with a purpose. On Aug. 3, the two lifelong friends expect to put their cycling skills to good use and accomplish a goal near and dear to both of them. This year, the two co-captains of Team Zipcar, along with the rest of the team, expect to exceed the $1M mark in donations raised for Dana Farber's annual PanMass Challenge, a two-day 190-mile bike-a-thon that raises money for the fight against cancer. Newman and Crooks have been riding in the event since 2007 when they formed the team with seven friends. Their purpose is singular: to help wipe out cancer.

Today the team has grown to 25 members, but its mission remains the same. Along the way, both men have lost friends and family members to cancer. Last year, four months before the PMC, a fellow team member Chris Cobb, of Medfield, Mass., was diagnosed with an aggressive stomach cancer. He lost his fight against the disease just a few short hours after the team crossed the finish line in Provincetown.

Riders from Cohasset: Matt Belson, Erach Desai, Ken Gainey, Ronald Goldberg, Charles LaBash, Laura LaBash, Bill Litwin, George Mcgoldrick, Susan McMackin, Dennis Newman, William Prendergast, Peter Vitello, Rue Wilson and Mary Noone.

"Chris was an avid cyclist and arguably the most health conscious and physically fit member of the team," said Newman. "His death is a reminder of why we're doing this. If a guy like Chris can get cancer, anybody can. It's no coincidence that Chris died right after the ride. He was an unbelievably committed member of our team and, even though he couldn't ride with us, he continually checked our status by text and he hung in there until he got us across the finish line."

"Every year, the fight gets more personal," added Crooks. "But we're up for it. Reaching a million dollars this year will be fantastic and I know that we'll get it done, but we won't be finished. Not by a long shot. Along with Dana Farber, we're in it for the long haul and won't stop until we've stopped cancer."

Since its inception, the PanMass has contributed over $375 million to Dana Farber's Jimmy Fund. All funds raised through the PMC go directly to funding adult and pediatric cancer care and research. If you wish to help Newman and Crooks reach their goal, donations can be made at www.pmc.org and click on "DONATE".

SOUTH SHORE MUSIC CIRCUS

Bowzer plans Ultimate Doo Wop Party for Cohasset

By R. Scott Reedy
Correspondent

When Jon Bauman brings "Bowzer's Ultimate Doo Wop Party, Volume V" to the South Shore Music Circus on Friday, he will be joined by Vocal Group Hall of Fame member Fred Parris – a singer/songwriter whose 1956 hit helped literally define the era when vocal harmony groups topped the charts.

"The biggest doo wop song of all time has to be 'In the Still of the Night.' It is probably the most classically doo wop song of all time. Many people cite the doo wop, doo wah refrain in the bridge as the origin of the name for the entire genre," explained Bauman recently by telephone from his home in southern California. "It has an interesting history, too, because Fred wrote it one night when he was on National Guard duty. His group, the Five Satins, made it the only song to have charted on the Billboard Hot 100 three separate times, with the same version each time, in 1956, 1960 and 1961."

With Bauman, 65, as host and performer with the Stingrays, this week's lineup will also feature some of the era's other dominant doo wop groups, including Jay Siegel's Tokens ("The Lion Sleeps Tonight"), Lenny Welch ("Since I Fell for You") and the Chiffons ("He's So Fine").

The artists who'll convene in Cohasset this week do so under their original group names, thanks in part to Bauman's work on Truth in Music efforts nationwide. When Bauman — who created the character of the bicep-challenged "Bowzer" when he replaced Alan Cooper as bass singer for Sha Na Na — isn't touring with the Stingrays, he is traveling the country lobbying politicians on behalf of the Truth in Music committee he chairs in the Vocal Group Hall of Fame. With Bauman's leadership, Truth in Music bills — protecting artists from identity theft and consumers from deception and fraud — have been passed in several states, including Massachusetts, where the legislation was championed by State Senators Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and Marc R. Pacheco, D-Taunton.

Bowzer's Ultimate Doo Wop Party Volume V

WHEN: Friday, Aug. 2. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Show at 7:30 p.m.
WHERE: South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset.
TICKETS: $42.50 - $62.50
INFO: 800-514-3849 or themusiccircus.org

When he plays this area, however, Bauman's friends won't only be in the State House. One, Lennie Baker – a Whitman native who now makes his home in Halifax – will be on stage with him along with another old friend and former band mate, Johnny Contardo, for a mini-Sha Na Na reunion. Baker and Bauman both joined Sha Na Na in 1970, while the Brookline-born Contardo, now 61, joined the band as a vocalist in 1971. All three remained with the group through its television heyday, 1977 to 1981, and memorable appearance as Johnny Casino and the Gamblers in the 1978 movie musical version of "Grease." Bauman and Contardo exited in 1983, while Baker remained a Sha Na Na saxophonist and vocalist until retiring in 1999. These days, the 67-year-old is semi-retired, returning to the spotlight rarely, usually only when coaxed there by Bauman.

"I've done shows with Lennie, and with Johnny, over the years, but the first time all three of us worked together again was when we reunited in Cohasset two years ago. Johnny and Lennie worked very hard and were both big parts of the success of Sha Na Na. It is always great when the three of us get together."

"Lennie Baker is one of my closest friends from Sha Na Na and one of the funniest men alive. Probably 95 percent of the best Sha Na Na stories you'll ever hear involve Lennie. He is also godfather to my daughter, Nora. The feeling is just amazing when Lennie and I work together. And I always enjoy working with Johnny, too. He still sounds terrific. Lennie, Johnny, and I never did that much together, except for 'In the Still of the Night,' which we'll probably do again at these shows. We may also do 'Lovers Never Say Goodbye.' It is always great to be back together with Lennie and Johnny. We're a lot older and wiser now than the first time around."

LAURA'S CENTER FOR THE ARTS

Sampou is happy to be home again

By J.B. Geany

After her performance this past Saturday at the outdoor amphitheater at Laura's Center for the Arts, folk/blues musician Les Sampou explained that stepping onstage for her friends is nothing like playing in front of an anonymous crowd.

The prolific Sampou has performed extensively throughout her career, playing with notable talents both in her own band and otherwise. But Sampou has been waiting for her chance to perform at the South Shore's newest venue – part of the Emilson YMCA in Hanover -- since she saw it under construction.

Sampou and her band were honored as the first musicians to utilize the center's outdoor amphitheater. It turned out to be the perfect summer night for music and a little local camaraderie.

Sampou, after seeing the completed venue up close for the first time, was impressed.

"This place is amazing," she said. "It's going to be great for a performer like me."

As a member of the South Shore YMCA, Sampou said, she's watched Laura's Center for the Arts grow. She compared the finished center to a "Mini-Tanglewood" and explained that the center is sweeping enough to accommodate a large crowd without losing any connection between performer and audience.

"There's an intimacy there," she said.

That intimacy was evident Saturday night as Sampou's friends, students, and "townie" fans appeared to literally cheer her on. The performer responded by smiling and joking with the familiar crowd throughout the night.

Located at the beautiful Emilson YMCA, Laura's Center is situated in the open but not far from an expansive treeline, offering the ideal ambiance for outdoor concerts and theater. When Sampou stepped onstage, she greeted her crowd eagerly, saying, "It's good to see my friends here."

Her friends, it seems, were on Sampou's mind throughout the show. Between songs, Sampou added a personal element to the performance by talking about her life before Norwell and how her life has changed since she adopted the town. Her songs ranged in tone from sullen country/blues to high-energy numbers.

She performed "Motorcycle Mama," a request yelled from the audience, and even teased another fan about a romantic interest before breaking into a song called "Crush," which is off her upcoming album.

"We definitely want to get this place packed, make it a real viable place to hear some music," Sampou told the crowd during a quick tuning break. And, while Sampou was quick to show off her talent, she was just as quick to promote the stage. As a local musician, Sampou knows very well that local venues like Laura's Center for the Arts offer musicians some of their most fun performance opportunities.

Although Sampou has shared the stage with some of today's finest musicians, she explained her love of hometown sets: "There's a neat feeling, like I need to care for my audience more than when I'm in a room full of strangers. When I'm in a room full of strangers, it's more about my art, my music, my show."

Sampou's set displayed a personal, multifaceted quality often absent from less intimate concerts. At Laura's Center, Sampou the artist was hard to distinguish from Sampou the neighbor, the mother, and the music teacher.

Eyeing the familiar faces of her students as they filled in the stands, Sampou said, "I have so many of my singing students here. It's wonderful." After the show, Sampou confided that so many of her voice teachers over the years never bothered to sing in front of her, never offered to prove their talent. Sampou was determined to use this performance not only to showcase her voice to her most diehard local fans, but also to offer special encouragement to her ambitious music students.

Sampou shared the Laura's Center stage with guitarist Phil Sottile and bassist Chuck Vath. The trio played songs off her previous albums and two off her upcoming album. Sottile, a relatively new addition to the group, wowed the audience with his multi-guitar talents. He was the perfect accompaniment to Sampou's lead guitar, keeping pace with her dynamic voice and live flourishes. The choice of songs displayed Sampou's eclectic Americana tastes and seemed to strike a perfect pitch in the outdoor seats.

Sampou's new album is set to come out within a year. The artist calls it a product of "imagination and some autobiography, combined."

"It's never one or the other," she added. "There's always a little bit of each."

For now, Sampou is composing and recording the new album in her home studio. She isn't certain if the finished cut will be in-home, but Norwell is where most of the creative work is getting done.

In her last song of the set, before a standing ovation and subsequent encore, she dedicated the song "Home Again" to the town of Norwell.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 12, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There might still be some uncertainty about the decision you made. But a quick check of the facts should reassure you that you're doing the right thing.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The tidy Taurean needs to be a little more flexible about accepting some changes to those carefully made plans. You might be pleasantly surprised by what follows.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Consider stepping away from your concentrated focus on your new project for a bit so you can get some perspective on what you've done and where you plan to take it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The understandably angry Crab might not want to accept the reason why someone might have tried to hurt you. But at least you'll have an insight into why it happened.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) There might be some facts you still need to know before leaping onto center stage. Best to move carefully at this time so that you can observe what's happening around you.

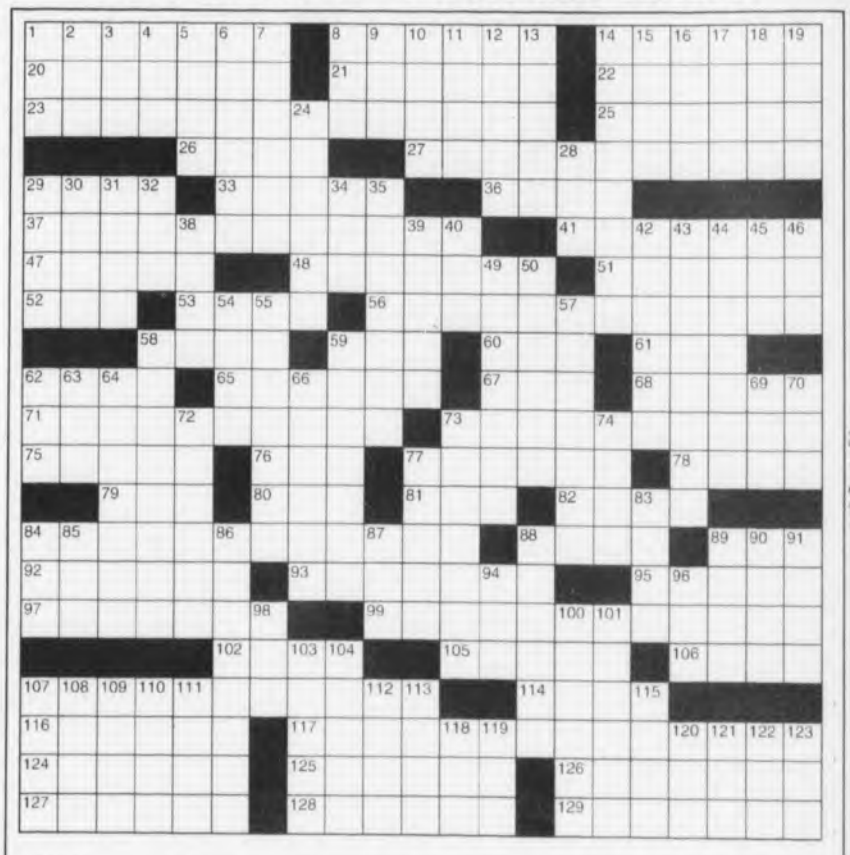
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to expand your outlook by getting out and around, whether you do some long-range traveling or just explore the great things to see closer to home.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your wise counsel continues to be needed as that family situation works itself out. Meanwhile, the decisions you made on your job begin to pay off quite nicely.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your job situation brightens thanks to all your hard work. Now, spend some time repairing a personal relationship you might have neglected for too long.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Aspects favor action in the workplace. Line up your facts and show your superiors why you're the one they're looking for.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your hard work pays off on the job. Personal relationships also can benefit from more of your time and attention. Spend the weekend with loved ones.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Early feedback on your project might be disappointing. But don't be discouraged. Use it to make needed adjustments, then submit it to your superiors again.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Flattery could lure the otherwise sensible Fish into making an unwise decision. Be careful. All that praise might be an attempt to reel you in before you can learn the facts.

(c) 2013 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a wonderful sense of who you are. You are a shining example to others, helping them believe in themselves and what they can do.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Choosing poor-quality vinyl windows is a mistake.

Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT an Andersen Company

Choosing the proper window material is everything.

Even in moderate temperature swings, poor-quality vinyl windows can warp, lose whatever energy efficiency they once had, and invite drafts and leaks.

Significant home improvements are supposed to last, but can you imagine the expense and frustration of replacing your windows a second time, after just a couple of years?

We custom-build our windows from our own patented Fibrex® material. Why did we make our Fibrex® material twice as strong as vinyl? To serve homeowners who only want to replace their windows once.*

Offer ends August 10th!

BUY 1 WINDOW GET 1 WINDOW 40% OFF[1]

WITH

NO MONEY DOWN NO PAYMENTS NO INTEREST FOR 1 YEAR[1]

Minimum purchase of 4 or more. Interest accrues from date of purchase, but is waived if paid in full within 12 months.

Our Fibrex® material is 2X STRONGER THAN VINYL

We use the most stress-free installation method offered by Andersen Windows.

Because our windows are custom-built to fit precisely into your home, we don't disturb your home's interior or exterior. Our Master Installers are craftsmen who are as detailed about their window and patio door installations as they are about their clean up.

Choose your window styles, colors—and even your financing![1]

Choose a program where you don't pay anything for an entire year. Or maybe a low monthly payment feels good to you.[1] Tell us what works in your personal economy.

TOWN MANAGER ACT

Bill sits while legislature in recess

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's petition to amend the Town Manager Act is still wending its way through the legislative process — a long process that could take a little longer.

The Home Rule Petition became a bill with a docket number (H.3486) in May and had a State House hearing in July, during which several citizens and current and former Cohasset officials testified for or against the bill. Now, the bill is still in the hands the joint Senate and House Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government, who will determine whether or not the bill becomes state law.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley said this week that the bill is with the committee, but noted that the legislature takes a recess in the beginning of August. It could be September before the committee takes a vote.

"You can't equate this to two other home rules there that day that had zero opposition."
State Rep. Garrett Bradley

"I checked in and they're doing their due diligence, trying to get it moving," said Bradley, who said in June, prior to the bill getting a hearing date, that it could take until Spring 2014 for the bill to go through the legislative process. March was the "worst case scenario" for when the bill could become law.

Now that the bill has had a hearing, all that's left is for the committee to take a vote. However, since the legislature is currently in recess, the vote may not take place until fall.

Furthermore, since there is some controversy around this particular bill, its passage

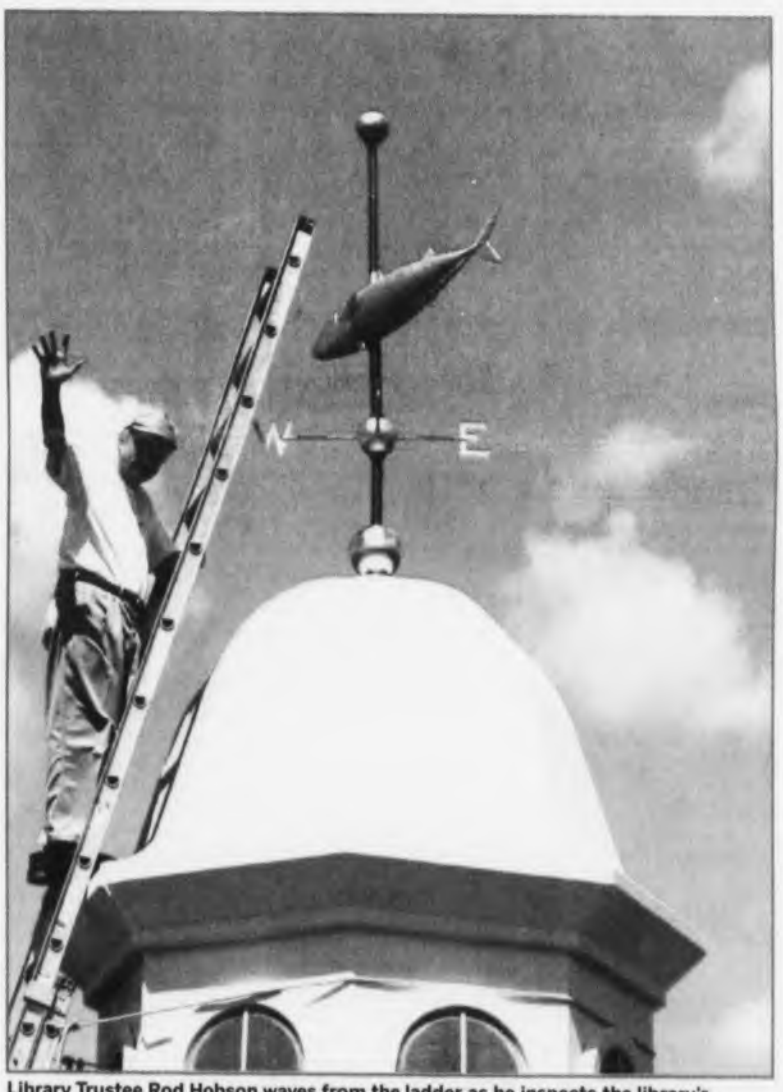
Whither the weathervane?

The library's mackerel weathervane is back

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

An old friend of the Cohasset library's recently returned to its perch.



The library's 110-year-old weathervane underwent repairs following winter storm damage and was reinstalled on the building's cupola last week. The weathervane features a compass and a mackerel fish.

Library trustee Rod Hobson explained that the weathervane had to be taken down after it was bent during a storm this past winter. The town's Director of Project Management and Planning, Brian Joyce, removed the weathervane and took it to the Burgess Company in Pembroke, professional steeplejacks.

"It was bent pretty severely," Hobson said of the weathervane. Burgess "essentially built a whole new mast for it; it's the original weathervane but with a much heavier, sturdier gauge, and a much stronger base."

Now, the weathervane

A Cohasset child in need of a service dog is about to have her wish granted — her very own puppy, Parker, is about to start his special training.

Two years ago, the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation was formed to raise funds to provide the police department and community with a K9 service dog. This year, the CWDF is giving back to the Cohasset community — by donating raised funds to provide individuals with service dogs of their own.

The CWDF raised funds in March for its first annual Cohasset Service Dog Grant, which helps pay for the purchase and training of a personal service dog for a Cohasset resident. Trained service dogs can aid individuals with visual or hearing impairments, seizure disorders, mobility impairments, autism or other serious health issues.

The organization later announced its first recipient — Emmy Naples, 6, of Cohasset. Emmy has a rare genetic disability that affects her vision

PICTURE THIS

Robert St. John

The Mariner caught up with Robert St. John, a graduate student at Simmons College. If you see Robert around town, be sure to mention that you saw him in Picture This! Photo/Erin Dale

Name: Robert (Robby, Rob) St. John.

Occupation: Student, milliner.

Best day of your life: A few years ago, Cohasset got hit by that "hurricane" that got downgraded to a heavy storm, so my friends and I got food and spent the entire day playing video games together.

Best vacation: Definitely a trip I took to Wales. I went with a friend and his family, and we stayed in a small private castle. I got to spend New Years Eve on a castle turret. Also, the food was great.

Favorite season: Winter, hands down; I hate heat, bugs, pollen, and anything else that comes with the spring and summer.

Favorite holiday: Halloween. I may be too old to trick or treat, but I love the amount of creativity some people show when making their costumes. Plus, I sew, so it's a great reason to try new and weird things.

Favorite junk food, meal or dessert: Breakfast sandwiches. Then again, I pretty much love all breakfast foods.

Best book: There can never be just one. The "Bartimaeus" trilogy by Johnathan Stroud and anything written by Brandon Sanderson.

Best movie or actor: "Wreck-It Ralph" and, of course, the original "Star Wars" trilogy.

Best TV show: "My Little Pony: Friendship is Magic."

Best music, group or artist: Lauren Faust (artist).

Pet peeve: Running late for appointments, and when people use my fabric scissors for non-fabric.

Fun fact: To date, I have sewn over 500 hats in the last year.

Person you would most like to meet: Easy, Han Solo.

Goal: Currently I am a graduate student at Simmons for Library Science. So, I would like to get my masters and find a job in a library, archives, or museum position.

Biggest worry: Aside from college loans, finding a job after I graduate. In the general future? Getting Lyme disease... again.

Best part of Cohasset: The library, the deli, the tennis courts, and the view from standing on top of the St. Stephen's bell tower.

CHILD ENDANGERMENT

Nanny, boyfriend arrested, charged

On Friday (Aug. 2) Cohasset Police Officers were called to a strip mall on King Street for a report of an intoxicated male with a toddler.

On arrival, the woman who had called police met with officers. She reported that she observed an adult male, who appeared intoxicated, roaming around the strip mall parking lot with a little boy. This man was displaying the signs and symptoms of intoxication and allowing the child to run in traffic. She had previously observed these two inside a 2003 Nissan Altima that was parked in the lot.

When the reporting party questioned the man about the child, he allegedly told her he did not know the little boy and asked her if she wanted him. She called police at that time.

Officers then encountered the suspect, who was later identified as Rohn C. Hess, 33, of 141 Grove St., Scituate. Hess appeared to be under the influence of drugs and said he and his girlfriend were babysitting this boy, but Hess did not know the boys name or where his girlfriend was, police said. For caution, the Cohasset Fire Department Ambulance was called to the scene to examine the boy. Hess was placed under arrest for Reckless Endangerment of a Child.

Approximately 30 minutes later, a woman, who was later identified as Jennifer Fiori, 26, of 1025 Front St., Weymouth, approached the officers. She told police that she had been using a bathroom at a local gas station, and that she was the little boy's nanny. Officers had probable cause to believe Fiori was under the influence of drugs as well. She too was placed under arrest for Reckless Endangerment of a Child, police said.

Further investigation, which involved the Massachusetts Department of Children and Families (DCF), revealed that the little boy is 2 years old and lives with his father in Dorchester. The father hired Fiori to baby sit the boy while he worked. The child was turned over to his father later in the day at the Cohasset Police Station after being interviewed by Cohasset Police Detectives and DCF investigators. The child was unharmed in this incident.

The 2003 Nissan Altima that Hess and Fiori had been traveling in was towed from the scene. The car is registered to Fiori. During the inventory of the car, multiple hypodermic needles and other drug paraphernalia were seized from the passenger compartment and the trunk. Also located inside the car were (5) military-style high capacity ammunition magazines. These ammunition magazines were found inside of a bag with a Massachusetts Health Card bearing Hess' name. Hess will be charged with unlawful possession of high capacity magazines. No ammunition was found.

Hess and Fiori were arraigned in Quincy District Court on Monday, Aug. 5. Hess posted $1,000 cash bail and was released. Fiori was released on personal recognizance. Both were ordered not to be alone with a child under the age of 18, police said. The couple will return to court for a hearing next month.

Acting Cohasset Police Chief William Quigley had high-praise for the woman, who reported this crime, stating, "Thank goodness someone was looking out for this little boy – these two suspects surely were not."

POLICE BEAT

Duo accused of stealing plants can't return to Shaw's

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Two Scituate women have been issued a no-trespass order from Shaw's meaning they can no longer shop at the Cohasset supermarket. Police responded to a call from Shaw's around 7:53 p.m. on Wednesday (July 31) that two women had taken plants from the outside display at the store. The store provided a description of the brown Toyota the women were driving, the plate number and direction of travel. Cohasset police issued a BOLO (Be On the Lookout) and Scituate police stopped the car on Route 3A near the police station there.

Shaw's told police the women had been stealing plants over the summer. Last Wednesday they allegedly took the mosquito plants after they finished their shopping. Cohasset police responded to Scituate. The 47-year-old Scituate woman driving and her passenger, a 69-year-old Scituate woman did not have receipts for the plants.

Police returned the plants, which were valued at $9.99 each, to the store. Shaw's was not interested in pursuing criminal charges, police said.

Harassment

A local landlord is going to face criminal harassment charges for repeatedly harassing one of his tenants including making racial slurs and interfering with the tenant's business, police said. Police have also referred the matter to the Attorney General's Civil Rights Division due to the racial nature of the ongoing alleged harassment.

Seeking help

Callers notified police about woman on Route 3A near the Hingham line who was waving to cars and seeking help at around 10:50 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 3). The 49-year-old Abington woman told police she had had a verbal fight with her boyfriend at the Music Circus; he allegedly grabbed her arm and twisted it during the ride home. She got out of the 2006 Chevrolet pickup truck and he took off. While police were transporting the woman to the station, the pickup truck passed by. Police stopped the truck and placed the 47-year-old Hull man under arrest for domestic assault and battery. The truck was towed.

Suspicious nails

A local resident has reported suspicious rusty nails on her driveway although they are not near where she walks or by the car. She has been collecting them and is concerned that someone may have placed them there. Police said it appears the nails, which are roofing nails, could be the result of a roofing project at the home and may have washed out of the gutter.

Lock out

Police notified the alarm company at the Red Lion Inn last week for assistance in letting a person who was staying at the inn gain access. The restaurant at the inn is closed on Monday and when the resident returned, the front door was locked, police said.

Custody swap

A Cohasset woman, who is separated from her husband, asked police to stand by while the couple's kids were "swapped" with the husband in the Dunkin Donuts parking lot last week. Police said the husband did not want to do the swap in the police station parking lot, which is used often by divorced or separated couples. The officer stood by at Dunkin Donuts and the swap was conducted without incident, police said.

Well-being

Police conducted a well-being check on a female motorist who had been reported as slumped over the wheel while parked on Jerusalem Road near the Greek church on Tuesday (July 30) around 10:30 p.m. Police and the ambulance went to the scene but the 59-year-old woman checked out fine and declined medical attention.

Electronics

A female tenant in adjoining apartments at the Red Lion Inn reported on Wednesday (July 31) that the TV and other electronics she had stored in an unoccupied area were missing. Items missing included a 50-inch flat screen TV, Xbox and Nintendo game entertainment system. Detectives are investigating, police said.

Eviction

Police have been called to apartments on Jerusalem Road for a landlord-tenant dispute numerous times in recent weeks. The landlord, who is 30 years old, is in the process of evicting a 59-year-old male tenant. The landlord, who has alleged the tenant has done damage to the unit and has been using the dumpster illegally, has the paperwork and has obtained a no-trespass order for the tenant he is evicting.

Plates

A police officer on traffic detail on Thursday (Aug. 1) around 5:30 p.m. stopped a 1997 Volvo sedan with expired plate. The 41-year-old male operator from Scituate was issued a $100 civil citation for the expired plates. The car was towed, police said.

Checked out

Police responded to a report from Curtis Liquors on Thursday (Aug. 1) at 8:39 p.m. about a possibly drunken woman who left in a 1996 blue-colored Buick. The plates came back to a 53-year-old Hull woman. Hull police went to the residence and found the car. They talked to the woman who appeared to be OK, police said.

Citation

Police said a 55-year-old Cohasset woman was so upset about being pulled over for failure to stay in marked lanes that she called 9-1-1 on her cell phone which went to the State Police as the Cohasset officer was preparing the citation last Thursday (Aug. 1) at 9:45 p.m. The State Police advised the woman to cooperate with the Cohasset officer.

Domestic

A 28-year-old Cohasset woman obtained a restraining order against her husband after he became verbally abusive after she and her mother did not pick him up from work when he called until after they had finished dinner. It was reported that he jumped out of the car on North Main Street but when he returned to the house, he banged on the door and was verbally argumentative. He left for the night and the wife obtained a restraining order the next day.

Charged

A teenage boy in Cohasset was arrested and charged with domestic assault and battery last week after becoming aggressive, threatening his family with a toy gun and punching his mother in the arm, police said.

Housebreak

Police are investigating an apparent break-in to a Jerusalem Road home that occurred while the family was away on vacation. While away, individuals entered the home and did some damage including cigarette burns on the carpet and damage to walls. There were also liquor bottles strewn about.

Hang-ups

A local restaurant reported repeated hang-up phone calls last week. Police advised the restaurateur to notify the phone company to block the calls and find out where they are coming from.

could be an uphill battle for its proponents.

While some have noted that other towns that had bills heard during the same July 23 hearing have already gotten through the joint committee, Bradley noted that the controversial ones take longer to consider.

"They got a lot of opposition at the hearing and have to take time to do their job," Bradley said of the committee. "You can't equate this to two other home rules there that day that had zero opposition."

It could be a long wait for those vested in the bill's passage.

The process began in April, when Town Meeting passed the amended changes to the Town Manager Act (TMA) made by the town's Governance Committee. The original TMA was enacted in 1997 and at the time changed Cohasset's system of town government from a town administrator to town manager form of government.

The retooled Act changes who is eligible to become a town manager – a town employee or volunteer official could apply – and removes a one-year cooling-off period between municipal service and being hired. Selectmen could apply for the position but must have vacated their official position for 15 months; under the old TMA, the cool-off time is only one year.

The revised TMA also brings the town's governing documents – the TMA and town bylaws – into alignment with one another. Other changes include defining a timeline for the town's budget process, appointing auditors, and outlining the process of removing a town manager or dealing with a town manager's absence.

The revisions to the Act have caused divisions amongst Cohasset citizens and officials, some of whom are eager for the change while others prefer the Act the way it was originally written. Several members of the Governance Committee testified for the bill during the July 23 hearing, as did a few of the selectmen, including chairman Fred Koed and selectman Steve Gaumer. Selectman Karen Quigley attended the hearing and spoke as a private citizen against the bill.

Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who was fired in March 2012 after six months on the job, also spoke against the bill, alleging that the changes made to the TMA are to suit one particular person, current Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, former Governance Committee chair.

While those opposing the bill were in the minority at the hearing, the controversy could be enough for the committee to take pause.

Bradley addressed this in an August 1 email to Governance Committee members, responding to an email from GC member Jack Keniley noting that the towns of Sandwich, Hanover and Paxton all had home rule petitions considered at the same time as Cohasset's that had all made it past the joint committee and were close to being voted into law.

Bradley explained in his email that the other home rule petitions had "no opposition," so comparing those to Cohasset's "is like apples to oranges." Bradley noted further, "You had a former town manager and a sitting selectman, testifying as a private citizen, testifying against this bill." The committee also received calls and letters in opposition of the bill, Bradley said. "These are issues the committee will take time to review."

Another issue is a letter that was sent to the committee from Common Cause, a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization that seeks to increase citizen involvement in government. Director Pam Wilmot wrote a letter to joint committee chair, State Rep. Sarah Peake, stating that while Common Cause did not oppose the petition, they were asking the committee to carefully consider the bill's implications, specifically regarding the cooling-off period for town officials and selectmen.

"There may, however, be reasons why other officials should be covered for at least for some period of time," Wilmot wrote.

Bradley said this letter is probably a result of a citizen contacting the group. And while the letter did not oppose the bill, it did create "more 'noise' the committee is hearing," said Bradley.

However, Bradley said that the committee will still accept testimony on the TMA. "People can send in testimony either for or against up until the bill is discharged from the committee."

Bradley encouraged the Governance Committee, or anyone else interested in the bill's passage, to contact the individual committee members.

Governance Committee chair Christine Cunning said that her board planned to discuss the bill, and the possibility of getting on an upcoming Selectmen's agenda, at their Thursday, August 8 meeting (The Mariner goes to press Thursday morning). This was something Keniley suggested in his email to fellow GC members, stating that he felt the selectmen "must play an active role in lobbying for prompt action."

Cunning encouraged GC members to be patient as they await the outcome, and to allow the joint committee to take its time considering the bill. "We need to realize that these other bills did not have controversy surrounding them," she wrote. "They all know where we stand on this and I do think we need to let the process work, as anxious as we are to move forward."

Look for more on this in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Timeline: Town Manager Act

That was then: 1997

- March 29: Town Manager Act approved by Town Meeting with a vote of 71-65 over objections of four of the five members of the Board of Selectmen.
- May 29: TMA approved by House, onto the Senate the following week.
- June 30: TMA signed by the Governor.
- July 1: Ed McMann, interim Town Administrator, is sworn in as Acting Town Manager; 40 applied for the permanent position.
- August 4: Mark Haddad is sworn in as Town Manager; McMann steps down.

This is now: 2013

- April 22: Town Meeting approves the amended Town Manager Act, which has the support of the Board of Selectmen, with a vote of 223 to 141.
- May 8: Town sends TMA changes as a Home Rule Petition to the state legislature; the HRP is sent on to House counsel.
- May 28: The bill is filed and given a docket number.
- May 30: The House refers the bill to the committee on Municipalities and Regional Government.
- June 3: The Senate concurs.
- July 23: The bill was discussed during a public hearing with the joint committee. Several Cohasset officials, former and current, and citizens turned out to either support or oppose the bill.

What's next?

Waiting while the committee considers whether to vote the bill into law.

REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY

Register of Deeds announces statistics for Norfolk County

Register of Deeds Bill O'Donnell has reported on mid-year real estate activity in Norfolk County. Real estate activity during the first half of 2013 in Norfolk County showed increases in both total volume and average sale price with relative stability or growth across most statistical categories.

"Overall real estate activity in Norfolk County during the first six months of 2013 has shown relative stability with some growth in key areas."

Register of Deeds
Bill O'Donnell

As of June 30, 2013, there has been a 2 percent increase in the number of documents recorded at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds compared to last year at 96,363 which is 1,726 more documents than the 2012 mid-year total of 94,637.

"Overall real estate activity in Norfolk County during the first six months of 2013 has shown relative stability with some growth in key areas," said O'Donnell.

The total volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County during the first six months of 2013 was $2,688,450,248, which was an 11 percent increase over the 2012 mid-year total, while the average sale price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) during the first six months of 2013 increased by 2 percent over last year at $591,258.03. The number of mortgages recorded on Norfolk County properties at mid-year of 2013 was nearly even with the 2012 total at 21,122 while mortgage indebtedness increased by 12 percent to $10,028,405,332 from the mid-year 2012 total of $8,943,861,357.

Foreclosure deeds filed during the first half of 2013 decreased sharply by 70 percent from the 2012 mid-year total of 314 to 95 in 2013 while the number of notice to foreclose mortgage filings decreased by 36 percent to 377 filings at mid-year of 2013 compared to 596 filings in 2012.

"Foreclosure deed filings as well as notice to foreclose mortgage filings have been trending downward all year. These decreases could indicate a positive outlook for the state of the real estate market and the economy in here in Norfolk County," said O'Donnell.

Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Residents in need of assistance can call the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Department at 781-461-6101, or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

RECITAL SERIES

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's

The 89th annual Summer Recital Series continues at 6 p.m. each Sunday until Aug. 18.

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of 23 bells, President Calvin Coolidge and his wife, Grace, stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

Aug. 11 – Philippe Beullens, Leuven, Belgium.

Aug. 18 – Lee Leach, Norwood.

After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above. Parking is ample and free.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a donation from Tim Reynolds of Hull in loving memory of his brother, Richard Tyler Reynolds; and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Cohasset men help save 15 from sinking boat

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A Cohasset man, his young son and daughter's boyfriend, worked together to lead a dramatic rescue on Sunday when a boat was sinking in the harbor.

John Naughton was enjoying an afternoon on the water with his son, Conor, 15, and daughter's boyfriend, Chris Colby, 19, of Westwood when a 30-foot pleasure boat struck rocks and left 15 people floating in the ocean, crying for help.

Conor was driving his dad's 21-foot Boston whaler while John was checking his lobster traps with Chris. They heard children screaming as the 30-foot boat went by, but John said that they all thought it was just a group of kids having fun on their boat.

"We thought they were screaming out of joy and glee," said John. "You always hear kids screaming; the sound bounces off the water."

Conor was the first to notice something was wrong.

"I think the boat's sinking," he told his father. John said it was a little far off to be certain, but they drove the boat closer to be sure.

"We just floored it as fast as we could to get there," said John. "Sure enough, there it was, going down. It went down in about two minutes."

John had to navigate his boat in what he called "the rock zone," where the other boat had hit rocks. He crossed into the zone to get as close as he could to the other boat, but had to turn off his propellers for safety.

The group of boaters, 11 children and four adults, who had gone on a boat ride to celebrate one of the kids' birthdays, were already in the water by the time John's boat arrived.

"We pull up and it's just humans floating in the water, scattered around," John recalled. "It was unbelievable, the panic."

Women were screaming that they had infants with them. Chris and John both acted quickly. Chris dove in the water, without a lifejacket, and swam one of the babies to safety. John rescued the other one.

"Everybody's happy that it came out as a good outcome, that no one was hurt, and there happened to be a boat going by and we were able to respond so quickly."
Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons

"It was intense," he said.

John's wife, Elizabeth, said that her husband had boarded eight people safely onto his boat when help arrived from the Coast Guard and Cohasset Harbormaster.

"By the time we had them out of the water, the harbormaster's assistant was there," said John. "Had we not been there... it could have been a tragedy."

Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons said that she responded to the distress call at 1:40 p.m. that brought crews from Point Allerton in Hull and the Scituate Coast Guard station, along with the Scituate harbormaster.

"The boat owner put a mayday call out over the radio. Two of my boats were out there, and I went out there in one of the boats," Gibbons said.

The harbormaster said it was fortunate that John, Conor and Chris "happened to be there at the time when [the boat] hit" the rocks.

"Everybody's happy that it came out as a good outcome, that no one was hurt, and there happened to be a boat going by and we were able to respond so quickly," said Gibbons.

John praised the two teenagers, Chris and Conor, for their roles in the dramatic rescue.

"Conor and Chris both acted very calmly and were very systematic about everything they were doing," said John.

Gibbons said that the last incident she recalled similar to this was a boat accident in 2009, where a boat hit the same set of rocks.

"There's a ring of rocks all around Cohasset Harbor," she said. Sunday's incident "was just an accident. He just happened to catch the rock."

should be better able to weather future storms. Library Trustee Patience Towle revealed that having the weathervane damaged and repaired also fixed an age-old problem.

"It was always just the tiniest bit crooked," she said. "We were never able to get it in exactly straight... It was damaged in the storm but it's a weird blessing; now it's straight."

Someone from town was kind enough to donate the money to have the weathervane refurbished, said Towle. She was also grateful to Joyce for "waving a magic wand over the library" and getting the repair done.

Towle also shared some history on the weathervane. It was first mounted on the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in 1903, back when the library was located in the Pratt Building on North Main Street. When the library moved to the old Osgood School building on Ripley Road in 2003, the weathervane moved, too.

The weathervane was "one of the few things we held back" from the old building, said Towle. "We hauled it to the new library; it was always part of the plan that we would get it there."

There's a reason the weathervane features a mackerel fish, said Towle. The mackerel represents the fishing fleet that used to go out of Cohasset.

"The mackerel has historical significance for Cohasset," said Towle.

After being moved from its original home 10 years ago, when it turned 100, and being returned to its current home this summer, the weathervane has come full circle.

"This is like a tenth anniversary celebration," having the weathervane back in place, said Towle. Now, "the mackerel is straight — some things just work out."

Greetings

Hi Cohasset and how is everyone this week? After a little break last week, we have some great news to share and talk about in this week's column. I wanted to remind everyone too that even though school and end of summer things are happening, we still have a lot of summer left to live!

Make sure to send me all your wonderful news, photos, celebration and birthday messages and yes, any special messages and send-off wishes you may have for your school-bound kiddos. Oh man, if only I could go back in time...sigh. Ok, enough of that, on with this weeks news...

Scout Night

Cohasset Girl Scouts attended "Girl Scout Night" at the Brockton Rox on Friday, July 12. They supported our hometown players Rob McCunney, Brendan Doonan, Jamie Faber and Jordan Berry. The girls enjoyed a great baseball game, fireworks and then, a movie and sleepover in the outfield! What a fun way to spend a summer night!

Happy Birthday!

I wanted to wish an awesome man Bill Enos a wonderful 93rd birthday, that he celebrated on August 3rd. Bills friends and neighbors would like to give him a big, happy 93rd birthday wish from Cohasset to Scottsdale, Arizona where he now lives.

As everyone knows, Bill is a Cohasset native and a retired Boston Red Sox scout. Have a wonderful year Bill!

Fairfield

Fairfield University has announced that the following Cohasset residents have been named to the dean's list for the 2013 spring semester: Gabrielle Rodman, Caitlin DeAngelis and Logan Pratt.

To be selected for the dean's list, a student must attain a grade point average of at least 3.5, of a possible 4.0.

Congratulations all!

James Madison

Cohasset resident Brendan Queenan has enrolled at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va. for the fall 2013 semester. Brendan plans to major in accounting.

Brendan, we wish you all the best during your college career!

Bentley

Congratulations to Charlotte Louise Malone, a 2010 graduate of Cohasset High School, who was named to the Dean's List at Bentley University for Spring 2013. Charlotte is entering her senior year at Bentley. The Dean's List recognizes high academic achievement during a single semester, including those undergraduate students with at least a 3.3 (B+) average and no grade below 2.0 (C).

RPI

Hats off to Lars Gjesteby of Cohasset Named to Dean's List at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute for spring 2013 Semester

The dean's list recognizes full-time students who maintain grade-point averages of a minimum of 3.0 out of a possible 4.0 and have no grades below "C." Lars is studying Biomedical Engineering.

In other RPI news, Tim Treese and Johnathan Chio, 2013 graduates of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, NY, have accepted jobs on the West Coast. Treese will be employed by Google and Chio will be starting at Oracle. Both are 2009 Cohasset High School graduates.

Great news all around! Congratulations all!

Clean-out

The CSCR (Cohasset Center of Coastal Student Research) has this message for community help. They are asking for your help for the third installment of the Parker Ave Cut clean-out!

Join CSCR on the 13th for some good old-fashioned hard work! Come whenever you can between 12:00 and 4:30 pm. A CSCR cookout to follow at 5 p.m.! Bring any clothing you don't mind getting muddy and whatever tools you can share! They hope to see many of you there!

Lunch, movie

On Monday, August 12 is Brown Bag Lunch and Movie Day at Cohasset Elder Affairs. This month's offering is A Prairie Home Companion starring Woody Harrelson, Tommy Lee Jones and Kevin Kline. Take a look at what goes on backstage during the last broadcast of America's most celebrated radio show, where singing cowboys Dusty and Lefty, a country music siren, and a host of others hold court.

Show time is 12 p.m. Bring your own lunch. Cohasset Elder Affairs will provide popcorn and drinks. Transportation is available. Contact 781-383-9112 if you need a ride.

Auditions

The 2013 two-time EMACT (Eastern Mass Association of Community Theaters) award-nominee, Cohasset Dramatic Club announces auditions for the first production of its 92nd season, the 2008 Tony Award-Winning Best Play Revival, the very funny French farce, "Boeing Boeing" written by Marc Camoletti. The show will be directed by Bill Gardiner. Performance dates for the show are Nov 1, 2, 8, 9 at 7:30 pm and Nov 3 and 10 at 2 pm.

Open auditions will be held on Monday and Tuesday, Aug 26 and 27 at 7 pm with callbacks, if necessary, on Wed., Aug. 28 also at 7 pm. Auditions will consist of readings from the script. Audition sides will be posted on: cohassetdramaticclub.org. Auditions take place at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Ave. For questions, email: info@cohassetdramaticclub.org.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

What's new at the farmers market

As summer nears its end, the Cohasset Farmers Market is going strong, and will continue convening through the fall every Thursday on the town common.

Those who enjoy strolling the market for hours on end, but need to take the occasional break, can enjoy the new senior-designated rest area.

The market has set up two benches in a shaded area overlooking the common so that seniors can sit, relax, have some water, take a break from shopping and listen to the music played each week during the market. According to the market organizers, Jack DeLorenzo, former assistant principal of Cohasset Middle-High School, conceived of the idea and is responsible for bringing in the benches and providing free bottled water for the seniors.

Upcoming events

• Local health coach Linda Storm is holding a cooking demo on Thursday, August 17, rescheduled from a rainy day last month. Storm will create a feast for the eyes and the taste buds using local produce, fresh from the market that day.

• Thursday, August 22 is the annual Cohasset Farmers Market Tomato Contest. Start looking over your tomatoes and thinking about which ones you might want to enter in the following categories: biggest, most unusual, most beautiful/perfect. Judges will award prizes in each category.

The tomato contest falls during the 2013 Massachusetts Farmers Market Week (Aug 19-25) celebrating the 250 farmers markets in the Commonwealth that sell locally-grown and produced foods, helping to support local farms and boost community spirit.

The Cohasset Farmers Market is open every Thursday, 2 to 6:30 p.m. through October 17 on the Cohasset Common.

GIMME SHELTER

Siblings as cute as can be!

PAULA J. FATERSIK

It's raining kittens! We have a roomful of love and purrs and scampering little feet. Chasers and snoozers, lovers and wild things. They all make us smile with every minute spent caring for them. Inquisitive little souls just waiting for the right forever homes, every baby here in the shelter is special and hoping to be chosen to become part of a loving family that has time to shower them with much needed affection and attention.

And just when you think they can't get any cuter, they do. This week, the feature babies are Shamus and his sister Reagan who are pictured above. These two little siblings are from a litter of five and their brother Patrick and sisters Fiona and Cassidy are available too. Each has their own personality and going to loving homes in pairs would be great for them.

Shamus is an adorable tiger with big, round, expressive eyes. He loves to play and is finding his way around with his littermates and a few kittens from other litters. He is pretty laid back and is getting along with all. Reagan, with paler shades and little white paws is a dainty girl who has a serious little look on her face. Looking at her eyes, do you see a little Tom Brady before a pass? She is figuring something out! This little girl is a calm, sensitive, pretty and sweet feline.

Both are about three months old and will be spayed/neutered very soon. After their procedures, they will be happy to have some TLC and lots of love and affection. It is a scary time for them and loving families or singles will be just what the doctor ordered. To see more photos of Shamus and Reagan and their siblings check out Petfinder.com

To learn more about all of our adorable kittens currently in the shelter and in foster homes please call Judy at 781-534-4902. They are waiting to meet you and need really loving forever homes so please come for a visit at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue soon. We are located at 50 L St. and Open Hours are Monday evenings from 6:30 to 7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3 p.m.

You can see more of our wonderful adult cats who are waiting for their best homes by visiting www.HSAR.org an d clicking on Available Pets. On Petfinder.com you will see more photos and information. Just enter our zip code, 02045. Also please visit our Facebook page for updates and information on our special cats and events.

The Animal Rescue League Spay Waggin' will be at our shelter on Wednesday, August 28th. There has been an explosion of litters this season and we are continuing to receive calls to take in more kittens. We want to help them all, but space is limited so having adult cats spayed and neutered is essential. If you or someone you know has a cat who needs to be altered please call us at 781-925-3121 for an appointment. Leave a detailed message and your call will be returned. Drop off is at 8 a.m. and your pet can be picked up later in the day.

How do we begin to thank our supporters this week? With grateful hearts and happy kittens and cats. Last Saturday was a celebration of generosity, caring and love when the women from New England Thunder rode into Hull with the rear seats and side bags of their motorcycles overloaded with food and supplies along with generous donations for the kittens and cats here at HSAR. After much unpacking and carrying in of products, they had lots of time to spend in all of our rooms with kittens and cats who were just thrilled to have the extra attention and love. Hearing about each cat's story of how they arrived here made it a heartwarming experience and we know that special connections were felt. It is a joy to have New England Thunder continue to support us and a huge thank you to Cindy Runey, founder of New England Thunder, for organizing the ride to HSAR!

Another friend of the shelter from Star Touring and Riding, Chapter 225 arrived with his motorcycle piled high with bags and boxes of supplies as well as another generous donation. Both groups have worked together in the past and been instrumental in helping us with our mission to provide a safe and healthy environment for the cats in our care.

Many companies were represented in this donation ride including Fitts Mill in Scituate, Petsmart in Hanover and Pawsitively Natural in Humarock. All donated food, litter and pet products that will help our residents and keep us well stocked for a while. Sincere thanks to all of you.

With everything going on that day we also had donations of beautiful bedding from a supporter who had visited local yard sales and brought her "finds" to us! Wonderful items to replace some well worn ones were so appreciated. Good things keep happening and it is super to see people becoming involved with our shelter.

Remembrance Service on Sept. 11

All personnel are invited to attend a Sept. 11, 2001 remembrance service beginning at 9 a.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 11, 2013, on the Cohasset Common. The service is being coordinated by the Cohasset Police and Fire and the Veterans organizations of the Town of Cohasset.

The service will pay homage to the men and women who lost their lives and those that were affected by the acts of terrorism on that day. The flags will be flown at half-staff acknowledging those who lost their lives at the World Trade Center, The Pentagon and in Pennsylvania.

A reception will follow at Cohasset Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm St.

GROUND LEVEL

Coffeehouse event in August

Cohasset's Ground Level Coffeehouse is hosting another night of good music, good community, and really good coffee in August at Beechwood Congregational, 51 Church St.

• Aug. 9: Ground Level for Grown-Ups

If your driver's license is oriented in the "landscape" rather than the "portrait" direction, then this is the event for you! Slightly more sophisticated and slightly less chaotic than our typical hang/jam/eat sugar teens-and-twenties nights, the evening of Aug. 9 is dedicated to all the parents, friends and neighbors who are jealous of the cool new café their kids are hanging out at these days.

As always, the music, art, and coffee-drinking fun starts at 7 p.m. and winds down at 10.

For more information, call 781-383-0808, email Ground_Level@ymail.com, or "like" Ground Level on Facebook: www.facebook.com/groundlevelcohasset.

Yoga on the Farm

Join yoga instructor and certified holistic health coach Linda Storm for outdoor yoga at Holly Hill Farm Saturday mornings from 8 to 9 a.m. through Aug. 31 (no class on July 6). Bring a mat and enjoy an hour of gentle Vinyasa style yoga, moving with the breath. All levels are welcome. There is an indoor space available if the weather does not permit outdoor yoga. Fee is $12 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $15 for non-members. Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

For more information about the farm and the non-profit education center, the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

SCHOOL UPDATE

Kindergarten enrollment up

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Last year, during the last week of August, we had a rush of people registering their children. We've been watching the last couple weeks where the registration is going."
Supt. of Schools Barbara Cataldo

The start of the school year is still over a month away (Tuesday, Sept. 3), but the Superintendent is reporting that enrollment numbers at the kindergarten level are up from last year. Eight families are currently on a wait list for full-day kindergarten.

The families could opt for half-day kindergarten instead, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo told the School Committee Wednesday. However, after a meeting with Osgood Principal Bob LeCount and Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara, Cataldo said that the schools want to offer the best options to these families.

They discussed placing the eight students in the five different kindergarten classes.

"We're trying to figure out how to provide the highest quality education possible," said Cataldo.

Each of the five classes contains 21 students without adding in those on the wait list; there are 105 students slated to go into the five rooms, said Cataldo. The plan is to have three of those classes increase to 23 students while the two other classes will have 22 students. The half-day class will have 17 students, unless some of the families on the wait list decide to enroll their children in that class instead.

Cataldo said that this increase would affect the school budget. "We're going to need to move the budget around to add additional ESPs [Education Support Specialists] to support the students," she said.

The superintendent said that two new ESPs will be hired, one for the kindergarten classes and one for fifth grade, which is also seeing an enrollment increase this year. There are 154 fifth graders enrolled in six different classes.

School committee member Helene Lieb asked Cataldo if the enrollment bump was "unexpected." Cataldo said that the kindergarten enrollment is higher than expected for this year. And the numbers still aren't set in stone.

"Last year, during the last week of August, we had a rush of people registering their children," said Cataldo. "We've been watching the last couple weeks where the registration is going."

Cataldo said that last year's full-day kindergarten classes had 100 students total, 20 per classroom, while the half-day program had 19 kids. She said that the schools must be cognizant of new housing coming into town to prepare for enrollment bumps.

Lieb noted that 25 students per kindergarten classroom "is really pushing it."

"We're not disagreeing," Cataldo said.

School committee chair Paul Schubert said it was the superintendent's judgment whether or not to accommodate the eight wait-listed for kindergarten by increasing the classroom sizes. The discussion centered on whether the schools can "support them appropriately," said Cataldo.

One option that is out – starting a new kindergarten class. "We can't open a new classroom this late in the summer," said Cataldo.

BRIEFLY

Sandy Beach closed last week for bacteria

Sandy Beach was temporarily closed last week due to a high bacteria count.

Board of Health agent/administrator Felix Zemel reported that the bacteria level was 10,100 units per 100 mL. The beach was closed for swimming on Wednesday, July 31 while samples were taken and tested. The rest of the beach remained open.

The next day, the concentration of bacteria went down to 20 units per 100 mL, and the beach was reopened for swimming. The concentration remains low this week, said Zemel.

CHS art students recognized for fine work

The following students in Mrs. Lisa V. Sugrue's Fine Arts Department at Cohasset High School were recognized for their pieces:

OUR VIEW

Disappearing Dads

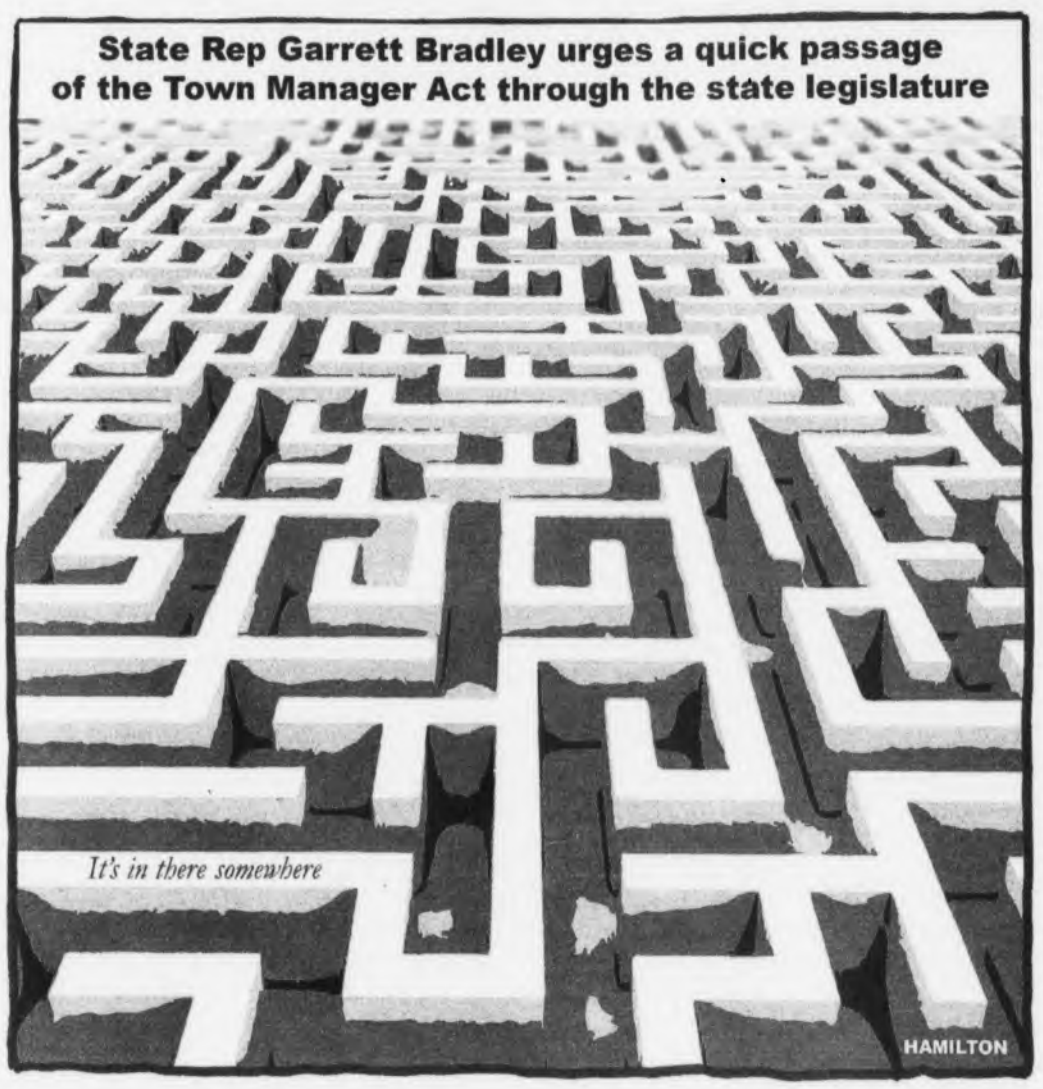
If you are like us, you probably don't get the chance to watch a lot of television especially in the daytime. But during vacation time with children or grandchildren that can change.

One thing we have noticed over the past few years of viewing some TV programs for kids during summer vacation is that the depiction of dads and father figures has either disappeared or radically changed.

For example in the "Suite Life of Zack and Cody" – a family-oriented sitcom about two identical twins being raised by their mother, a cabaret singer, the dad is never mentioned. The adult male figure in the show is the hotel manager Mr. Mosley, a lovable bumbler easily foiled by the twins.

Where are the TVs dads of the past — such as Jim Anderson "Father Knows Best," Mike Brady "The Brady Bunch," or Cliff Huxtable "The Cosby Show"? While family dynamics in our society continue to evolve, we fear the elimination of dads or male figures, who are sensible and smart, is not a true reflection of today's families and sends the wrong message to youngsters glued to the TV. While moms today (whether married or single), for the most part, are portrayed as being together and successful – their male counterparts are depicted as idiots.

In the Disney show "Austin and Ally" – here is how Lester (Ally's divorced dad) is described: "He is the cheapskate owner of the music store Sonic Boom, and is completely ignorant of Ally's musical talents, among other things."



Apparently, the US is not the only country with TV-dad issues. The Daily Mail in the UK published an article around Fathers Day titled "Why Does TV Portray Every Dad as a Dimwit?"

The article cites a recent survey released that revealed "growing dissatisfaction and alarm at the way fathers are routinely portrayed as bungling fools and worse."

"...dads have to sit back and watch themselves being endlessly lampooned on television as not much more than lazy sperm donors. Half of them [who participated in the survey] complained that too many families on television were either shown with feckless fathers — or with no father figures in sight at all," the article states.

The article – which asked if this was harmless jest or a form of discrimination and on-screen bullying — went on the say: "So shouldn't we be celebrating and encouraging what dads do, instead of mocking them as useless twits who can't change a nappy, mop a floor or unload the dishwasher without causing a tsunami of chaos?"

Should we be concerned about this depiction of fatherhood? What effect does this have on today's boys and girls?

Appropriate management structure supported

Selectman Gaumer got it right on several counts when he suggests that elected town officials should direct selectmen related business requests through the town manager. I would augment this recommendation to include town department heads. This allows for two-way communication and workload prioritization with the appropriate management structure and, to Selectman Gaumer's point, prevents an employee from being caught in the middle.

This does not mean a town employee cannot be engaged in dialogue with elected officials; such discussion would be with the mutual understanding that official selectmen business informational inquiries/service requests must be moved through the management hierarchy to be formally assigned. Of course, when not acting in their elected official roles, selectmen would exercise the same information inquiries, and/or service request processes as any other resident.

Policy should not have been rescinded

During the selectmen's meeting of July 10, 2012, which I chaired, I stated that there had been numerous requests for records and information directed to town employees. At the time the workload in Town Hall was high as employees were working through repairing our financial problems and we were not fully staffed. I suggested that the Board of Selectmen create a policy that requests for extra work should be directed to the Acting Town Manager who would coordinate and manage the requests in a timely manner. A motion to adapt this policy was made, seconded and passed unanimously.

A year later on July 23, the board voted 4-1 to rescind the policy. In the year the policy was in place I did not know of anybody who had any problems promptly obtaining town information using the procedure we adopted. Certainly, none of selectmen cited any such problems during the July 23 meeting or earlier. None said that they were unable to access expeditiously all the information they wanted using the existing procedure. Rather, some selectmen only complained that they were not able to make direct requests to employees.

In any organization good management practice as well as courtesy requires that somebody requesting extra work from an employee should clear the request with the employee's supervisor. Otherwise, the supervisor is unable to manage the workflow efficiently. The town employees report to the town manager who is responsible for their performance. The town employees do not report to the selectmen. Allowing numerous people to request additional work is bound to lead to inefficiency and delays in performing necessary tasks. It also undermines the work and authority of the supervisor and is usually intimidating to the employee and the supervisor alike.

The policy enacted last year did provide our town employees with an important layer of protection from requests for extra work, particularly in departments that remain understaffed and during periods of heavy workloads and deadlines. The policy was instituted to solve a real problem. That problem remains. I do not understand the problem that was solved by rescinding the policy.

Rep. Bradley announces sales tax holiday

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, on July 31 joined his colleagues in the House of Representatives in approving legislation that would authorize a state sales tax holiday to take place Aug. 10 and 11 of this year to encourage consumers to shop at local businesses across the state. This marks the eighth year that the Commonwealth will provide a two-day sales tax exemption.

Bradley said, "The sales tax holiday will allow consumers to save on purchases, while providing local businesses with a much-needed boost in sales. It represents another step in the process of restoring confidence in the Massachusetts economy."

The legislation is designed to increase sales for local businesses and provide relief to consumers, particularly as families prepare for a new school year. The sales tax holiday applies to retail sales excluding any single item priced higher than $2,500. It does not apply to tobacco, telecommunications, gas, steam, electricity, motor vehicles or boats.

The bill was signed into law by Gov. Patrick on Aug. 2.

Belber to speak at Cohasset Garden Club meeting

Cohasset Garden Club, a member of the Garden Club of America, invites the public to its annual open meeting, at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Aug. 14. This year's speaker will be Jon Belber, education director at Holly Hill Farm.

The topic of his lecture will be Planting and Harvesting during Cooler Fall Months, a popular subject, delivered by a knowledgeable speaker. Belber, among his many responsibilities at the farm, runs the summer camp. On May 15, Holly Hill Farm and the White family in particular were awarded the Garden Club of America Acknowledgment for their contribution to historic preservation of a farm that practices sustainable organic farming and community education. For all the above reasons, Holly Hill Farm has proven to be a very good neighbor.

People are encouraged to attend and enjoy light refreshments and gardening conversations after the lecture. The location will be at the Lightkeepers, 5 Lighthouse Lane, on the harbor, which provides ample parking.

I'm not nuts: Just a Mom of an allergic kid

SARAH BLOWERS MELIA

Please don't roll your eyes if a school or camp asks you to make an accommodation with lunch or snacks. If you are asked, that means there is child there with a serious allergy.

I very recently read a tragic and personally scary news story about a 13-year-old California girl by the name of Natalie Giorgi. Natalie died last weekend while camping with her parents after taking a bite of a Rice Krispy treat. She had a peanut allergy, and she didn't realize there was peanut butter in the dessert. Natalie was old enough to understand and manage her allergy. By all accounts, she was vigilant. But last weekend she made a small mistake. She was fine for 20 minutes, then began vomiting and then went into cardiac arrest. Three Epi Pen injections, by her father – a doctor, did not save her. And now her family is mourning their beautiful child's death. One. Bite.

This story brought me to tears and scares me to my very core. You see, my son Charlie, not quite 4 years old, is allergic to peanuts. We have learned to live with it, so far, I think. But he is young and is always in my care or with a trusted caregiver, or at a nut-free school. His Benadryl and his Epi Pen are always with his caregiver. I feel like we are taking the right precautions, and I try really hard not to live in fear, so that he doesn't live in fear. And then suddenly stories like this come to my attention and my mind races. Would Charlie, as a preschooler, know the difference between a safe dessert and one with peanut butter mixed in? No, he wouldn't. Would he ask first? He's learning to, but probably not. When we are out with him, at friend's barbecues or the playground for example, do I have eyes on him every second? I hate to admit it, but with three kids under 6 – no, I don't. What would happen if he took a bite? Hives? Anaphylaxis? Worse? Unfortunately his doctor's answer is that there is no way to predict that.

I have had good luck so far. My son's schools have been extremely aware and careful. Our family, his friends' and classmates' parents have too. In general I have found the Hingham community, where I myself have lived since age 4 and where my husband's family has lived for six generations, to be an understanding and aware community with regard to allergies. But peanuts and peanut butter are everywhere, and I myself am guilty of being lulled into thinking that carrying an Epi Pen makes it all OK. The Natalie Giorgi story has reminded me that that's just not true.

Food allergies are so common these days, peanut and otherwise, and chances are there is an allergic child in your family, or in your playgroup, or in your child's (or your grandchild's) class at school or camp, or in your neighborhood.

Parents like me with an allergic child are trained to be vigilant. We bring safe snacks everywhere, we ask questions, we take full responsibility as much as we can. But at some point, they walk out the front door. They get on the bus, or go to a friend's house. They go out into the world. And try as we might, we can't control the world around us. Would it help if our community was more aware of these allergies? Absolutely, it would.

So what can you do? Maybe you feel you shouldn't have to do anything at all. Should you?

That's up to you. And no, you don't have to do anything. But you might not even realize that you can do so much without really doing much at all, but just by being aware. Here are four simple ways to be aware:

1. Don't offer a child a snack without checking with their parents. At play dates, on the playground, wherever – if you know there is an allergy, or even just if you don't know the child well, don't offer a snack. Even a snack as benign seeming as pretzels or animal crackers can be cross-contaminated with peanuts. Some brands are safe, some are not. It's hard to tell the difference. And anyway, if their parent is like me they probably rarely leave the house without some emergency Pirate Booty. Plus, more snacks for your kids! Win, win! Be aware by not offering food.

2. Don't bring food to an allergic child's house without checking first. A child's home is a safe haven where they don't have to be afraid of food, and their parent doesn't have to be on high alert. If you are an invited guest, particularly at a party where the parents may be distracted as hosts, please think about it that way and don't bring food that you haven't cleared with the parent first. In the alternative, just bring wine! Then their parents will love you even more! Or I suppose you could not go to the party altogether, that's an option too. Then again, some of us "allergy parents" throw pretty great parties, so you might not want to choose that option. Be aware by being a good guest.

3. If your child (or grandchild) has peanuts or peanut butter before school or camp or before a play date, take 30 seconds to wash their hands and face before sending them to school. I know you're running late. Not to worry – I (or someone like me) am always, always, running later than you are. Just ask Charlie's teachers at Hingham Nursery School, they can verify that point. But all joking aside, it's a small step with a huge impact. Be aware by washing up.

4. Please don't roll your eyes if a school or camp asks you to make an accommodation with lunch or snacks. If you are asked, that means there is child there with a serious allergy. And it's easy! If you've been to Whole Foods or the Fruit Center recently, you've probably seen the seemingly endless brands of Sunbutter or Soy Nut butter that are available. Give them a try – they're good! Or perhaps just a boring old turkey sandwich? I love peanut butter too, but the thing is, these food allergies are real. Kids can die from them. So please try to view it not as a hardship or a pain in the neck, but as a simple change you can make to protect the life of a child. A child that your child plays with everyday. A child who has parents and grandparents just like you. We are your friends and neighbors. We are not "nuts." But we are really, really scared for our kids. Be aware by being empathetic.

Thank you for reading and for your awareness. It means more than I can express to me, and to my sweet Charlie.

Sarah Blowers Melia is a Hingham resident.

Tips on buying and using backpacks

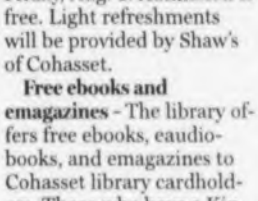
DR. LISA LEWIS

• Make sure your child's loaded backpack weighs no more than 10 percent of his or her body weight. A heavier backpack will cause your child to bend forward in an attempt to support the weight on his or her back, rather than on the shoulders, by the straps.

• Choose a pack that is proportionate to your child's size. It should fit from about 2 inches below the shoulders to just above the waistline. The backpack should not hang more than 4 inches below the waistline. A backpack that hangs too low increases the weight on the shoulders, causing your child to lean forward when walking.

• A backpack with compartments helps in positioning the contents most effectively. Place heaviest items closest to the back. Make sure that pointy or bulky objects are packed away from the area that will rest on your child's back.

• Wide, padded straps are very important. Non-padded straps are uncomfortable, and can dig into your child's shoulders. The shoulder straps should be adjustable so the backpack can be fitted to your child's body. Loose straps can cause the backpack to dangle uncomfortably and cause spinal misalignment and pain.



• Urge your child to wear both shoulder straps, and avoid one-strap backpacks. Lugging the backpack around by one shoulder can cause the disproportionate shift of weight to one side, leading to neck and muscle spasms, headaches, low-back pain or spinal distortions.

• If the backpack is still too heavy, talk to your child's teacher. Ask if your child could leave the heaviest books at school, and bring home only lighter hand-out materials or workbooks.

FOR THE RECORD

Picking up ideas along the way

GREGORY MATHIS

With the cost of groceries soaring, it's an opportunity to take some commonly purchased products and compare prices.

Hopefully everyone has had an opportunity to take some time off this seemingly shortened summer. If you haven't, time is running out with Labor Day – and the official end of summer – less than a month away.

Fortunately I've been able to take some time off and I always enjoy looking at newspapers from other parts of the country when I get a chance. It's hard for me to completely detach from work.

I wasn't able to find a local community paper comparable to those we publish during a recent excursion to Portland, Maine, but I did pick up a complimentary issue of the Maine Sunday Telegram to get a sense of what was happening in the region.

Over the years I've stolen some good ideas from various papers; from story possibilities, to cool design elements, to examples of good content worth adding to our pages.

The Telegram had its fair share of local news mixed with national and world news from the Associated Press, like many dailies do these days. The local stories gave a real sense of time and place, with a lot of space dedicated to the outdoors. The front page featured a breakdown of big-game kills by towns and the sports section had several Outdoors pages dedicated to hiking, hunting and fishing. Exactly what you would expect to find in a Maine newspaper.

And there was a story idea I'd like to see us do, which was comparing prices at five grocery stores in the region. With the cost of groceries soaring, it's an opportunity to take some commonly purchased products and compare prices. The story was accompanied by an excellent graphic with the logos of the stores at the top and photos and descriptions of the items being compared down the left side. In some cases the price differences were pretty dramatic and as a consumer made me think twice about where I'm grocery shopping.

Overall the staff did a good job with graphics, which is something else I'd like to see us do more.

I saw a lot of similarities to our newspapers, though. They featured reader-submitted photos, as we do, and used similar fonts for their headline. The subheads, however, were a little wordy and in a font that wasn't particularly easy to read.

So spending time with the local paper produced some ideas, which usually happens on vacations.

Truth be told, though, Massachusetts has some of the best community newspapers in the country. Not only do I know this from my travels, but from judging newspaper contests from other states and seeing those entries.

Our photography is better in most cases, our commitment to local news is unmatched, and our design is on par or better than what you'll find elsewhere in papers of comparable circulation and comparable town sizes.

So my guess is journalists vacationing anywhere in eastern Massachusetts, from the North Shore down through the South Shore to the tip of the Cape, are leaving with some ideas to steal and bring home with them.

SERVICE DOG

Parker is coming to Emmy through a Georgia-based agency, 1Boy4Change, which provides service dogs to children in need, as well as heat alarms for K9 units.

and mobility. A service dog will assist her with mobility, communication, and companionship.

The CWDF selected Emmy as a grant recipient in February and began fundraising to provide her with a dog.

CWDF chair Trish Morse said it was exciting to see the grant money going toward a good cause. "The money we raised in March is going to go toward a dog for Emmy; now that we have a dog purchased and in training, it means this first grant is underway and coming to fruition," said Morse. "It's exciting on our end."

Emmy's family is excited to receive their dog, too.

"The whole family seems really excited," said Emmy's mother, Katie. "We're just waiting at this point. It's a long process, but worth it."

Parker, a golden doodle born in Florida, is currently undergoing special service dog training in Georgia. He will train for a few months before being flown up to Cohasset for a bonding period with Emmy; then he will return to the south for additional training.

Katie said that in the meantime, she is talking to Emmy about Parker to help prepare for the dog's arrival. "We have pictures of him, which we talk about every day," said Katie. "I think until the dog's here working, she won't totally understand it, but we talk about him a lot and she lights up when she hears his name."

Parker was chosen for Emmy in particular because of his breed. A crossbreed of golden retrievers and poodles, golden doodles are known for being highly intelligent, trainable, and affectionate.

"He was chosen as the smartest, most eager, most focused of all the puppies," Morse said of Parker.

Size was also a factor; the dog couldn't be too big or too small. While German Shepherds are often trained as service dogs, that breed seemed to be a bit too large for a six-year-old. Yet the dog also couldn't be too small.

"She needs a dog big enough to accept her weight for bracing, balance and mobility," Morse explained. Golden doodles range from 35 to 45 pounds on average. "I think [Parker] is a perfect match for what she's going to need."

Parker is coming to Emmy through a Georgia-based agency, 1Boy4Change, which provides service dogs to children in need, as well as heat alarms for K9 units. The organization was founded by Christopher Carswell, a 14-year-old boy who suffers from seizures and has a service dog of his own, a German shepherd named Bronx. Chris understands the struggles of those with disabilities and does his best to give back.

Morse said that the Carswells understand what a difficult process getting a service dog can be for families. "Their experience with getting Chris's service dog was very expensive; there were very few agencies that historically would provide service dogs for children," said Morse. "They believe strongly that young children are prime candidates for service dogs and it should be easier for families to get dogs."

When Chris heard from the CWDF that the Naples family needed a service dog, he was happy to help.

"It's definitely a pretty amazing feeling to know that I'm helping someone," Chris said in a phone call.

He already has a connection with Cohasset. Last year, when the CWDF learned that Chris collects patches from police K9 units, the Cohasset Police Department sent him a letter, patch and photo of Cohasset's K9, Erik, and his handler, Officer Patrick Reardon. Chris sent the CWDF a thank-you letter and posted a picture of himself beaming with the collectibles on his Facebook page.

This started a relationship between the Cohasset and Georgia foundations, so that when the CWDF's application for a service dog for Emmy arrived at 1Boy4Change, Chris's mom Janet said that they recalled Cohasset and set about helping right away.

Janet said that she and Chris looked over the application and said, "We got this."

Chris and his mom researched breeders until they found one with golden doodle puppies in south Florida. Then, through the Assistance Dogs International (ADI) and US Airways' program called "Puppies in Flight," they had Parker flown from Florida to Georgia to start his service dog training. The program has US Airways employee volunteers become trained to work with assistance dogs and take them on flights.

Parker was escorted from Florida to Georgia by US Airways' Rob Shepherd. Chris was there to meet Parker at the airport when he arrived in Georgia.

Chris enjoyed his interaction with Parker. "He's very soft and fluffy," he said of the dog.

Beyond being cute, the puppy serves a greater purpose. "Service dogs are important because they really help a lot," Chris explained. "For kids with disabilities, it gives them a friend and helps them to have more freedom to do stuff they couldn't do before."

Volume 38 - Report No. 31 July 29 - Aug. 2, 2013

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on three roll calls and local senators on seven from the week of July 29-August 2.

STINK BUG (H 3538) House 154-3, Senate 37-2, overrode Gov. Deval Patrick's veto of $40,000 to fund the monitoring and mitigation of the brown marmorated stink bug and the spotted wing drosophilia. Override supporters said stink bugs are a serious problem that attack agricultural crops and cause nuisances for property owners by entering homes and staying indoors for the winter. In his veto message, Gov. Patrick said he vetoed the funding because the program was "not recommended." (A "Yes" vote is for the $40,000. A "No" vote is against it.)	N	Y
LOCAL EARMARKS (H 3538) House 148-9, Senate 37-1, overrode the governor's veto of $930,000 in funding including $125,000 for Plymouth's 400th anniversary celebration; $25,000 for Sandwich's 375th anniversary; $20,000 for Southbridge's bicentennial celebration; $25,000 for a child safety grant in North Reading and $75,000 for one in North Attleboro; and $25,000 for grants for business assistance organizations. Override supporters said these programs provide much-needed assistance to specific cities and towns. The governor said he vetoed the funding because these programs were "not recommended." One legislator told Beacon Hill Roll Call that funding some of these non-essential programs, especially the celebrations, is outrageous in light of the state's economic plight and the recent tax hikes. (A "Yes" vote is for the $930,000. A "No" vote is against it.)	Y	Y
SCHOOL BREAKFAST (H 3538) House 157-0, Senate 37-1, overrode the governor's veto of a provision giving $75,000 more than last year to Project Bread's Walk for Hunger to expand the summer food service outreach program and the school breakfast program. Override supporters said that Project Bread does great work and noted this funding will support community-based programs that assist hungry people across Massachusetts. In his veto message, the governor said he vetoed the funding because the program was not recommended. (A "Yes" vote is for the $75,000. A "No" vote is against it.)	Y	Y
JUVENILE JUSTICE (S 1841) Senate 40-0, approved a bill that would move 17-year-olds from the adult justice system to the juvenile one. Supporters said this would end the misguided notion of putting 17-year-olds in adult prisons. They noted that juvenile facilities focus more on education and rehabilitation rather than punishment. They also argued that 17-year-olds in adult prisons are eight times more likely than an adult to be the victim of rape or to commit suicide than a teenager in a juvenile lockup. The House has approved a different version of the bill. The Senate version now goes to the House for consideration. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	Y	*
STUDY BAY STATE HOSTING OF 2024 OLYMPICS (S 1840) Senate 38-1, approved a bill creating a commission to study the feasibility of Massachusetts hosting the Summer Olympic Games in 2024. Supporters said this is a great opportunity for the state and should be explored. Opponents said this is a misguided effort that will result in the next "Big Dig"-style boondoggle. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)	N	*
MUST PROVIDE SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER (S 1835) Senate 31-7, approved an amendment that would require the state to study and determine the costs and benefits of limiting eligibility for state assisted public housing to individuals who qualify under federal guidelines. The amendment would replace a proposal that would require applicants qualify under federal guidelines. Federal eligibility standards and proof of identity for housing assistance are stricter than state standards and include requiring a social security number. Amendment supporters said requiring applicants to meet federal guidelines is unconstitutional and would take housing away from immigrants including people who were granted temporary status from Haiti, Sudan and Syria, and domestic violence, torture and crime survivors. Amendment opponents said it is outrageous that currently people can get subsidized housing ahead of verified citizens without producing a social security number. They noted the federal guidelines offer exemptions for many of the categories mentioned by supporters of the study. (A "Yes" vote is for the study. A "No" vote is against it.)	N	*
EBT FRAUD (H 3555) Senate 15-23, rejected an amendment that would require an in-person review of the case of any welfare recipient who has a balance of more than $1,500 on his or her EBT card to determine if the person is compliant with the income, asset, identity and residency requirements to receive welfare. Amendment supporters said some recipients are likely gaming the system, pointing to recent reports that 1,800 recipients are carrying balances of more than $1,500 and 37 have very high balances. They noted the Patrick administration's plans to investigate this problem are weak and will not do the job. Amendment opponents said the Patrick administration recently announced plans to look into these high balances and take appropriate action. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring interviews on balances more than $1,500. A "No" vote is against requiring it.)	Y	*

SALES TAX HOLIDAY (S 175) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill that allows consumers to buy most products that cost under $2,500 on Saturday, August 10, and Sunday, August 11, without paying the state's 6.25 percent sales tax.

Supporters said the holiday would boost retail sales and save taxpayers an estimated $20 million. They argued the state's sales tax revenue loss would be offset by increased revenue from the meals and gas tax revenue generated by shoppers on those two days.

Some opponents of the holiday said it actually generates little additional revenue for stores because consumers would buy the products even without the tax-free days. They said the Legislature should be looking at broader, deeper tax relief for individuals and businesses and not a tiny tax-free holiday. Others said legislators should not vote for this tax holiday when they have not yet restored all the local aid, education and other program cuts made over the past few years.

NORTH SCITUATE

Old favorite gets a new look

Jamie's Grille & Pub undergoes renovations

By Ruth Thompson
rthompson@wickedlocal.com

Jamie's Grille & Pub has been a North Scituate mainstay for over 40 years.

Known for its great food, reasonable prices, and cozy atmosphere, it is the sort of place, according to owner Ralph Constantine, where people dine three, four and even five times a week.

Recently, the Gannett Road eatery — which is popular with Cohasset residents — underwent some significant renovations and upgrades.

"I wanted to brighten up the place without changing it completely," Constantine said.

The restaurant's longtime paneling, carpet and lighting décor gave the place a "dark and dirty" feel to it, Constantine said.

"When something is over 40 years old you have to do something," he said. "But what do you do, make it New Age, or leave it like it is?"

Constantine gave careful thought on how to proceed with the renovations, which would include the entire dining and bar areas, capable of seating up to 100 patrons.

"The restaurant has a unique personality," he said. "The people who come in like the warm, friendly feel; an old English pub feel."

One of the most noticeable changes is that the interior is lighter.

The paneling is gone and the bare walls have been given a fresh coat of off-white paint, which Constantine said works with the dark wood trim.

"When we were putting in the new ceiling we noticed this original wooden beam that had been kept hidden beneath everything," he said. "So we decided to keep it exposed and it really adds a nice touch to the room."

Another decision was to focus dining in the upper dining area, and expand the bar in the lower area.

"The bar can sit 17 now, before it sat 10," he said. "I've added some new bar stools, high tables, the new TVs. The bar top is natural mahogany."

He said the bar is becoming more popular as a spot where people can sit and have a meal.

"It's comfortable, the service is quicker. When I go out with my wife we like to eat at the bar."

Something that has the appearance of being authentic but is actually brand new is the wooden floor.

Owner Ralph Constantine holds up a picture of his father, Jamie, who opened the restaurant in North Scituate in 1969.

"We tore up the old carpet and put the floor down," Constantine said. "It's made to look old, but it's not."

He said the renovations, which were completed last month, have already helped to generate new business.

"We're still a neighborhood restaurant but times have changed," he said. "There's more competition out there. People are spending a lot of money on these restaurants. We needed to keep up."

Beginnings

Constantine's father, Jamie, opened the restaurant in the late 1960s.

"We grew up here," he said of himself and his sister, Sandi. "We used to come in and work with our dad. We've both worked here forever."

Living not far from the family business, Constantine said he would get off the school bus and go directly to the restaurant.

After his father passed away in 2007 Constantine took over the business because he said he "wanted to keep it going."

He and Sandi now own the establishment that has been such an important part of their lives.

Upon purchasing the property, he said he had to put in a new septic system, and replace the roof.

"Everything was just so outdated, and not up to code," he said.

He also opened two additional Jamie's restaurants on his own – one in Braintree and the other in Whitman.

"But this is the original," he said.

And while things inside the restaurant have changed, Constantine said the menu, and the prices, have remained the same.

"People come in for the quality meals at reasonable prices," he said. "We provide value meals so people can bring their families."

He said the specials menu remains increasingly popular, as is take out.

"About 15 percent of our business is take out," he said.

Final touches

Constantine said there are still a few additional things he would be working on, such as installing exterior lighting, hanging drapery, and placing artwork up on the walls.

"I like to have local photos of places around Minot and Minot Light," he said of the artwork that would be in display. "I think it would look great over on that wall."

A kitchen project is also slated for down the road.

He said the feedback on the renovations has been positive.

"People are telling me the place looks good," he said, adding that probably the most commented upon item is the new bar.

The new bar is also his personal favorite of all the upgrades.

"I'm very pleased," he said. "Everyone seems pleased."

He credits Sandi with the bright floral displays that decorate the outside of the building.

"This is what it is," he said. "Traditionally, we're a seafood, sandwich and pizza place. With these changes we wanted to encourage new customers to come try us out while maintaining the atmosphere that our regular and longtime customers have come to enjoy. I think we are able to do that."

Jamie's Grille & Pub is located at 360 Gannett Road in North Scituate. They serve breakfast, lunch and dinner seven days a week. For more information, including hours and menu, visit www.jamiespub.com

Wrong quote

In the Aug. 1 edition of the Scituate Mariner, American Legion Post 118 General Manager Scott Arnold was quoted as saying "They didn't play all that well," about players Tim Kensinger and Richard Roach. The quote should have read "We didn't play all that well at the beginning of the season. It took the bats awhile to come around," referring to the team as a whole.

We are sorry for any inconvenience.

CHIEFS FOOTBALL

New division new outlook

Chiefs playing in new division

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

Jim Sullivan, the head football coach of the Hanover based Coastal Chiefs, has good reason to look at things optimistically in his second year as head coach of the New England Football League team.

The Chiefs are playing at a different level in the NEFL now. They have a board of directors that is raising money for the program, and the team is going forward with new players and is getting better each day.

"Realistically this is the where we should be," Sullivan said. "In A Maritime division. We should have been there in our inaugural season. It was difficult going against the best of the best in the league. We are still playing stiff competition. The two teams that we have played have gone a combined 3-1 so far.

"People see us improving. We got a nice note from the owner of the Mystic River Tigers and one from the Mid Coast Falcons (Knox, Maine) both telling us that they were impressed with us. The way we played the game."

The Coastal Chiefs will play in the A Maritime Division of the New England Football League this season, allowing them to play competition closer to their own talent level than last year's team.

The numbers have improved for the team, which after a bye week will get back into action on Saturday against the East Coast Ducks at Charlestown High at 2 p.m. before they play their home opener on Aug. 17 at Hanover High against the Mid Coast Falcons at 7 p.m.

In their first two games, the Chiefs held their own in losses to the Tigers, who are the affiliate of the Boston Bandits as they fell 22-0. They were just worn down in the first game as they trailed 2-0 late in the third quarter.

The Coastal Chiefs home opener will be Aug. 17 at Hanover High School, although EEE concerns might force a change. FILE PHOTO/K.A. MACDONALD

The offense got its legs against the Mid Coast Falcons in the second half. They scored their first two touchdowns on touchdown passes by Jason Gracia, who came to the team after playing for the Middleboro Cobras of the Eastern Football League in a 34-13 loss.

Sullivan sees some bright horizons for the team as they head to the second half of the season.

"It will come," said Sullivan. "We are seeing the progression.

KNOCK ON WOOD

Just say no

RYAN WOOD

In the early 1980s, former First Lady Nancy Reagan began a crusade to launch a war on drugs. Her goal: reduce the use of recreational drugs. She called the initiative: "Just Say No." Statistics show that it was relatively successful, but it certainly didn't end drug use, which is clearly evident when you look at the number of professional athletes who ruined their lives using performance-enhancing drugs. Granted, PEDs aren't classified under "recreational drugs," and Reagan didn't intend to end steroid use, but PEDs are drugs nonetheless.

In the face of the current PED scandal in Major League Baseball, I often think, "wow, these players

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Pride and appreciation for Post 118

I am writing to express my appreciation and pride in the parents and players of the Senior American Legion Post 118. This season was particularly difficult but the team showed grit and fortitude as they battled through the season. They have made the towns of Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate proud. Connor Gibbons, Tim Kensinger and Rich Roach, the team captains, were the backbone of the team. With a rigorous schedule and many rainouts, the team came together and battled every pitch. The pitching staff; Tim Cavanaro, Brendan O'Connell, TJ Foley, Connor Gibbons, Chase Michaud and Chris Smith, kept us in every game. The catchers, TJ Foley and Chris Murphy, helped complete the battery. Infielders, Andrew Don, Terrance Doonan, Jamie Timothy and Colin Gideon Murphy, threw the glove around like nobody's business. Mickey Barry along with Jake Brady, were both picking machines at first base. The outfield led by captains, Tim Kensinger and Richard Roach, with the help of Liam Burke, Connor Goetz, and Chase Michaud, kept the balls off the ground.

We will miss the players who will be moving on to other endeavors; from Scituate Tim Kensinger, Chase Michaud, Richard Roach and from Cohasset, Chris Murphy and Jamie Timothy. Thank you for giving post 118 your very best.

I would be amiss if I did not acknowledge the coaching staff; Bob Barrows, who threw batting practice to the players every day and Patrick Stewart for being the on-field general. Thank you gentlemen. Without your support we would not be able to run a successful Senior American Legion team.

Sincerely,

Scott Arnold,
Post 118 Athletic Officer

TALKING GOLF

History is on his side

PAUL HARBER

If Mike Trostel's maternal grandmother, the late Phyllis Hughes, wasn't a big fan of Arnold Palmer some 50 years ago, he might not be the curator/historian of the U.S. Golf Association's Museum in Far Hills, N.J. today.

"Nobody in my family really plays golf," said the 29-year-old Pembroke native, who graduated from Sacred Heart High School in Kingston at the turn of this century.

"But from what I was told," Trostel continued, "my grandmother used to watch it on Saturday and Sunday afternoons along with my mother and they were big Arnold Palmer fans. If he was playing, they would be watching it on the television. But neither of them ever played golf."

Fast forward. Phyllis' daughter, the former Judy Hughes, married Paul Trostel. They had a son, Michael, and moved to Pembroke when Paul joined the Pembroke Police Department.

At 12, it was time for a young boy to venture out into the world and his mother convinced Mike to try his hand at being a caddie at The Country Club of Halifax. He also worked in the bag room.

"My mother would drop me off in the early morning and pick me up when it got dark," said Trostel.

It didn't take long for him to find it all to his liking.

"They have a great group at Halifax and there were several good junior players. There was always a group to play with when we had free time."

He said those informal golf matches taught him not only how to play golf, but how to focus and grind it out. If you had a bad hole, put it behind you.

And like all youngsters, the more he played, the better he got. He is self-taught and his biggest epiphany came on the second fairway at Halifax.

"I remember I couldn't hit a fairway wood to save my life," he said. "And then I hit one and then another. I realized it's all about confidence."

Soon he was good enough to play in Massachusetts Golf Association events, USGA Junior qualifiers and other prestigious events such as the Tarlow Invitational at Thorny Lea GC in Brockton and the Cronin Memorial Four-Ball at his home course.

His best memory is qualifying for the 2000 US Junior Amateur Championship at Pumpkin Ridge GC in Brandon, Ore., in 2000.

"I wasn't thinking about winning or anything, but the qualifier was at Allendale, a very nice course outside of New Bedford," remembers Trostel. "Hey, the entry fee was $30 and I got the chance to play three rounds at the course, a practice round and the 36-hole qualifying tournament."

Trostel played his best round to that point.

"I shot 1-over par 73 and that's when I felt I might have the chance to qualify. The second 18 holes were tougher and I had to grind it out. All those rounds at Halifax prepared me for that round. If I couldn't have grinded it out, I don't think I would have qualified."

Pumpkin Ridge was a real thrill. "Here I was, one of 156 juniors who qualified for the national championship. It was quite a feeling. There is nothing like it," said Trostel.

"Yeah, I didn't qualify for match play. But that didn't sour the trip," he added.

His family made the cross-country trek to the West Coast with him and when the tournament was all over, they went to Seattle.

"The Red Sox were in town and we went to Safeco Field to see them," he said. "Pedro Martinez was pitching for the Sox. It was great."

If playing in the US Junior was his fondest golfing memory, his top moment as a spectator was the 1999 Ryder Cup at The Country Club, where he'll be next week working the US Amateur.

"I got a ticket for the final round," said Trostel. "But I was supposed to work the bag room at Halifax and I couldn't find anybody to work my shift."

It was a difficult decision, but how many times can you see history in the making? He neglected work. "I found a pay phone at The Country Club – it shows you how long ago that was – and I called work. They said don't worry."

The club survived without him.

Already a history buff, Trostel got a good seat near the 17th green. "But it was frustrating. None of the matches were making it 17."

But it was a great day for the Americans. Trailing 10-6 going into the final day of 12 individual matches, Europe needed to win just four to keep the Cup.

Moments after Jim Furyk upset Segio Garcia to give the Americans their eighth point of the day, Justin Leonard and José María Olazábal approached the 17th green all square. If Leonard played Olazabal to a tie, America would win the Cup.

Leonard made his birdie-3 and the place went crazy. The behavior of the U.S. team was criticized after they raucously invaded the green while Olazábal was preparing to tackle a shorter putt, which would have kept European hopes alive, an incident which was viewed by Europeans as appalling sportsmanship. Veteran broadcaster Alistair Cooke described the incident as "a date that will live in infamy" in a Letter from America entitled, "The arrival of the golf hooligan."

And Trostel was there.

There was a lot more golf in his future.

He won a couple of IGA Insurance tournaments and was the No. 1 player for the Sacred Heart High School varsity in Kingston.

"We played a lot of Cape Cod schools and I'll never forget our first match at Farm Neck on Martha's Vineyard," said Trostel. "We hit our tee shots on the first hole and as we approached our balls, a ranger came out in a golf cart and ushered us off the course."

Why? Because President Jimmy Carter made an impromptu visit to Farm Neck for a quick round.

He was a good student and earned an Ouimet Scholarship, attending William & Mary as a history major.

One of his internships was at the United States Golf Association's Museum.

"It was supposed to be for three months and lasted a year," said Trostel, who then earned his Master's Degree at Lehigh (Pa.) University before returning to the USGA.

GOLF NOTEBOOK

Another title for Connolly

By Paul Harber
pharber@wickedlocal.com

A South Shore woman was going to win the WGAM's State Amateur and you knew that before the final pair teed it up last week at Framingham Country Club.

Former champion Tara Joy-Connelly of Cohasset Golf Club went against 19-year-old Mary Mulcahy of Hatherly Country Club in neighboring Scituate.

When the match was decided (Joy-Connelly beat Mulcahy, 4 and 3), there was plenty of celebration from the champion and no shame for the challenger.

Joy-Connolly is one of the consummate golfers in the region. It's has been and still is a major part of her life. She's been making birdies since before she can remember, tagging along with her father, the loveable Kenny Joy at Marshfield Country Club, and today, her husband, JP Connelly, serves as golf professional at their home course. (They must have terrific matches together on the golf course and I can't help wondering who gives who strokes in those matches and what they play for?)

She has won several WGAM titles. This is her second State Am, but she's been in the finals six times.

Six times – from 2005 to 2010 – she was the WGAM's Player of the Year.

Joy-Connelly also has dominated the WGAM's two other majors, the Edith Baker Trophy and Grace B. Keyes Cup, winning five Baker tournaments and four Keyes championships, which will be played Aug. 28-29 at Ipswich CC. She is the two-time defending champion of the Keyes Cup, which is the WGAM's State Stroke Play Championship. If she is victorious at Ipswich, she'll have won the WGAM Slam, all three majors, in a single season.

But what you have to admire about Joy-Connelly is her Bagger Vance integrity.

She was playing in the U.S. Women's Mid-Amateur in 2007. After the second round of stroke play, she realized she signed an incorrect scorecard later that night. She had a 4 on a hole, but signed for a 3. When she realized that, she eliminated herself from competition.

"It was totally avoidable, totally careless," Joy-Connelly told reporters at the time. The mistake wouldn't have made a difference in Joy-Connelly's standing. The medalist had shot 144, then came a 146. Instead of being solo third at 148, she would have been solo third at 149, because fourth place was 150. But she knew the rule – she had signed for a lower score than she had shot, which meant disqualification.

The USGA had made pairings for the next day's match play portion of the championship and it was too late to change them. So Joy-Connelly went into the record books as having "defaulted" in her first-round match.

"You can make a lot of mistakes on the golf course and recover," she said. "But you can't make a mistake on your scorecard."

Mulcahy has nothing to be ashamed of by finishing as runner-up. She is sort of a Tara Joy-Connelly in the making. She grew up on Hatherly's fairways where her father, John, is a passionate golfer. The two teamed up the last three years to win the MGA's Father-Daughter Championship.

They'll try to make it four-in-a-row Aug. 8 at the Golf Club of Cape Cod.

Mulcahy had a starry career at Scituate High School, where she was a four-time All-Scholastic and Super Teamer, won the MIAA Girls Individual Championship once, finished second twice and fourth as a freshman. She also played No. 1 on the boys' team from her sophomore to senior years.

She is a sophomore-to-be at the University of South Florida.

As a freshman at USF she recorded a 224 (+8) for the Knights at the UCF Challenge. At the New England's Women's Amateur at the Renaissance Club in Haverhill, Mulcahy finished 11th in a field of 72 golfers.

In last week's State Amateur, she beat Mary Gale, one of the state's premier veterans, to advance to the championship match.

Another local, Isabel Southard of Sharon, advanced to the semifinals of the WGAM State Amateur Championship and was eliminated by Joy-Connelly in the semifinals.

Southard, a Boston College sophomore-to-be and Blue Hill Country Club member, had a good week at the Women's Golf Association's of Massachusetts' State Championship. Another local golfer on Coach Drew Keyser's BC varsity is fellow sophomore-to-be Regan Simeone.

Khang at Women's Am

Rockland High School junior-to-be Megan Khang continues her three-week tour around America this week with the premier stop, the US Women's Amateur at the Country Club of Charleston in South Carolina. It began two weeks ago in Indiana, where she finished as a semifinalist as the US Girls' Junior Amateur; and last week she fashioned a top 10 finish at the PGA of America Junior National Championship in Virginia, just outside of Washington, DC. But Khang, 15, isn't playing with the kids in Carolina. The club is one of the oldest in the country, designed by the legendary Seth Raynor. Although she is playing with the grown-ups, who says she can't pull it off and win. Last year Lydia Ko, 15, of New Zealand, defeated Jaye Marie Green of Boca Raton, Fla., for the championship. Ko was coming off a victory in the US Girls' Amateur last year when she won the US Women's Amateur. Khang played in last year's US Women's Amateur at The Country Club in Cleveland, Ohio, and shot 76-73 to qualify for match play. But she rocked in the first round, losing 7 and 6 to Hy-Joo Kim of Korea

Hard luck on Cape Cod

When Kingston's Herbie Aikens of Pinehills Golf Club watches the U.S. Amateur Championship next week at The Country Club in Brookline, he'll probably wonder what could have been. Aikens nearly made the field. In the final qualifier for the national championship last week at Cape Cod National in Brewster, his dream ended in a three-hole playoff for the final berth in the field. Darkness was closing in and under the dim beam from the headlights of a car positioned so that there was enough light shining on the green, Chris Houston of Gilford, N.H., two-putted for a par and the win to gain the final available spot. Aikens, 31, was nearly out of it after the first 18 holes, shooting a 77 in the first round. But in the second 18 holes, Aikens played a different game, fashioning a course-record tying 5-under 67 to tie Houston for the third spot and they had to go into a playoff. Aikens and Houston ended up playing three holes before the 21-year-old Penn State sophomore was able to grind out the win. Aikens is the first alternate and Dennis Pines' member Bill Van Stratum is the second alternate after finishing at 146.

Junior Mints

Jake Shuman of Blue Hill CC fared well at the MGA State Junior Championship last week at the Essex County Club in Manchester-By-The-Sea. He finished third, two strokes behind champion Paul Lei of Ferncroft GC. Shuman had solid rounds of 73-71 and 69 to 3-over for the tournament. After his finish, he was still upbeat. "It's all about chasing the dream and turning that dream into a reality," he Tweeted. He has made a nice recovery since breaking his wrist in March 2012. He qualified for last month's US Junior Amateur at the Marts Camp Club in Trucklee, Calif., finished 38th in the stroke play qualifier to advance to match play, then was eliminated in the round of 32 . . . Hanover's Brandon Ridge had a solid showing last week at the State Junior. The 14-year-old Boston College High School sophomore-to-be golfer finished fourth in the Pre-Junior Division, four strokes behind champion Steven DiLisio of Salem CC . . . In the Boys' Division, Blue Hill CC's Andrew DiPetrillo was runner-up to champion Nicholas Cummings of Marlborough CC.

Final note

Sorry if we confused anyone last week by saying (meant to be tongue-in-cheek) that Shia LaBoufet won the 1913 U.S. Open. We know it was Francis Ouimet. Saying LaB won the 1913 U.S. Open is like saying Don Ameche invented the telephone, Spencer Tracy invented the electric light bulb or Charleton Heston was a great chariot race champion.

Maybe one of the most picturesque holes on the golf course, #15 at Atlantic Country Club can not be ignored or underestimated. Big hitters are tempted to go over the pond, but with a 300 yard carry and a huge bunker blocking the front, left side of the green, this is not the wisest approach. For most, all it takes is a long iron down the fairway to have the best look at this slightly elevated green. The hole coincides with the course layout, condition and overall quality; it's stunning and unique. #15 at is one of the eighteen hidden gems found at Atlantic Country Club (off exit #2 in Plymouth).

COLLEGE BASEBALL

Doonan pitches well for Brockton Rox

Cohasset hurler retires 14 straight in loss

By Mark Ducharme
The Patriot Ledger

No one could blame Rox manager Jud Thigpen if he asked for a bus and drove his team around Brockton before their next home game Thursday and pretended it was an away game.

The Rox have solid fan support, but their home record is eighth (10-14) out of nine teams in the league.

Brockton (23-24), who has former Cohasset American Legion Post 118 players Brendan Doonan, Jamie Faber, Jordan Berry and Rob McCunney on the roster, had a chance to improve their home record Tuesday night, but they squandered a couple of late-game scoring opportunities while Old Orchard Beach (23-27) cashed in on their chance to pull out a 3-1 win.

"We get runners on second and third with no outs in the eighth inning and could not get anyone in," Thigpen said. "You have to be able to score in that situation.

"I don't know what it is. We lead the league in attendance. Every night these fans go out and show good support. The bottom line was that both teams pitched well, and they had the big hits."

Raging Tide reliever Tyler Hill walked Ryan Tufts and Garrett Kelly lined a single to start the eighth inning. The two runners moved up to second and third on a passed ball, but Hill retired the next three hitters to get out of the jam without giving up a run.

The Rox had first and third in the eighth inning with two outs after Apolinar De la Cruz' second single of the game. However, with an 0-2 count on Tufts, the Rox tried to get De la Cruz caught in a rundown to get former Cohasset Post 118 American Legion star Rob McCunney to score from third, but De la Cruz was tagged out before McCunney crossed home plate.

"That one was on me," said Thigpen. "It was a play that we want to try with an 0-2 count, but we did not not execute. That was my call."

Old Orchard Beach's Phil Sciretta of Duxbury dealt the Rox the most damage. Two of the Raging Tide first baseman's three singles drove in runs. The other run came in on an error.

Brendan O'Brien of East Bridgewater had a sacrifice fly to score Kelly with the Rox' only run in the sixth inning.

The two teams took 50 minutes to play the first five innings. Both pitchers, Brockton's Brendan Doonan of Cohasset and Old Orchard Beach hurler Evan Brisentine, cruised through each team's order without blinking.

Doonan retired 14 in a row and made the hardest play during that stretch. He flagged down a hard one-hopper that was headed through the middle off the bat of Sam Canales and threw him out.

Doonan's streak ended with one out in the sixth inning when Old Orchard Beach second baseman Shane Busby looped a single into shallow center field.

Doonan has pitched very well for the Rox this season with a 2-3 record and 2.68 ERA out of the bullpen

Brisentine had a stretch where he retired 13 of 14 hitters. The only base runner was De la Cruz, who singled with two outs in the fifth inning.

A playoff opportunity is in the Rox' hands. The top six teams qualify for postseason play, and the Rox have a 21/2-game lead over seventh-place Torrington with five games left in the season.

Brockton has three games with the Martha's Vineyard Sharks and a makeup doubleheader Friday at Torrington.

"There is nothing guaranteed," Thigpen said. "The standings are changing every day."

PED

who thousands upon thousands of kids look up to are all frauds." It's bad for the game, but 100 times worse for the player's image. Do I want my kid to say, "hey, one day I want to be able to hit home runs like A-Rod." First, I hope she never idolizes Alex Rodriguez. Second, I'd have to point out that he cheated and essentially wouldn't have half as many home runs as he does. Lastly, there are so many other athletes to look up to, and of course there's no way to tell if they're drug-free, but you at least hope so.

Is there a trickle-down effect? Of course there is, and this goes from professional sports, down through college, into high school, and even down to middle schools. Yes, middle schools. A report came out a few years back about kids taking performance-enhancing drugs so they could make the varsity teams when they got to high school, and there were girls who took them to improve their image. I'm dead serious.

The question is why? The answer is simple. If professional athletes perform better than others, they're more than likely to get a significant pay increase. If college athletes excel, shatter records, put up ridiculous numbers, they're likely to get drafted into professional sports. And if you think some high school kids aren't taking PEDs, you're living in a dreamland. We'd like to think they're not, but a handful of them are at schools across the country. Do I have proof? Not firsthand, although I knew of several kids who played for opposing teams that took steroids when I was in high school. If it happened then, it's happening today.

This epidemic continues across the country and around the world. Just look at some tragedies over the last decade, all associated with steroid use. It's sad. When will it end? I'd like to see kids work their tails off in the gym, on and off the field, eat healthy, put all the effort into making themselves the best than they can be rather than someone who takes PEDs and does the minimum work in the gym to achieve the goal of becoming the strongest and the best player out on the field.

If there's anything good to come out of the Alex Rodriguez case, it's that the Florida High School Athletic Association (FHSAA) is going to great measures to assure that its student-athletes do not use PEDs. In a conference call earlier this week, FHSAA Executive Director Roger Dearing said: "There are claims that these performance-enhancing drugs have gotten into the hands of high-school athletes. This is a wakeup call. We need to make sure we are on vigilant guard to prevent this from happening."

On the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association's website, it states that: "The National Federation of State High School Associations (NFHS), the national service organization to all 50 state high school athletic and activity associations as well as the District of Columbia, strongly opposes the abuse of anabolic steroids and other performance-enhancing substances by high school student-athletes. Such use violates legal, ethical and competitive equity standards, and imposes unreasonable long-term health risks.

"The NFHS supports prohibitions by educational institutions, amateur and professional organizations and governmental regulators on the use of anabolic steroids and other controlled substances, except as specifically prescribed by physicians for therapeutic purposes. Anabolic, androgenic steroids are prohibited by all sports governing organizations."

This is great, but it's time for the MIAA and every high school athletic association in the country to take its own stand, implement its own system on how to handle this, and to inform and educate. The education part of it takes place at several schools, but it can't be drilled into the minds of kids enough. Like the FHSAA said: "we need to make sure we are on vigilant guard to prevent this from happening."

Next time you go to your local gym, take a look around. Think everyone has been drug-free throughout their lives? You're sadly mistaken. When bodybuilding competitions were the big trend amongst weightlifters in the 1960s, 70s, and 80s, most of those guys, and girls, were juiced beyond belief. You can work out 24/7 and never look like most of those men and women. I mean really, is it worth it? Yay, I got a trophy and some money for making my veins look like they're popping out of my skin and muscles looking like I've stored barrels in my thighs. It's not the least bit attractive either, in my opinion. But, hey, to each his own.

Am I a saint for never taking anabolic steroids or performance-enhancing drugs? I don't think anyone is a saint to be honest. I'm not putting myself on a pedestal for not taking PEDs. Of course I've tried legal supplements before, from the good-old fashion glass of milk with freshly cracked eggs (yeah, tastes as good as it sounds) to powders that claim to taste like chocolate (but don't), drinks that leave an aftertaste in your mouth for hours (no matter how many times you drink something else), and protein bars that taste like sawdust. Did I see results? Frankly, it's hard to tell. Did I build muscle mass from drinking Muscle Milk, or was it the lifting and cardio I did five days a week (which by the way has been nonexistent for a few years now). I can't prove or disprove it.

Speaking of Muscle Milk, I found it interesting that it was on banned substance lists for college sports at one time. That was until they made a "college friendly" formula. I had a friend who played college sports a few years back, and she used to down energy drinks before games. That was until the NCAA banned it. Red Bull may give you wings, but it'll also get you a suspension.

The bottom line is: be smart. Earn an athletic scholarship to college. Earn your way into the pros by working out and improving your skills in college. And if you get to the pros and want the big contract, when it comes to PEDs, just say no.

FOOTBALL

We are seeing this team improve. We had one of our best practices after the game with the Falcons. We will have a tough game on Saturday. The East Coast Ducks are the perennial power at that level."

Local fans will be pleased to know that they'll be able to watch them soon without having to travel.

"The good news is that we have three of our last four games at home," Sullivan said.

Sullivan feels that there have been bright spots from players in the first two games.

"Kevin Graden did not play that much for me at Norwell," said Sullivan. "He wrestled more for me than play football. Kevin played center at 160 pounds and went up against a 350 pound player and did not get pushed back. He also plays defensive tackle. We might have two of the smallest defensive tackles in the league. Mike Wolongevicz is our other defensive tackle and he is 5-8, 160 pounds. They both have played very well."

The opening game for the Chiefs was tough. They played a strong Mystic River Tigers team down to the end in their 22-0 loss.

"Our hallmark has been defense," said Sullivan. "Our numbers got to us. We had players going both ways in the game. The game was 2-0 late in the third quarter. Mystic River took over late in the third quarter and in the fourth quarter."

"We had a tough time getting our legs in our game against Mid Coast. It is a five hour ride to Knox, Maine. We played very well in the second half of the game. We played the game against their starters."

Gracia threw the first touchdown pass in the Chiefs brief history. He fired a 50-yard score to 6-7 wide receiver John Tewksbury.

He added an 8-yard scoring pass to Jared Levesque in the game. "We are getting more people on board," said Sullivan. "Our numbers are better."

Director of Admission, Regis College

Are you ready to take a ride into the college search process?

On Tuesday, Aug. 13, from 6 to 8 p.m., WickedLocal Media Solutions is presenting the New England College Fair at Regis College, 235 Wellesley St., Weston.

At the college fair, representatives will be ready to answer questions pertaining to their institutions. Visit http://media.wickedlocal.com/2013collegefair for a list of exhibitors.

If you have never navigated a college fair, be prepared to connect, engage in conversation and walk away with more information than you ever imagined. Attending a college fair is your opportunity to interview a college or university and do a preliminary evaluation of an institution's fit for you.

The objective of a college fair is to allow students and parents the opportunity to gain additional information. It is encouraged for students and families to come prepared. Here are a few tips:

Have a plan of action! Research colleges and universities you are interested in connecting with before arriving. Visit them during the fair to ask your specific questions. Be sure to save time for schools you may have never heard of. There are many different types of institutions, so it may be most beneficial to be open-minded. Some examples: what type of campus, large or small; what type of institution, public or private; geographic location, in state or out of state? The opportunities are endless. Find out what your best fit is.

Think about the five most important factors for you — and it's OK to think outside the box. It's not always about GPAs and SATs, but searching for qualities that are associated with your interests.

Parents, let your son or daughter be in the driver's seat. Recommendations are highly encouraged, but let them begin to take ownership of their destination. Your son or daughter may want to walk around and talk to college representative on their own.

Be calm. College representatives are very personable and are more than willing to help you navigate this college search process.

COURTESY PHOTO / REGIS COLLEGE

Advance preparation saves time. Make labels with your demographic information, which you can adhere to any institution's inquiry card. Labels should include: first and last name, address, city, state, zip, telephone number, email address, gender, date of birth, current high school/college you attend, year of high school graduation, academic and or athletic interest(s). Be sure to create a professional email address which would encompass a combination of your first and last name, i.e. J.Smith@gmail.com; Jsmith12@aol.com.

Bring a pen and a notebook with you so you can take notes on the different colleges. You don't want them to all blur together at the end of the evening. Consider bringing a bag for all of the materials you will be collecting in case the fair does not provide one.

Wear comfortable shoes and clothing. You will be walking, standing and talking.

At the end of the college fair, think collectively about the information you have gathered. Follow up with schools that meet your interest or if you have more questions, email the representative you met at the college fair. If possible, connect with a student at the institution, discuss your interested colleges and universities with your parents and secondary school counselor, arrange a campus visit and attend an open house or information session.

Keep in mind a college fair is just one of the many ways to conduct your college search. Enjoy the ride!

What are your college preferences?

Use this outline to help you narrow down your ideal college environment

WOMPATUCK STATE PARK

Become a Junior Ranger

Come to Wompatuck State Park for a fun and educational experience. All programs are free and open to the public. An adult must accompany children. Rain cancels. Reasonable accommodations available upon request. For more information, call the park interpreter at 781-749-7160 or visit www.mass.gov/dcr. The Visitor Center is at 204 Union St., Hingham.

Jr. Rangers - Protect Our Park —
Friday, Aug. 9, 3 to 4 p.m. The Jr. Ranger program captures the imagination of young people through activities that grow future stewards of the environment. Discuss types of pollution, litter and graffiti seen within the park and how it affects nature and beauty. Participants will view places where there is the most litter in the park and discuss what can be done to help stop the littering and graffiti. This free program is for children ages 8 through 12. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Meet at the Visitor Center. Rain or shine.

Sunset Hike — Friday, Aug. 9, 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. Take a hike in Wompatuck as the summer sun is setting and explore this serene time of day. Each week attendees will discover something different as they experience dusk in the park. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Benicio Kiley, 6, holds out his arm to show off a dragonfly they captured during the Swamp Tromp! at Wompatuck State Park on a recent Saturday.

From Forest Floor to Tree Tops — Saturday, Aug. 10, 9 to 10:30 a.m. Ever been walking through the woods and wondered "how old is that tree?" or "where did that mushroom come from?" Join the Park Interpreter for a walk through the woods to find out. Learn how to measure various tree circumferences and use growth rate tree charts to gain an approximate age of the trees. Participants will use several fallen trees to do a ring count, and talk about the decay of the forest floor, including the role of mushrooms – how they grow so quickly and why. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Swamp Tromp — Saturday, Aug. 10, 1 to 2 p.m. Use the nets and buckets provided to discover what lives in the waters of Wompatuck. Follow park road down to Boundary Pond where the group will meet.

Interpreter's Choice — Sunday, Aug. 11, 10 to 11 a.m. The Park Interpreter will lead this program based on observations made during the summer season. Check out cool discoveries, sites and more. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Healthy Heart Hike — Wednesday, Aug. 14, 9 to 10 a.m. Trails are the heart of the parks and DCR wants them to be the heart of a healthy lifestyle. This program offers a way to have fun and get exercise in a low cost way. People are welcome to join others on a guided recreational hike along the Healthy Heart Trail at Wompatuck State Park. The forested trail is about 1.5 miles long. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Native American & Colonial Life at Wompatuck — Thursday, Aug. 15, 9 to 10:15 a.m. This walk will begin with a visit to the 19th Century Triphammer Pond mill site and discussion of the pre-colonial stones wall that still exist today – these are some of the oldest existing stone walls in the country. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Rocks in the Park Hike — Saturday, Aug. 17, 9 to 11 a.m. Explore the glacial rock fields of Wompatuck and old growth forests in a less explored part of the park as hikers make their way to Burbank Boulder, Wompatuck Park's largest glacial erratic. This hike covers about 4 miles of moderately difficult trails. Wear sturdy shoes and bring water. Meet at Visitor Center.

What is a Bug? — Sunday, Aug. 18, 10 to 11 a.m. Find out what type of insects live in the park. Using nets and hand lenses, participants will observe them in the lawns, fields and forests of Wompatuck. Become an insect as the group learns about their life cycles through observation. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Healthy Heart Hike — Wednesday, Aug. 21, 9 to 10 a.m. Trails are the heart of the parks and DCR wants them to be the heart of a healthy lifestyle. This program offers a way to have fun and get exercise in a low cost way. People are welcome to join others on a guided recreational hike along the Healthy Heart Trail at Wompatuck State Park. The forested trail is about 1.5 miles long. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Changes in the Landscape: Wompatuck Today — Thursday, Aug. 22, 9 to 10:15 a.m. Explore on foot the unique history of Wompatuck State Park. Learn of the development of Wompatuck, in the 1960s as a state park and valuable natural resource. Meet at the Visitor Center.

Participants will view places where there is the most litter in the park and discuss what can be done to help stop the littering and graffiti. This free program is for children ages 8 through 12.

FOOD

WISE TO THE WORD

ARUGULA: A dark green salad leaf with a slightly bitter, mustardy, peppery flavor. Arugula is a Mediterranean plant – the Romans claimed it was an aphrodisiac – that also grows wild in Asia and has become increasingly popular in the U.S. over the past decade. — Cookthink.com

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

BRANDPOINT

Fall produce

Fall is a great time to grow your own produce Some tips to get you started:

- Start with transplants rather than seeds. You'll be able to harvest sooner and skip the volatile, sometimes unsuccessful, seed-starting process.
- Choose cool crops that your family likes to eat. Popular, healthy fall favorites include kale, broccoli, cabbage and romaine lettuce.
- Remove any garden debris and weeds before you get planting, and loosen compacted soil. Add a 2-inch layer of bagged compost and spread a balanced fertilizer for added nutrients.
- Consider planting in raised beds or containers. Most vegetables need at least six hours of sun per day; keep that in mind when determining location.
- Plants will need an inch of moisture per week, either through rain or supplemental watering. When frost threatens, cover plants with floating row cover, cold frame or a cloche.

EASY RECIPE

Mint Chocolate Chimps

- 2 chocolate sandwich cookies or chocolate wafer cookies
- Red decorating icing
- Black decorating icing
- 1/2 cup Breyers BLASTS! Girl Scout Cookies Thin Mints
- 2 small round candies

Cut 1 cookie in half; set aside.

Using red decorating icing, draw a mouth on the lower half of other cookie. Using black decorating icing, draw two nostrils on top half of same cookie.

Place ice cream scoop on plate. Place reserved cookie halves on top sides of ice cream to make ears. Place whole cookie on lower half of ice cream to make face. Place round candies above cookie and add two dots of black decorating icing to make eyes.

Serve immediately or freeze until ready to eat.

THE DISH ON...

"The Elliott Homestead: From Scratch: Traditional, whole-foods dishes for easy, everyday meals," by Shaye Marie Elliott

Think glorious foods from scratch are impossible? Think again.

"From Scratch" is a breath of fresh air when it comes to learning how to traditionally prepare and cook nutritious food.

Elliott does not disappoint in her recipes, and this cookbook reads like a letter from a close friend.

These meals are easily prepared and, yes, easily devoured.

Popcorn

Put some pop in your summer party

By Kathryn Rem
More Content Now

When it comes to summer entertaining, popcorn is a casual, easy-to-make and inexpensive snack.

"It's versatile. Your guests can season it to suit their tastes," said Wendy Boersema-Rappel, spokeswoman for the Chicago-based Popcorn Board, a nonprofit funded by U.S. popcorn processors.

Consider, for example, creating a popcorn bar at a backyard party.

"Pop up a big batch of popcorn, put it in a large bucket and set out containers with a variety of candies, fruits, nuts and seasonings for guests," Boersema-Rappel said.

Add-ins might include M&M's, gummy candies, pretzels, peanuts, cashews, raisins, dates, coconut flakes, dried banana chips, granola or cereal pieces. Toppings to consider: brown sugar-cinnamon, garlic salt, parmesan cheese, lemon pepper, cumin, thyme or taco or barbecue seasoning.

The seasonings can be sprinkled on dry, or mixed with butter or buttery spray for better adhesion.

To further dress up popcorn served to guests, think about putting it in unusual or festive containers.

"Go to the dollar store and buy some small beach pails. Or roll decorative paper into cones to hold the popcorn," said Boersema-Rappel. If serving the snack in baskets, line them with colorful napkins. Think about using clean vases, bags and boxes as serving bowls.

Popcorn, a whole grain, costs a few cents per serving and is figure-friendly. A cup of air-popped corn has 31 calories, while a cup of oil-popped corn has 55 calories.

For stovetop popping, heat 1/3 cup oil in a 3- to 4-quart pan to 400 to 460 degrees (if the oil smokes, it's too hot). Test the oil on a couple of kernels. When they pop, add popcorn to cover the bottom of the pan, one kernel deep. Cover the pan and shake to evenly spread the oil. When the popping begins to slow, remove the pan from the stovetop. The heated oil will pop the remaining kernels.

Recipes are from the Popcorn Board.

Adobo and Roasted Peanut Popcorn

Makes 4 quarts

- 4 quarts unbuttered and unsalted popcorn (air-popped)
- 1/4 cup peanuts
- 1 egg white
- 2 T sugar
- 1 T adobo sauce (from one 7-ounce can chipotle chiles in adobo sauce; reserve chiles for other use) or 1 T chipotle pepper sauce
- 1/4 t salt

Preheat oven to 300 F. Line large, rimmed baking sheet with parchment paper (or foil sprayed with cooking spray). Spread popcorn and peanuts onto prepared baking sheet.

In small bowl, whisk together egg white, sugar, adobo sauce and salt until foamy.

Pour over popcorn and toss to coat evenly.

Bake 20 minutes, stirring once midway through baking time. Cool completely before storing in airtight container.

Adobo and Roasted Peanut Popcorn.

Ballpark Popcorn Crunch

Makes 3 quarts

- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 3 quarts unsalted popped popcorn
- 1 cup chopped walnuts

Cream together butter and brown sugar till light and fluffy.

In a separate bowl, toss popcorn and walnuts. Add creamed mixture to popcorn and nuts. Combine until coated. Spread on a large baking sheet in a single layer. Bake in 350 F oven for 10 minutes or until crisp.

Ballpark Popcorn Crunch. POPCORN BOARD PHOTOS

Apricot Cherry Popcorn Squares.

Apricot Cherry Popcorn Squares

Makes 12 servings

- 10 cups air-popped popcorn
- 3/4 cup dried cherries
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup + 2 T water
- 1/2 cup sugar-free apricot preserves
- 1/4 cup light corn syrup
- 1/2 t lemon juice

Combine popcorn and cherries in large bowl.

Combine sugar, water, preserves, corn syrup and lemon juice in small saucepan; bring to a boil and cook, stirring constantly, until sugar dissolves. Cook until mixture forms thick, "ropy" threads that drip from the spoon.

Pour slowly over popped popcorn and mix thoroughly.

Spray 13-by-9-inch baking dish with cooking spray. Press mixture into baking dish and cool completely before cutting and serving.

Coconut Monkey Mix

Makes 7 cups

- 1 cup flaked coconut (unsweetened or sweetened)
- 6 cups popped popcorn
- 1 T butter or margarine, melted
- 1 t sugar
- 1/8 t salt
- Dash of nutmeg
- 1 cup dried banana chips

Preheat oven to 325 F.

Spread coconut in 13-by-9-inch baking pan, breaking up any clumps as needed. Bake 10 minutes or until edges of coconut begin to brown.

Spread popcorn over coconut and sprinkle with melted butter; toss. Sprinkle popcorn mixture with sugar, salt and nutmeg; toss. Bake 5 minutes longer and toss with banana chips.

Serve immediately or cool and store in an airtight container.

Zucchini, peppers add perk from the garden

If you don't get busy eating your zucchini, the fingers of squash will become torpedo-size almost overnight.

Sausage-stuffed zukes are a tasty consumer of your crop in a way beyond sautéing and salads. Your carved-out zucchini halves become boats for a cargo of browned sausage, mushrooms and onions in a sour-cream sauce.

Zucchini Boats

Serves 4 to 6

- 4 medium zucchini
- 3/4 pound cup bulk Italian sausage, hot or sweet
- 1/2 cup fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 1/4 cup onions, chopped
- 1 t basil, dried

JIM HILLIBISH

- 1 clove garlic, minced
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1/2 cup sour cream or more
- 4 slices mozzarella or provolone cheese
- 2 T parsley, fresh, chopped

Slice zucchini in halves lengthwise. Carve out flesh with a teaspoon or melon baller. Chop flesh and add mushrooms, onions and basil.

Zucchini Boats. TASTEOFHOME.COM

Brown sausage in olive oil. Add zucchini-mushroom mix. Saute until tender. Remove from heat and add sour cream, blending fully.

Fill each zucchini boat with sausage mixture. Place in an oiled baking dish. Bake 20 minutes, covered, at 350 F. Uncover, add cheese and continue to bake until melted. Plate and garnish with parsley.

Smoky, sweet with roasted peppers

The chicken is done, but your grill begs for more work. Roasting bell peppers will keep it busy as your patio guests admire your culinary skills.

Our goal is to bring out and blacken the inherent sugars in peppers, enhancing their flavor. At the same time, adding a smoky complexity turns common peppers into a memorable side dish.

Wash your peppers, any color, and halve them. Remove the seeds, core and membrane. Slightly flatten each half with a chef's knife.

Place the halves skin side down over the heat source on your grill. Roast until the skins get black. Then place the peppers into a paper bag and seal. In 10 to 15 minutes, they will steam cook. Remove and slip off the charred skins.

Slice in strips and place on burgers or garnish corn or green beans. Use anywhere you desire a very sweet, smoked pepper flavor.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 19, 2013

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Impatience with those who don't keep up with you can cause resistance, which, in turn, can lead to more delays. Best to be helpful and supportive if you want results.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surprise announcement from a colleague could put you on the defensive. Gather your facts and respond. You'll soon find the situation shifting in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Time spent away from a project pays off with a new awareness of options you hadn't considered before. Weigh them carefully before deciding which to choose.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Consider confronting that personal conflict while there's still time to work things out. A delay can cause more problems. A longtime colleague might offer to mediate.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some emerging matters could impede the Lion's progress in completing an important project. Best advice: Deal with them now, before they can create costly delays.

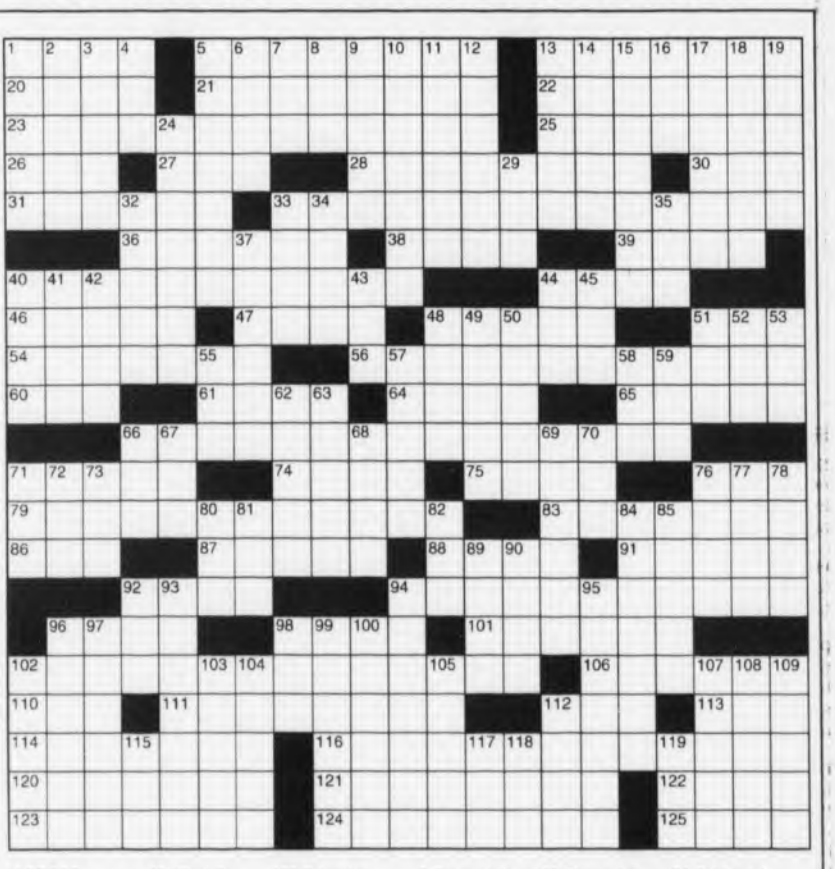
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your aspect continues to favor an expanding vista. This could be a good time to make a career move, and taking an out-of-town job could be a good way to do it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Disruptive family disputes need to be settled so that everyone can move on. Avoid assuming this burden alone, though. Ask for — no, demand — help with this problem.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience is called for as you await word on an important workplace situation. A personal circumstance, however, could benefit by your taking immediate action.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't lose confidence in yourself. Those doubters are likely to back off if you demand they show solid proof why they think your ideas won't work.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A temporary setback might cause the usually sure-footed Goat some unsettling moments. But keep going. The path ahead gets easier as you move forward.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) There's welcome news from the workplace. There also could be good news involving a relationship that has long held a special meaning for you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still need to cut some lingering ties to a situation that no longer has the appeal it once held. In the meantime, you can start to explore other opportunities.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles?

Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off. so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Summer officers police beaches, bridges and more

By Erin Dale

You might see them around Cohasset, patrolling the streets, beaches and bridges on mountain bikes.

The summer officers are back. This year, Cohasset hired four special officers to provide summer patrols – conducting parking enforcement, clearing bridge jumpers, bicycle patrols and more – but currently employ three (one officer was hired by the Rhode Island State Police in July). The officers started working in Cohasset in June and work during summer "peak periods," Thursday through Sunday.

The summer officer program has been around since 1994 and was started by former Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan. Current acting chief William Quigley was the first summer officer hired. He started in the summer of 1995 and became a full-time officer that December.

The program continued through 2004; then in 2005, the scope of the program changed to focus on hiring traffic details, according to Quigley. In the summer of 2012, a summer officer was hired to handle summer duties such as parking tickets and bridge jumpers.

"The program is self-supporting and brings a much higher level of safety to our town."
Acting Police Chief William Quigley

"We totally refocused the program last summer," said Quigley. "We definitely had a need for it, and the residents like it."

This year, the police department expanded the program by hiring more summer help. Quigley said that Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has been "very supportive of the program," approving the $8,000 to fund the program for the 12 weeks of summer.

So far, the program has already paid for itself, and then some. Quigley reported that summer officers have issued $9,000 in parking violations at Sandy Beach,

Fee hike

Full-day kindergarten enrollment in flux

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The cost for kindergarten tuition went up this year, said Superintendent Barbara Cataldo.

Cataldo said that the fee for full-day kindergarten increased from $2,500 last year to $3,000 this year. She explained that the fees go toward covering the costs of the program.

The increase was voted on by the School Committee. Cataldo said that the Cohasset district decided to raise its fees commensurate with kindergarten costs in surrounding communities.

"We compared ourselves to our neighbors, and we're very much in the middle of the pack," said Cataldo.

The superintendent also said that the costs of running the program increased. "The price of everything else was going up," said Cataldo. "We are trying to make the kindergarten program self-sustaining."

There was some confusion among parents who received notice in the mail regarding the deposit for tuition payments, but this was cleared up at the Wednesday (Aug. 7) School Committee meeting.

Parents were asked to deposit $300 and pay off the remaining $2,700 throughout the school year, said Cataldo. Anyone who paid more in advance was offered credit toward future payments, or the district would pay the difference until the next payment was due.

Cataldo said one parent opted to pay more up front, which led to some initial confusion among other parents that has since been resolved.

The full-day kindergarten program includes five classrooms with between 21 and

Cohasset mourns 9-year-old

Dylan was a smart, charming, musical boy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A 9-year-old Cohasset boy was killed Sunday afternoon in a tragic accident while vacationing with his family in Maine. The community that knows and loves him is in mourning this week.

The news of Dylan Gold's passing sent waves of shock and sadness throughout the Cohasset community. Several friends and neighbors have shown an outpouring of love and support for the Gold family, sharing their thoughts and memories of Dylan through phone calls and emails to the Mariner.

"The thing I will always remember about Dylan was his magnetic smile."
Kelly Grech, family friend

Ken Cook, a neighbor of the Golds' on Pond Street, said Dylan was a "charming little boy" with an "observant, inquisitive nature." Cook attributes this to parents Allison and Howard, who work in the medical field. Allison is a nurse and Howard a physician at Boston's Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

Cook remembers Dylan as a leader and problem-solver, and a mentor to little brother Wyatt, 6.

"Dylan was always ready to stop what he was doing to help Wyatt learn things," said Cook.

Family friends Maite Diaz and Polly Duxbury both said that Dylan was already a skilled guitarist, and teaching his friends how to play. He was also an athlete, playing soccer and lacrosse.

Kelly Grech recalled Dylan's days participating in the town recreation department's running club.

"The thing I will always remember about Dylan was his magnetic smile," said Grech.

Dylan was struck by an out-of-control vehicle in St. George, Maine, while he was waiting on a wharf to board a ferry with his mother and younger brother.

His mother, Allison, 50, and brother Wyatt, 6, were also hit and hospitalized at the Maine Medical Center. Wyatt's condition was reported as fair on Monday. As of press time, Allison was in critical care. According to reports, the boys' father, Howard, was not harmed.

Cheryl Torgerson, 61, of New York City, was driving the car that struck members

COHASSET RECREATION

Tickets available for Red Sox game!

What: What better way to see the first place Red Sox than a $38 ticket price that includes a round trip ride to Fenway? No worries about traffic or parking, let the bus driver focus on driving while you talk with friends and make some new ones. It's the perfect way to gather a large group and enjoy a summer night at the Park, and even more fun if the Sox are still in first place on game day!

Details: Cohasset Recreation still has tickets available for Tuesday, August 27th, Red Sox vs. the Baltimore Orioles. The bus leaves from Cohasset High School at 7:10 p.m. and returns to Cohasset at 11 p.m. It's the perfect time to get a large group of people together for a night out. This is 5th season of bringing Cohasset and friends to the Red Sox.

Quote: "This is a great opportunity for a larger group to sit with each other, as we can keep families and friends together in several rows, directly above and below one another, instead of being seated in one long row, in which they lose the ability to interact and truly enjoy the game as a group," says Cohasset Recreation Director, Ted Carroll. "It's a great time for family reunions, team get-togethers or just a large group of friends who all want to enjoy a summer night out at Fenway."

More: Children under 16 must be accompanied by an adult. Register On-line at cohassetrec.com or call the office at 781-383-4109 if you have any questions.

It should be no surprise that the lettering on this Cohasset Recreation T-shirt has the familiar Red Sox style, as the Rec is full of Sox fans! PHOTO/LINDA FECHTER

Billy Mack

Name: Billy Mack.

Occupation: Head instructor at the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Best day of your life: That's a tough one but in the last year I'd say getting into Umass Amherst.

Best trip: Cohasset Scituate French exchange back in 2010.

Favorite season: Fall because of football and the cooler weather.

Favorite holiday: Definitely Christmas.

Favorite junk food: Cup'O'noodles.

Best book: "Start Sailing Right".

Best movie: Every movie with Will Ferrell in it.

Best TV show: Overall I'd say "Lost," but right now probably "Breaking Bad."

Best artist: Dave Matthews Band.

Pet peeve: Laziness and when people don't return the "boater wave".

Most embarrassing moment: Anytime someone catches me sleep talking, yeah that's usually pretty embarrassing.

Goal: To get on the show "Survivor" before they cancel it.

Biggest worry: Having "Survivor" get canceled before I get to be on it.

Best part of Cohasset: The harbor, easily.

Historical Society museums open

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Wedding bus motorcycle collide

A motorcyclist was taken to South Shore Hospital with leg injuries Saturday (Aug. 10) after his bike collided with a school bus on Atlantic Avenue at 4:41 p.m., police said.

"We're thankful that the accident was not more serious than it was," Acting Cohasset Police Chief William Quigley said. "Motorcyclists don't fare well against a car, never mind a school bus."

At about 4:40 p.m. a 19-year-old Scituate man was coming around a bend on Atlantic Avenue when the bus hit his motorcycle at the Lothrop Lane intersection, police said.

Witnesses said the bus was over the road's yellow line when it collided with the motorcycle.

The driver of the bus, a 48-year-old Randolph woman, was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes.

Quigley said the bus was carrying a wedding party at the time of the crash. The wedding party had chartered the bus from Local Motion Inc. of Braintree to shuttle people from a house on Atlantic Avenue to the ceremony and reception at the Red Lion Inn.

Intoxication leads to protective custody

Splitting up

Police responded to a report of a domestic disturbance in the Avalon complex on Monday (Aug. 5) around 4:50 p.m. When they arrived they encountered a 52-year-old woman, who was lying on the grass and talking on the phone. Police said she appeared to be heavily intoxicated. Police spoke with the 55-year-old man inside the unit who explained they were splitting up and she had arrived in an intoxicated state to retrieve some of her belongings. A verbal argument ensued but there was no physical altercation.

The officers went out to talk to the woman, who by that time had passed out. The ambulance was called and she was transported to South Shore Hospital because of her level of intoxication.

Intoxicated

A 42-year-old Scituate woman who was found intoxicated sitting near a group of mailboxes at the Avalon complex was taken into protective custody on Friday (Aug. 9) around 6:30 p.m. Police said she was unable to talk and answer questions clearly.

She was taken to the station in protective custody but passed out and was then taken by ambulance to South Shore Hospital. It was not determined why she was in Cohasset.

Wedding guest

Police took a 21-year-old wedding guest into protective custody for intoxication on Saturday (Aug. 10) around 9:40 p.m. on Border Street near Government Island. The woman had been attending a wedding reception at the Lightkeepers Residence when she had gotten into a verbal argument with a family member and left.

Police did not believe she could take care of herself due to her intoxication. Family members at the Lightkeepers did not want to deal with her so she was taken to the station in protective custody, police said.

Suspicious man approaches two girls jumping off bridge

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Two 12-year-old girls reported to one of the girl's mothers, who picked them up at the harbor, that a strange man had made them feel uncomfortable while they were jumping off the Border Street bridge last Thursday afternoon. The girls said the man, who was in a black car and had a tattoo on his forearm, had repeatedly egged the girls on to jump off the bridge. The first time the girls jumped, they climbed out near the harbormaster's dock and the second time by the sailing club. When the girls returned to the bridge the second time, the man had left but had given $15 to some boys on the bridge to give them for him.

The mother drove to the police station where the money is being held in custody as evidence, police said. Police put out a description of the man and the car he was driving to area police departments.

OUI arrest

A 55-year-old Pembroke man was arrested for drunken driving following a rear-end accident on Route 3A near Route 228 on Friday afternoon (Aug. 9).

Police said a 44-year-old Cohasset man called police to report the blue Pontiac G-6 that he had seen being driven erratically had rear-ended his 2004 GMC van and taken off.

Police stopped the Pontiac near Stop & Shop and in talking with the operator determined he was showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication. Following a series of field sobriety tests, he was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol; driving to endanger and leaving the scene after causing property damage.

The Pembroke man spent two days in jail at the Cohasset station before being bailed, police said.

Marijuana

Police sent a 64-year-old North Carolina man on his way after learning that he had been hanging around and sleeping in his car overnight at Wheelwright Park last week. In talking to the man, whose car was an Audi A-4, police detected the odor of burnt marijuana. Further investigation revealed a small package of marijuana in his possession. The Scituate K-9 that is trained in drug detection was called to check for more drugs, but none were found.

Police seized the marijuana and issued the Knotts Island, N.C., man a $100 civil citation for possession of an ounce or less of marijuana. Police said they do not think he will be returning to the park.

Altercation

Two men, both in their 60s, will have the opportunity to explain at Quincy District Court what happened at Wompatuck State Park on Ocean Street on Wednesday (Aug. 7) that resulted in one of the men hitting the other in the head over a dog incident.

A 62-year-old Cohasset resident was walking his dogs unleashed when they nipped at the ankles of a 66-year-old Cohasset man who was riding his bike, police said.

The 66-year-old told police the other man then kicked at his dogs and when he chased him to find out why, got off his bike and punched him in the head, knocking him down. That man also alleged the cyclist kicked him on his side. The dog walker asked the cyclist for his name and called police.

Police located the cyclist who said the dog walker charged at him after he kicked at the dogs so he punched him in self-defense. He denied kicking him. The cyclist is being summonsed to court for assault and battery on a person over 60, police said.

Moved out

Police responded to a home in the Beechwood section of town on Sunday (Aug. 11) around 9:50 p.m. where a young man's father and his girlfriend had told the 26-year-old it was time for him to move out and be on his own. The 57-year-old girlfriend, who lives at the home with her 56-year-old boyfriend, called police in a highly intoxicated state, police said.

Police went to the son's room where they found the TV blaring. He told police he had turned up the TV to drown out the sounds of his father and the girlfriend having sex under his window on the back deck.

The couple gave the son a verbal no trespass order and he moved out that night, police said. He was advised before picking up the rest of his belongings to stop by the station first so an officer could stand by while he does so.

Backed into

Police responded to a two-car accident at Sankey Road and Summer Street at 12:53 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 6). A 2005 Volvo sedan, operated by a 33-year-old Cohasset woman, had stopped on Summer Street to turn onto Sankey Road when a 2007 Ford pick-up truck backed into her, police said.

Police said the pick-up, which was being operated by a 58-year-old Scituate man, was backing out of a driveway and hit the side of Government Island and Parker Avenue.

"The program is self-supporting and brings a much higher level of safety to our town," said Quigley.

Having summer officers also frees up regular officers to focus on other incidents. If necessary, summer officers can also assist with other incidents, said Quigley.

To work as a summer officer, one must be a graduate of at least the Reserve/Intermittent Police Academy and have received over 242 hours of basic police training (regular police officers have had over 800 hours of basic training). Summer officers are also certified as First Responders and in CPR, firearms, and use of force.

The Cohasset Special Officer Force started the police careers of many full-time Cohasset officers, including Acting Chief Quigley, Detective James McLean, Sergeant Christy Tarantino, Officer Chris Dias, Officer Mike Lopes, Officer Brian Peebles, Officer Harrison Schmidt, Officer Jay St. Ives, and Officer Greg Taylor.

The Mariner met two of the summer officers this week, and asked about their experience working in Cohasset this summer.

Bohan Bukenik, an auxiliary police officer in Attleboro, said that he enjoys working with the Cohasset P.D.

"Everybody's really nice; it's a good group of guys," said Bukenik. "It feels more like a family."

Cohasset's small size has something to do with that, he added. "You get to know everybody in the department. In a big department you don't have the time, and might not run into everybody."

Bukenik, along with summer officer Gerald Murphy, said he would love to work in Cohasset if given the opportunity.

"I definitely would," said Murphy. "I like it here."

This is Murphy's first experience working as an officer. Both he and Bukenik enjoy patrolling the town on bike.

"You see a lot more and interact more with people on the bike than in a car," said Bukenik.

"It's a good way to meet people in the community," Murphy added.

It's been a busy summer so far for the two officers, along with third summer patrolman, Michael Bolze of Hingham.

One constant during their shifts — in Cohasset, there will always be bridge jumpers.

"They're always up there," said Bukenik. "When you're not busy, you can always drive by the bridge."

Bridge jumpers "keep you busy," said Murphy. Both officers added that in the popular coastal destination that is Cohasset, there is rarely any down time.

"There's always something to do," said Bukenik. "Whoever says there's nothing to do..."

"They don't work here," Murphy finished.

25 students, with five full-time teachers. There has been a jump in enrollment this year, with several families being placed on a wait list. Those who have been waitlisted have a choice between full-day and half-day kindergarten, said Cataldo. The half-day class has 17 students enrolled so far.

The enrollment numbers have not yet been finalized, however, Cataldo added. "The numbers are fluctuating."

There could be a rush before the end of August, which is what happened last year. "The last week of [August] is so busy," the superintendent said.

The first day of school is Tuesday, September 3.

of the Gold family and one other pedestrian, Jonathan Coggeshall, 68, of Maine. Torgerson also hit several other vehicles.

Reports indicate that Torgerson was in shock after the incident, but later thought her gas pedal was stuck. Police are investigating what caused her to lose control of her car.

The Golds were heading to their vacation spot in Monhegan Island, where friends say they have spent many summers.

Dylan was homeschooled, Cohasset Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that she did not know the Gold family, but expressed sadness for their loss.

"It's so tragic," Cataldo said, adding that the schools will implement grief counseling should the need arise at the start of the school year.

Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara said that she is interested in having counseling in place "for those children who are going to be so deeply affected" by Dylan's passing.

"I'm sure he must have had some close friendships with Deer Hill students," said deChiara.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Knerl said he was sad to learn of the accident.

"Obviously the town is in shock, and our hearts go out to the family," said Knerl.

Acting Police Chief William Quigley said that his department is there to help the Gold family in any way they can.

"It's so sad, and the thoughts and prayers of every member of the Cohasset Police Department are with the Golds; we are all stunned by this horrible news," said Quigley. "The police department and the entire community will be there to support the Golds."

Several friends and neighbors have shared stories and memories of Dylan with the Mariner, and we would like to pay tribute to his life in next week's paper. If you would like to share with us, please send an email to reporter Erin Dale at edale@wickedlocal.com by noon on Wednesday, Aug. 21.

Town ends fiscal year with surplus

By Erin Dale

There is good financial news for the town of Cohasset — the fiscal year has ended with a surplus.

The town is financially stable, said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, attributing this success to the town's Financial Director, Mary Gallagher, and the town department heads and support staff for their dedication in helping to implement new policies, procedures, and other overdue reforms.

"The reforms we have instituted and the Financial Management Policies that Town Meeting voted have clearly paid off for the benefit of the Cohasset taxpayers," Milanoski said. "We as a town government are better run, more transparent, and accountable than in past years."

In closing out the towns books for second year in a row, Cohasset has shown an estimated surplus with over $1.25 million for fiscal year 2013 on top of the $958,508 for FY12. This is an increase over the previous fiscal year, FY11, which ended with a deficit of $82,490, said Milanoski.

The town manager added that there is no need to supplement the water department's enterprise fund this year, unlike previous years due to cash flow and other structural issues that have since been resolved. With the joint management of the water and sewer commissioners and the town manager, the water Enterprise fund is estimated to have a surplus of $300,000 and the sewer enterprise fund a surplus of $400,000.

Town officials will continue working toward achieving an AAA bond rating, the highest rating available, Milanoski said.

Town officials will continue working toward achieving an AAA bond rating, the highest rating available, Milanoski said. The town's bond rating was recently increased to AA+ with a positive outlook. The town manager said he would like to invest the town's surplus in capital needs and obligations to fund the town's outstanding Other Post-Employment Benefits (OPEB) liability (which is close to $33 million).

Perhaps most importantly, said Milanoski, the town will be able to meet its Stabilization Fund objective, as voted by Town Meeting, ahead of schedule thanks to the surplus. The fund currently has over $3.5 million and needs around $500,000 more to reach the town's objective of putting 5 percent of the town's $36 million budget in stabilization, said Milanoski.

Milanoski said that he will present the proposed sustainable town-wide budget, based on a five-year forecast that provides the level of service the town can continue to afford without the need for an override, at the Tuesday, Aug. 20 Board of Selectmen meeting. Following the town's budget process, the selectmen will weigh in on the budget in September; the Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee and Budget Planning Group will also have a chance to sharpen their pencils before the budget is finalized.

In a budget memo, the town manager thanked all who worked hard to achieve this financial success. "On behalf of the staff and committees members that support transparent and accountable good government, I want to thank you for your continued efforts to make Cohasset a well-run organization as we reach another milestone memorizing our financial and good government successes," he stated.

the Volvo. The truck operator's view was obstructed and he did not see the Volvo, police said. Neither vehicle was towed; there were no injuries and no citations were issued.

Car keys

An 18-year-old Cohasset teen got into a dispute with his parents last Friday morning (Aug. 9) around 6:45 a.m. over the car keys. When police arrived, the teen was outside and was calm and cooperative, police said. In speaking with the parents, police learned their son was not going to be allowed to drive the vehicle because he left it in a mess. The parents also said he had been abusing alcohol and marijuana and was having, what the parents' described as a tantrum, over the keys.
